COCKRAN ON SLAVEHOLDERS -- Will you submit to this conspiracy between the professional farmers, the farmers who cultivate the quarrels of their neighbhrs, farmers who labor with their jaws, Populist agitators of the West, and the unreconciled slave-holders of the South? This is a conspiracy between professional farmers, who want to pay low wages, and the unreconciled slave-holders, who would like to pay no wages at all. - (Extract from the speech of Bourke Cockran, delivered in New York August 18th.)

ABSURD REASONING.

In his letter of acceptance Mr. McKinley, referring and in answer to the contention of the free silver men that the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 would make the silver dollar the equal of the gold dollar, says suppose we admit this, how would that benefit the mass of the people, for that kind of a dollar would not be any "easier to get" than the dollar is now. In his speech at Carnegie Hall, New York, ex-President Harrison said substantially the same thing. Reduced to its essence this means, if it means anything, that it doesn't make any difference whether there be much or little money in circulation, and that it is as "easy to get" money when the per capita circulation is $5 as when it is $50. Orator Cockran said the same thing when he was answering Mr. Bryan's speech. They all say it, for this is one of their stock absurdities which they pass off for argument.

And yet these gentlemen are continually parading the large volume of money we have in circulation, and give this as one of the evidences of our progressiveness and prosperity. There is not one of them who does not profess to be in favor of bimetallism and of the unlimited coinage of silver, if we can get an agreement between the leading commercial nations as to the ratio for coinage. Their reason for insisting upon an international understanding is to secure the permanent maintenance of the value of the silver coins and to prevent their depreciation, which they contend would be the result. if this Government undertook the free coinage of silver independently. When they proclaim in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver by international agreement and in the same breath tell us that if after free coinage the silver dollar retains its present value it will not be "easier to get" than it is now, and therefore the masses of the people will not be benefitted by free coinage, do they not stultify themselves and expose the absurdity of their own reasoning? If free coinage by international agreement will not make money easier to get, why favor it? and why not say we have enough and be done with it? The only sensible reason that can be given for an increase in the volume of money by whatever of Mr. Hanna, who has been method that it may be done, is to managing Mr. McKinley and his make the dollars more numerous campaign, and hence this enthat they may be the more easily thuslastic greeting to Mr. Bryan tering absurdities of this kind, and one of these is that the more money there is in circulation, the greater the disposition to investit in productive enterprises, to give it employment of some kind, not because the enough to accommodate the people money is less valuable, but because who wanted to hear him, and while being abundant there is less disposition to hoard it for speculation or by those who may think they will have future use for it and hoard because enthusiasm kindred to that which they fear they might not be able to carried away the Chicago conven-lished policy of this Government, we sents. will enter on an era of progress and prosperity such as this country has not seen within a generation. Then there will be an end to the croaking and the pessimistic predictions we hear now, and the dollars that are in hiding will come out for investment before the other "dollars are added to the volume to make them "cheap," as it is called. They will not wait till the process of minting begins, but these dollars will come out and go into the building of ratiroads, opening mines, building factories and seeking employment in numerous ways to bring their owners profit and add to the aggregate wealth of the country. This will mean not only a stimulus to business, but the enhancement of the value of property, and employment to the thousands and many thousands who now find it difficult to earn the money to buy food, clothing and shelter. The whole country would read benefit from this, but no section more than the South, which, considering her great natural advantages, and unbounded resources, has suffered more than any other section from the scarcity of money, for which she has in a great measure been dependent upon the North, whose syndicates, under the present monetary system, have a practical monopoly of the money of the country. Double the volume and the South would hum with activity, and in less than a decade would lead all

MINOR MENTION.

