Infants and Children. MOTHERS

Do You Know that Paregoric, Bats-man's Drops, Godirey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine? Do You Know that oplam and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons? Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poison?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely regetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle? Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher? That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well and that you may have unbroken rest? Well These Things are worth know-

HIS LOSS MY GAIN.

Charley Wiburn and I are cousins, but somehow I scarcely seemed to belong to the family at all. We had no end of relatives, and he was a general favorite with all, even some he had never seen, for they would die and leave him legacies. He was constantly getting some little "windfall" of this kind until at length "Charley Wi-of this kind until at length "Charley Wiburn's luck" became a general catchword among us, a synonym for all that was lucky and fortunate.

One morning at breakfast—we were artists and shared the same rooms and studio—he received a black edged letter, which, upon opening and reading, he cast down with a discontented look.

"Another funeral to go to," he grumbled, "and here are my pictures unfinished, and next week is sending in day!"

"Who is it now?" I asked. "Another legacy, I suppose, eh?"

"Very likely," he returned indifferently. He was so used to these things he searcely took any notice of them now.

"It's Uncle Alexander Stephen. Did you came about at all It should be spontaneous and not through any compulsion or unworthy motive. But in that will you heard read the other day there was something you did not hear. It was mixed up in another matter, but it comes to this—that if Milly marry 'his nephew' he and she were to have a certain sum between them to commence housekeeping with. I have consulted Mr. Parchly upon this matter, and he agrees with me that, as Charley's name is not expressly mentioned and as he would not take the trouble to come down himself, even to the funeral of his poor uncle, who had been so kindly disposed to him, if Milly likes you well enough to have you, she will be just as much entitled to the sum set aside as if Master Charley had married her, and I am sure that I shall not object to the substitution. In the will the only condition is know him?"

I shook my head. "Have heard of him;
never saw him," I said.
"I hardly knew him myself," Charley explained, "at least not since I was a boy.
It's a rare bother, this, coming just now.
Such a long journey into the country. I say, Jack, you have done your pictures and sent them in and have nothing to do for a spell. Couldn't you go down for me?" for a spell. Couldn't you go down for me?"

"What, in your name?" I exclaimed.
"Yes. Why not? It's years since I was among any of the set. This letter is from Mr. Parchly, the solicitor of the will, I suppose. He doesn't know me. You are Jack Wiburn. It's only a difference of Christian name, and it's all in the family,

To cut the matter short, I had to con-sent, as I generally did where Charley

I took the lawyer's letter as a sort of credential and set out, grumbling a good deal at what I considered Charley's "cheek" in thus making use of me. If I had finished up my work before he had, it was only because I had worked at it more constantly, and now, instead of reaping the adventure in the hand of a few days.

me. t'Perhaps a hundred or two—hardly worth going down for, you know." So I had to go, with no legacy in view at all, small or large!

However, as I have said, I set out for the place—it was in Devonshire—and in due course I arrived at the little town and put up a hotel for the night. The funeral was fixed for the following day, and on inquiry I learned that the house I had to go to was only a short distance away.

go to was only a short distance away.

The next day, therefore, saw me among the assembled guests. I found out Mr. Parchly and silently showed him his own letter. "Ah," said he, "you are Mr. Wiburn. Very good. Glad to see you." I did not reply, so he concluded that I was Charley Wiburn without my having said anything one way or the other.

annual custom house sales of "unclaimed, abandoned and seized goods" recently bought a Paris gown and a bottle of epianything one way or the other. But when, after the funeral, the will same to be read I found Charley was leptic medicine, the latter under the imdown for £5,000! This made me think it harder lines than ever that I should have tie of wine. The "seized" or smuggled goods are more enticing than those merely "unclaimed." Whereas few except trades-people attend the sales of the latter goods, many women of social standing are either harder lines than ever that I should have had to come down in his place. The weather was atroclously cold, the March winds strong and blustering, with show-ers of sleet and snow, and I felt cold and adiscrable. At the end of the reading of personally present or are represented when the smuggled articles are auctioned off. Most of the "seized" things appeal directly to the frivolous, self indulgent tendencies the will I was making my way out to get back to the hotel when some one said, "Mr. Wiburn, I believe?" I looked around and saw a stiff, military looking old boy regarding me with a smile through his spectacles. "Charley," said he, "don't you remember me?" I thought to myself: "Oh, now I'm in for it. Here's a of weak human nature—all sorts and con ditions of cigars and liquors from plebeian weeds and spirits labeled "No Brand" and

Since I was not too well off, either, this would not have troubled me but for that legacy of £5,000 I was supposed to have come in for. "Was that the secret cause of this sudden friendliness?" I asked myself. But when I looked at Milly and saw the frank glance of her truthful, honest looking eyes I felt ashamed of myself. Nor when I regarded the major and noted

"It would be goods, etc.," includes not only yards upon yards of dress materials, especially slik, over the loss of which many a poor, de-frauded weman must have torn her hair, ("No wonder," I thought. "It would be strange if she did.")

