COCKRAN ON SLAVEHOLDERS. -Will you submit to this conspiracy between the professional farmers, the farmers who cultivate the quarrels of their neighbhrs, farmers who labor with their jaws, Populist agltators of the West, and the unreconciled slave-holders of the South? This is a conspiracy between professional farmers, who want to pay low wages, and the unreconciled slave-holders, who would like to pay-no wages at all. - (Extract from the speech of Bourke Cockran, delivered in New York August 18th.)

TRYING TO DISCREDIT BIS-

The advocates of free silver this country have made such good use of Prince Bismarck's letter to Governor Culberson, of Texas, in which he expressed the opinion that if this country decided to enter upon the policy of free coinage of silver alone he had no doubt it would exercise a salutary influence upon European nations in leading to the adoption of bimetallism. He did not express any opinion as to whether this country could maintain bimetallism alone, and he did not offer any advice as to what this country should do, but expressed the discuss the issues in which they opinion that on account of its geo- are interested. MINOR MENTION.

etter, and a difference that might asily have been made by any two translators. Substantially the versions by Governor Culberson's translator and the World's are the same

But the gold men are making much ado over what they are representing as an interpolation amounting substantially to a forgery, but they are still bound to admit that the letter representing that Bismarck was actuated by selfisheness in encouraging this country to undertake bimetallism, although he made no suggestry found it compatible with their in-son's inquiry. The "selfishness" consists in this, that Bismarck is an intensely patriotic German and anxious to promote Germany's interest at the expense of any and every other nation. In other words his "selfishness" is of a national and not individual character. When Germany had completed the demoneti-zation of silver, which began in 1871 and was completed about 1881, she found herself, after she had gotten away with all she could, with about one hundred million dollars of silver coin (if he, Prof. White, "remembers correctly," but he isn't sure he does,) on hand that she couldn't get rid of without a great sacrifice, and hence cute old Bismarck is encouraging this country to adopt free coinage that his country may get rid of her unsalable and useless coin, dump it on us and make $50,000,000 or more

This is very thin for a man occupying a position in one of our respectable universities, who is a teacher of young men and assumes man who undertakes to tell Gov.

Culberson and Mr. Bryan some things which they do not know, and in doing so belittles their intelligence and misrepresents Bismarck's language (quoting from the New York World, as a recognized Democratic journal, which it is not), whether he does Bismarck's motives or not. It doesn't peed to have occurred to this eminent Professor that while he was trying to discredit Bismarck he was making a strong presentation for free silver when he contended that Germany could make $50,000,000 by sending her $100,000,000 of stored up coin to this country, by the simple operation of which this pile of coin now worth only $50,000,060, (its bullion value at present prices), would become worth $100,000,000, or as much as it was worth before it was demone-tized. Prof. White is evidently not a believer in the 50-cent dollar, although he thinks it is a horrid thing for Mr. Bryan to insist that we should have more of these 100-cent silver dollars. If Germany could convert her 50 cent silver dollars into 100-cent silver dollars, couldn't other nations do the same, and then wouldn't we have 100 cent silver dollar all 'round, and wouldn't silver go up the world over just as the advocates of free coinage contend it would, and as Prof. White practically admits it would in his zeal to discredit Bismarck? That's the way it

The Treasury gold reserve stood Monday at $125,100,896. The reserve has been kept up by the action of the bankers who have deposited gold in the Treasury, to prevent the necessity of another bond issue before the election. The most of this old does not belong to the United tates, but to the bankers who have favors bimetallism, and then they temporarily given the United States take a tack to break its force by he use of it, with the full knowledge that they can draw it out when they choose. The small daily withdrawals show that there is an understanding among the gold manition that could be construed as borulators 'so that one will not draw dering upon advice, any further than ut what another puts in. It is claimto say that if the people of this couned that we have $600,000,000 of gold n this country, and yet we find that terests to enter upon the free coinage to keep up the reserve it was of silver he thought it might have a necessary to import gold from tendency to draw other nations in the Europe which importations continued until the ra'e of exchange be-Prof. Andrew D. White, of Cornell (N. Y.) University, has taken it upon himself to discredit Bismarck by exposing the "selfish motive" he had in writing that letter, although we fail to see why. Prof. White should characterize a part of it as a "forged interpolation" (based upon the World's translation) while he was arguing to show that selfishness inspired the writing of the answer to Gov. Culber-come so high that they were sus pended. The understanding among the gold manipulators is that they will take care of the reserve until the election, because they don't want any bond-issuing until after the battle of the ballots is fought and then his gold that went in temporarily will come out and the Treasury will be left to hustle along for itself. If Bryan be elected they will lose little time in draining the reserve, for they know full well that the draining rocess will cease as soon as he takes the oath of office; if McKinley be elected the bond-issuing will go on as usual, and they will continue to add to the burden of debt on the people of this country. Wm. J. Bryan's tour through Ten-essee was simply a repetition of the cordial and enthusiastic welcomes that have been the order of the day in other States which he has visited -tremendous outpourings of the people, many of whom travelled many miles by cail, or on horseback or on foot, to hear and welcome this great tribune of the people. Never has that State witnessed such gatherings of the people, of all conditions of life, to see or hear a man whatever the reputation may have been that went before him, and it will in our opinion be a long time before it again witnesses such mighty gatherings. In point and pith his speeches delivered there rank with the best he has made in his wonderful campaign, and the effect they had on hearers is shown by the responsive applause with which the salient points were received. The man who would doubt where Tennessee stands afte Senese outpourings of the people must be either very blind or exceedingly dull