The Washington Post. a gold standard paper, but one which discusses this question in a spirit of fairness, asks: "Where is the Fool-Killer?" that he does not attend to some of the gold standard organs which are publishing so much fool stuff, and thereby, as the Post asserts, the following from the New York

If Bryan should be elected and the present silver dollar should cease to be protected by the Government and the gold reserve fund, who would be the osers when the country began business on a silver basis and the militons of silver dollars now in circulation were found his two weeks' tour in Pennsylvania to be worth only their bullion value and not their face value-58 cents instead of The farmers and the workingmen! The silver dollars already coined would not be found in the hands of the capitalists and bankers, but in the custody of men and women who have hoarded up small sums, who are part owners of property, insurance policy holders and small tradespeople. No one pretends that the outstanding silver dollars would be redeemed. They would instantly become worth 53 cents only. The loss, therefore, would fall directly upon the very people whom the free silver advocates pretend that free coinage No dream of the hasheesh smoker is more fantastic or unreal than the dream of the free silver advocates.

Upon this it comments thus: We should like to know when and where, for how long and to what extent, the silver dollar has been protected by the gold reserve fund. Upon what occasion has the Treasury paid out gold in exchange for silver dollars, and where is the law requiring the Treasury to do s.? The silver dollar passes current because it is a legal tender for public and private debts and for no other reason Our paper money passed the same way thirty years ago, when there was nothing in the Treasury to redeem it, and, strange to say, between 1866 and 1876 the country enjoyed a there was no gold to redeem that paper. Specie payment was not resumed until 1879. There is and has been no question of redeeming silver dollars in gold. Even if there were such a pretence it would be the shallowest of farces. The Treasury couldn't pay in gold 20 cents on the dollar if the silve and the silver certificates were presented to morrow for redemption. The Treasury has been redeeming "coin" notes in gold, and has had within three years to borrow $262,000,000 to maintain the process, but to talk about the silver dollar being redeemable in gold is nonsense.

This is a plain statement of fact which exposes the rottenness of the pretence that the value of the silver dollar is maintained by the alleged pledge to keep it at a parity with gold. But if the fool-killer started out with his club the gold standard would be left with very few organs and very few orators, and some with quite distinguished names would be suddenly removed.

If the reception given to Wm. J. Bryan at Cleveland, Ohio, be anything of an index to public sentiment in that State we can very well understand why Mark Hanna told the Boston millionaires that "the East was too confident," and that it was "too early to predict as to Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois." We know the fact that the free silver sentiment is very strong and very aggressive in Ohlo, especially in the rural districts, but Cleveland is a manufacturing city, the home by the thousands of people who But there are some things which packed the streets of that city is Household Words. these statesmen find it convenient to particularly significant, and doubtforget or to ignore when they are ut- less came in the way of an "object lesson" which Mr. Hanna and his lieutenants will not fail to study. > One of the significant features of the political movement this year is the organization of Republican free silver clubs pledged to support Bryan and Sewall. In New York, Pennsylvania and adjoining States thousands of Republicans have joined the Bryan and Sewall clubs. but in some of the central Western States the free silver sentiment is so pronounced among the Republicans that they are organizing clubs of their own on that issue and pledging themselves to work for the election of Bryan and Sewall. At Terre Haute, Indiana, a few days ago, one of these clubs was formed and after the meeting, which was addressed by several Republicans of local prominence, including a colored man who is the Republican nominee for the Legislature, 183 men signed the roll, every one of whom had been voting the Republican ticket. This is one of the factors in the present contest which perplexes the Republican machine managers and fills them with consternation. Heretofore they could figure with some degree of certainty on the outlook, but the free silver sentiment pervades the Republican ranks so deeply now that they are at sea and don't know where to begin to do the figuring. It has been remarked that this is going to be an election of surprises, and the devel opments of every day make this more apparent.

The Winston Sentinel is responsible for the statement that a Salem lady says there is "a young couple in the Twin city who do their courting in the Salem graveyard, and may be seen there six nights in a week.' This does not necessarily imply that this Salem lady has a good deal of spare time if not curiosity, but it may imply that these young people have a due appreciation of the solemnity of the business in which injuring their own cause. It quotes they are engaged and the grave results that may come from it.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

- Lincolnton Democrat: Lincoln county has a number of undeveloped gold mines. At the mine of Maj. Burton, only three and a half miles from town, 1,800 dwts. of nuggets of gold have been found in the last year or two. One of the nuggets weighed 350 dwts. This mine is on a line with the King's Mountain property, extending from southwest to northeast.

