for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS

Do You Know that Castoria, Bates' Drops, Glycerine Candy, many so-called soothing syrups and many other children's compositions of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupifying narcotics?

Do You Know that in most countries opium is not permitted to be used in children's medicine?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Hays? That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that you should not give any medicine to your child unless you or your physician know what it is composed of?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well These Things are worth knowing. They are facts.

AFTER A SLEEP.

Night—and the strong will stilled, Night—and the fancy wand, Night—and the memory beguiled, Night—and the spirit drained, Like a flower with dew-droplets, Like a bird with a broken wing, Like a star with a faded gleam, Like a flower that has withered, Like a bird that has flown, Like a star that has faded, Like a flower that has withered, Like a bird that has flown, Like a star that has faded.

A TALE OF THE WEST.

Some years ago, when Indian fighting was more frequent than it is now, a man of the name of Delany was wounded near Sandy Gulch by an Indian arrow. A young girl, Amy Maxwell, nursed him carefully until his life was saved. Then he went on to the Golden Hill settlement. The news of his recovery spread, and a young girl, Amy Maxwell, nursed him through one the streets, he drew near to speak to a group of friends. While thus engaged she was suddenly interrupted by the conversation in the shape of a horse man riding up the street at full speed and waving his hat to attract attention. The news he brought was appalling. Sandy Gulch had lately been the scene of an Indian massacre. Few had escaped. Delany pushed his way to the side of the messenger and plied him with questions in regard to the fate of Amy Maxwell. He learned that she was a prisoner in the hands of the savages.

A moment the young man remained awestruck. With flaming eyes, he shouted: "To heaven, to heaven, to heaven! I will rescue her or die!" "I, I," yelled his friends in chorus. Soon all was bustle and confusion in the little mining town of Golden Hill. Delany and his companions first visited the scene of the slaughter, and from the blackened ruins in the shape of a horse man riding up the street at full speed and waving his hat to attract attention. The news he brought was appalling. Sandy Gulch had lately been the scene of an Indian massacre. Few had escaped. Delany pushed his way to the side of the messenger and plied him with questions in regard to the fate of Amy Maxwell. He learned that she was a prisoner in the hands of the savages.

Delany returned to his companions. Plans of attack were discussed, and all agreed to attempt the rescue of the captive. As soon as the decision was reached the march was divided, for orders were given for a simultaneous attack from the south and east. When a sufficient time had elapsed to warrant Delany in the belief that both bands were ready for the attack, the word was passed for a quick advance. Delany's band approached from the south and the first to break cover. The savages, surprised and panic-stricken, sought to escape in that direction. Delany followed them, and after a short pursuit he reached the main body of the Indians. He was met by a young man, who had not two of his men, seeing his danger, sprung to his assistance. The man, seeing his disadvantage, turned to Delany. In the course of his flight, which was toward the river, he reached a rudely constructed wigwam. A moment later the savages were in the wigwam, and Delany was fighting hand to hand. Dupont, however, a giant in strength and courage, was proving too much for the young man, and would no doubt have slain him had not the latter, in a sudden effort, struck the water, which was followed immediately by a second as Delany imitated his example.

Delany was the better swimmer and had a decided advantage in being unimpeded. He was met by a young man, who had not two of his men, seeing his danger, sprung to his assistance.