THOUGHT IT WAS A "PIANO TALK."

An Abstracted Clerk Who Got Into Troo

y innocent in the matter, but enough nternational dispute. The Waldorf has on the first floor a reception room and parlor. This is utilized for all kinds of held there, the next a display of fancy work, perhaps a musicale the next, and so on. One afternoon a musical programme was given in this reception room and that was what caused all the trouble. The door leading to the room, which is usually open to all, was ed cards. This aroused the curiosity of the inquisitive guest. He walked around the corridor eying the room from every possible point of vantage, and then walked up to the desk and said to the clerk, who was writing in a huge ledger:

"What's going on in there?" The clerk jabbed his pen in the ink-stand and replied tersely, "I guess it's a bird recital."

Then he continued his writing with never a quiver of an eyelash. The in-quisitive guest contracted his eyebrows; then he looked for a lurking gleam of amusement in the clerk's eye, but found none. Then he turned and wandered into the cafe to think over the problem After due deliberation he came to the conclusion that it was not all straight, and he came-back. He expected to see the clerk give some sign of amusement when he approached the desk, but in-stead the man behind the onyx was immersed more deeply than ever in the big book. The guest repeated his question, saying:

"What did you say was going on it The clerk never raised his eyebrows but muttered something about "four and seven make eleven and"-adding hurriedly: "I don't know, but I think it's piano talk."

The mystery was deepening; the in quisitive man saw no way out of the difficulty except to go and see for himself. He could detect nothing in the clerk's manner that warranted him in believing that he was being made the butt of a joke, but he was confident that it was not all straight. So he walked up and purchased a ticket and went inside. In a few moments he came out, and he had a look of set determination upon his face. He walked up to the desk and in a rough voice he demanded: "What did you say was going on in that room?" The clerk was startled at the gruff tone and looked up from his book. He saw that the man was angry clear through, and he wondered at his persistency in asking about the entertain ment. He said quietly: "I said I was not sure, but I thought it was a piano recital." "No, you didn't," thundered the i "What did I say?" asked the clerk meekly. cital," said the man. "And then you said it was a piano talk, and now you say it's a piano recital. I am not in the habit of being guyed, and you knew what it was all the time, for you told me straight enough when you knew I together too recent for this place. I don't"- The guest might have gone on talking indefinitely had not the clerk apologized in a most penitent manner. He said contritely:

"Well, you see it is this way. have bird talks, piano recitals, musicales picture exhibitions and I don't know how many other kinds of affairs in there. I was busy with the books and I got tangled up. I did not mean to mislead you." The guest was mollified, but he is not sure yet that he was not being "jollied," to use his own expres sion. - New York Tribune.

The biographer is bound to supply all the facts that effectually distinguish one man's characteristics and exploits from those of his neighbor, and while the normal development of devotional sentiment or domestic virtue is in this connection immaterial any departure from the normal development demands examination. Deviations from religious orthodoxy present no special difficulties, but much discretion in dealing with a life's moral disfigurement is enjoined on the national biographer. The smallness of the scale on which he works requires him to preserve a very just proportion between the various parts of his memoir, and he must give no more space to man's lapses from virtue than their effect on his achievement justifies. Breaches of conventional morality consequently often sink into insignificance in national biography and merit no notice at all. But whenever the lapses from public or private duty are notorious or chronic the biographer's duty is plain. He has frankly to describe them. The marital adventures of Byron, Nelson or Parnell, Coleridge's indulgence in opium, Porson's indulgence in drink, the crimes that have occasionally blackened the exploits of great explorers, are not only legitimat are essential topics in national biography. For the biographer to suppress them is to fail in a primary obligation. He must of course so handle such mat ters as to give as little pain as possible to friends or relatives who may be injured by the recital. The evidence must be conclusive, and should be briefly summed up with all the sobriety of a judge. - Cornhill Magazine. A Compromise "I am willing to give up eating pie with a knife," said the fond father to his solicitous daughter, "if I may also give up signing checks with a pen. Is it a go?" It went not. - Indianapolis Journal.
