Brave and Cool.

In January last a Philadelphia tenement house was burned. Two men were killed, several persons were badly injured, while others escaped in an almost miraculous manner. The fourth floor was occupied by the family of Joseph Zellers. The father and mother seem to have been absent, but the five children were at home. All were saved through the bravery and coolness of the oldest of them, a girl of 16, whose conduct is briefly described in the Record.

Jenny Zellers was dressing the children, the youngest a mere baby, when a cloud of smoke came into the room and at the same time the frantic cries of those below reached her ears.

Hastily opening the door, she saw the flames leaping up the stairway toward her. Never hesitating, she shut the door, and calling the children together, forced them up a ladder and through a trapdoor to the roof. They were elevated high above the surrounding buildings, and below them the flames were roaring with terrible ferocity.

Still retaining her presence of mind, the brave girl dropped her brother, a lad of 14, to the roof of the house to the south. It was a fall of ten feet, but the boy landed safely, and kept on his feet. He tried to save the lives of the children, but they were all saved.

This little threat to her brother, who arranged it on the roof, and then, one by one, she saved the other children. The infant she took in her arms, and leaped with it in safety to the bedding. Next she broke a skylight in the roof to which all had escaped, and lowering the children through it they all reached the street.

Interrupted by the Court.

Lord Chief Justice Erie was prone to interrupt counsel when it was found that the witness had made up their minds against him. On one occasion Mr. Bovill, Q. C. soon afterwards made a judge, was stopped with "Here we stand, we four men, and we have all firmly (emphatically, the adverb) made up our minds that there must be a new trial, but if you think it worth your while going on after that (playfully), more profit we may claim tomorrow." Whereupon the Q. C. laughingly sat down.

On another occasion he again interrupted with "I beg to inform the counsel for the defendant that every man at which he lets down the foot-gates of his understanding and allows not one more drop to enter, and that time, in my mind, has fully arrived."