- Concord Standard: Rev. Paul Barringer was in the city and told a Standard reporter that the gold mining business in No. 6 is running on a very large scale. At the Capt. John C. Watts' place several shafts have been sunk, and the ore is panning out surprisingly. Several big finds have been reported, and the ore is unusually rich. One engine and hoister had been placed at this mine and two more will be put in as soon as the machinery arrives. Other mines in that township are being operated with successful and encouraging results. Rich finds continue at the Ritchie Bros'. mine, and the craving for gold is little less - Salisbury World: Lloyd Swice-good, of this city, has had an experience with lamp bugs that is out of the ordinary. One night about a month ago he was lying down reading when a bug, such as are usually found flying around a light in warm weather, flew into his ear. He could not find the bug in his ear and he applied to physicians and they could not see it. Since that time he been sorely afflicted with headaches and finally his hearing became defective. Saturday night he applied to Dr. J. S. Brown for treatment and insisted that a thorough examination should be made. A minute investigation proved that the bug was in the ear, but so far back that it would be impossible for the naked eye to discover it. With the aid of instruments the bug was removed and Mt. Swicegood's troubles with his head have ceased.

CALLING THE STATIONS.

Little Mistakes That Sometimes Occur In Their Frequent Repetition.

'Occasionally," said a man, "one hears a guard on the elevated road call the next station back instead of the one ahead. Coming down on the Sixth avenue road, for instance, he might, on leaving Grand street, look in and say, 'The next station is Bleecker street, when he meant Franklin. Still, this is rarely done, not nearly so often as one might think it would be, by men calling the stations over and over again all day long. To be sure' it might seem that the names would be by frequent repetition so deeply graven on their memory that there would be the less danger of calling them wrong, but what I suppose happens is this-that sometimes the mind unconsciously switches over and the guard calls from the up list instead of the down, or vice versa

"Sometimes when a guard miscalls a station he lets it go-perhaps he doesn't think of it himself. Sometimes he corrects in a mild tone of voice, as though the least said about it the better. Sometimes he sets it straight clearly and unmistakably. I rode up town the other day on a Sixth avenue Harlem train with a guard who, as the train left For ty-second street, looked in and said, 'Fiftieth next, Fifty-eighth street train, change there for Harlem.' But the next minute he looked in again and said, with equal if not greater distinction and deliberation, 'Fiftieth next, Harlem train, change there for Fifty-eighth street.

"Here was a case that was a little different: A newsman who got off a Sixth avenue train with a bundle of papers at Fifty-third street handed a paper to the guard and asked him to give it to the ticket chopper at One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street. The guard look ed into the car as the train started and said, 'Hundred and Thirty-fifth street next,' but this was so far off that it really needed no correction, and very reasonably the guard let it go at that, but he smiled as he closed the door,"-New York Sun.

Socialism's Kant and Cant. The German mind is of the type that loves to build imaginary schemes and to dream dreams of the regeneration of mankind. It revels in views, theories, philosophical systems and ideas. It is rather tentative and nebulous than precise and well defined. Dr. Mansel, in allusion to the proneness of the German to indulge in vague and shadowy speculations, has described his country as

The Frenchman rushes onward to conclusions, the German feels his way. Moreover, the German socialist can plead in his defense that, alter all, he is only bettering the instructions of his Leighton's Generosity. The following story is characteristic of Lord Leighton's kindness to poor students: A young fellow, without friends or money, came to London to make his fortune with his brush. Orders for pictures were not forthcoming, however, and the young painter found himself reduced to dining on sunset effects. In despair he wrote to the president of the academy at his private address in Holland Park, stating his case, and forwarding at the same time some specimens of his work. Within a few days he received an answer, asking him to call at Sir Frederick's house. The president of the academy received him kindly, advised him to study more and gave him two letters of introduction. As the young man was leaving Sir Frederick handed him an envelope, remarking: "Here is an example of the best kind of drawing. No doubt one of these days you'll be able to do as well, if not better." It contained a check for £50. The recipient is a long way up the lad-