She came up and shook bands, and the moment I looked at her I simply fell help-lessly head over ears in love with her then and there. She seemed to be the loveliest, most adorable creature I had ever seen. A sudden resolve came into my mind. "Don't you remember your little playmate Mill?" said she, with a blush and an entrancing look in her beautiful eyes.
"Well, it's not so surprising, for I should never have known you, either, if Mr. Parchly had not pointed you out to us."

Before I exactly realized what I was doing I was whisked off to Major Rain-A True Mother. "All that I ever heard of Sir John Murray redounded to his honor," says Frederic Hill in his autobiography. At Edinburgh, under his hospitable roof, were often gathered the most distinguished men of his time. This marvelously genial person, whose qualities were good nature, a love of humor and a love of pleasant society, formed a central figure round whom they all gathered. A pretty story is told of his high sense of honor. doing I was whisked off to Major Rainfield's house—as I found the name of Milly's father to be—to dine, calling at the hotel for my evening "togs" on the way.

I found the major's house a neat, quiet looking little place on the outskirts of the town. He lived alone with his daughter—his wife being dead—a housekeeper and one servant. Though everything was comfortable, there was that indescribable air that gave one the impression that they were not too well off as regards this world's goods. high sense of honor.

An old lady who had quarreled with her adopted heir bequeathed her entire property to Sir John. When the will was read, he found himself, to his great surprise, possessed of wealth, while the heir presumptive found himself penniless. Sir John made inquiries into the character of the remarkant and receiving satisfactors. the young man, and, receiving satisfactory answers, he quietly transferred back to him the whole property.

Soon after this a lady called upon St John's mother, and, indignant at what seemed to her an act of quixotism, de-manded:

"Do you know what your son John has "Yes," replied Mrs. Murray, with happy smile, "and he would not have been my son John if he had done anything else." think of him as a scheming old fortune hunter.

Such good friends did we three become that I lingured on in the place for a week, during which time I daily grew more uncomfortable at the part I was playing. At last I sought out Milly one day alone and confessed the truth to her.

"I am not surprised," she said. "I thought you were not much like the Charley I used to know. But I am sorry for you—sorry to think that your cousin should have got that £5,000, while you were not even so much as mentioned."

"Ah!" I said, with a sigh, "that is Charley's luck—and mine. It is always the same—always has been and always will be, I suppose."

I was thinking what I dered not say—that if that £5,000 had but been mine I would have asked her to be mine, too, whereas now, with my poor prospects—well, of course, it was folly even to dream of such a thing.

I watched her narrowly after that, but could see no difference in her treatment of me.

This Is the Way to Put It. Small white teeth somewhat separated are said to denote treachery. Overlapping teeth stand for inconsistency. Long, projecting teeth mean a grasping nature, and long, narrow teeth are understood by the character in teeth readers to express vanity. Fiddlesticks! says The Jenness-Miller Monthly. A mouthful of ill kept teeth bespeaks inexcusable disregard for one's appearance, for one's health and for the refined decencies of life. A mouthful of well kept teeth denotes personal refinement and proper pride and regard for one's health and the feelings of other people. Telling character by teeth need go no farther. Small white teeth somewhat separate well, of course, it was folly even to dream of such a thing.

I watched her narrowly after that, but could see no difference in her treatment of me.

I had written to Charley, telling him of his good fortune, and I was going to stay on down here for a few days, but beyond a brief note expressing wonder at whatover attraction I could see there at that time of the year he had said nothing and written no further, not a word of thanks or of reference to his $5,000 legacy.

Another week went by, and I still staid on. At the end of that time I was in such a state of mind that one day, finding my-The Discovery Saved His Life.

away at once, for I felt that I could not possibly stay on there any longer. Milly, always quiet and self possessed, remained silent awhile and then said, looking down:

"I think you had better speak to papa,"

"What!" I rapturously exclaimed. "Do you really bid me hope, Milly? Do you really think there is a possibility of your father"— I stopped and shook my head.

"Alsa, no!" I said. "Such a thing could not happen to me. It would be Charley's The Right Days That Precede Christm Are Counted Unlucky. Are Counted Unlucky.

Many queer and very ancient superstitions survive in modern Greece. A Greek sailor, owner of a steam tug in the Pireus, told an American writer that the ninth wave in a saries was always the dangerous one. He had noticed this fact himself, from boyhood, and often began to pray hard to his saint when the eighth wave came, in a great storm at see, so as to tide over the fatal ninth. He thought prayers to the saints efficacious in the case of sailing vessels, but useless as to steamships. "Any one born," he said, "during the eight days before Christmas is so affected that he seems to have come into the world. not happen to me. It would be Charley's luck, that—not mine." luck, that—not mine."
"Well," said Milly composedly, "they say you never know your luck till you try, but if you are too faint hearted to try, why, of course"—
"I'll go off and find the major and have it out at once," I blurted out.
And I saw him accordingly and told him the whole story, humbly apologizing for daring to ask for his daughter's hand, when, as I was bound to tell him, I was not Charley, but Jack Wiburn, and I had
