The Mooning Star. BY WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON. N. C.

SURDAY MORNING, JUNE 11, 1899.

WILL HE DO IT.

A large number of the leading Republican papers of the country have urged a reduction of tariff duties on articles on which trusts have been formed. Some have gone so far as to advocate putting such articles on the free list. Some have not the patience to wait until Congress assembles in regular session but urge the President to call an extra session to meet at once and tackle this trust question by abolishing the protection that the tariff gives them. As might be expected the Republican State Conventions will take their cue from these papers, and whacks at trusts will the order of the day with them.

Ohio led off, and as that is Mr. McKinley's State, and the convention was bossed by his friend and manager, Hon. Mark Hanna, it may be taken for granted that the Republican conventions of other States will follow with more or less picturesqueness, and by the time they get through it will not be apparent that the trusts have a single friend in the Republican party. But the trust organizers are not worrying by day nor losing any sleep by night over that. They rather enjoy the cuteness which schemes to filch some Democratic thunder, for it is only the Democratic denunciation of trusts that give them any concern.

As an illustration showing why they need not be alarmed this same Ohio convention which took a swipe at the trusts and demanded from Congress restrictive legislation defeated for a re-nomination Attorney General Monnett, who by his proceedings against the Standard Oil trust incurred its enmity and the enmity of all the other trusts. That's the way Boss Hanna and the other magnates who manipulated that convention showed their sincerity in denouncing trusts, and their appreciation of the man who was brave enough to beard and fight them. The presumption is that the man whom they nominated in his place will understand why that anti-trust plank was inserted in the platform and will construe it accordingly. This fake trick may work as far as the State conventions are concerned but it will not end there, for the trick has been forestalled by the Republican papers which have demanded that Congress repeal the protective duty on all articles manufactured or controlled by trusts.

This brings the case up to Mr. McKinley and puts him to the test. There is little probability of an extra session of Congress being called, for Mr. McKinley doesn't want Congress on his hands. If he had his choice he would probably prefer that it didn't meet until after the next Presidential election, which would give him a better opportunity to dispatches, is the fear of the effec play home politics and the Philippine politics his own way. With a Congress on his hands this would for the army in the Philippines. not be so easy to do.

When Congress does meet he must send in his message, and of course he will be expected to touch upon those topics which have most engage public attention, such as the trusts, the tariff, the question of colonies, the finances, etc., and he will be expected to offer such suggestions as to him may seem wise and expedient. With the condemnation of trusts by the Republican conventions, which will be about unanimous, he must either ignore this or he must take position against the trusts in his message. But mere deprecatory expressions will not do. He must go further and suggest or recommend a remedy, and in view of the restrictive legislation already on the statute books, which has proved such a complete fizzle, about the only thing he can do, if he does anything, will be to follow the advice of the journals which have urged the repeal of the protective features of the tariff which have fostered the trusts. This will put him to the test. Will he do it? This remains to be seen. If he do, then will Congress act upon his recommendation? It is placed in about as much of a quandary as Mr. McKinley is. They will both be confronted by a very unpleasant predicament.

Unfortunately for the South and the more sparsely settled States of the West they are outnumbered in Congress by the more populous and wealthy States, which have good banking facilities and an abundance of circulating medium through their banks. Not being interested on their own account they take no interest in other sections which suffer, but on the contrary oppose any material change in the present system, which they seem to think works well enough for them. The opposition to State banks comes mainly from the same sections where there is the greatest opposition to free silver, and for the same

THE RACE PROBLEM.

The majority of people in considering the race problem in the South view it from the political standpoint, which although very serious is very for from being the most serious feature of the question. That can be remedied by legislation and finally eliminated, and will be, at least in those States where the negro is a menacing factor in politics. The close proximity of the races, the very large numbers of negroes that inhabit towns and cities makes their presence in such large numbers from a sanitary standpoint a very perplexing question, both on account of themselves and the whites, the health of all communities being jeopardized by the lack of attention to sanitary precaution, and the discriminating intelligence to so live as to avoid contracting diseases. In speaking of this question Mr. James E. Rankin, President of the Henderson, (Kentucky) cotton mills, is uoted as follows:

"Totally oblivious to all sanitary neasures, they are a constant menace to the health of all; too stupid for the performance of any but the most menial offices, and unreliable in the discharge of those, and yet from their numbers they are a constant barrier to immigration. On the farm they curtail production by their lack of thrift and consequent disregard of the and owner's interest.

This is brief, but it is as true as it is brief, and says a great deal. But the labor feature is a minor one compared with the sanitary feature, which is the most difficult to remedy, because it is so difficult to get the negroes to co-operate in securing good sanitary conditions.

Mark Twain is reported as saying that he will publish no more books during his life-time. But Mark may find some difficulty in finding publishers after he migrates to the other

Among the most beautiful of Summer fabrics is batiste, which this year mulates silk in its variety of pretty color combinations. A very pretty treat ment of this material is shown in a blue and white gown, a pattern of which accompanies the current number of the BAZAR where the design originally ap peared. The outer bodice is in three parts; a plain French back, shield front, and the left side front, over which the shield laps. The gown may be made upon a blue lawn or taffeta foundation. The patterns for yoke and high collar are part of the present costume. The front of the batiste waist is slightly gathered at the shoulders, the fulness being drawn in at the waist on each side of the centre front, and the fastening is concealed between the gathers at the shoulder and waist line. The sleeves are tight fitting, with flaring cuffs and epaulettes. The foundation skirt is of a tight sheath variety, and is perforated to indicate the position of the ruffles. The peplum has a slight, fulness in the centre of the back, which may be distributed in gathers or brought into inwardturning pleats. The garment is absolutely plain over the hips, but flared at the bottom, as do the two ruffles over which it is draped, The peplum and ruffles come well forward at the sides, and a panel front is fitted over them. A line of perforations on foundation lining will indicate the termination of draper; and ruffles at the side, and the position for placing the front panel. lesired, the opening of the skirt may be placed at the left side of the panel, but in the original model it occurs at the back. This design will be found an efective one for foulards, crepes, India silks, cashmeres, or any soft and at the same time pliant material. In the batiste model the panel and collar are outlined with white Renaissance lace, but any preferred trimming—such as gath ered ribbon, passementerie, or ruchings of the same material—will make effect tive trimming.

To make this costume 13 yards of batiste 22 inches wide will be required. also 3 yards of lawn for the foundation skirt and waist. Where silk is desired for the foundation skirt, 7 yards 32 inches wide will be sufficient.

COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK June 10 .- The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1 to 4 points, the lower figures being in sympathy with losses in spot and future prices at Liverpool. Irregularity soon developed under prime weath er and crop advices from the South. which was increased by misgivings regarding the June government report, to come out at 10 o'clock. The issuance of the bureau statement cut little figure as an influence. It re ported a decrease in acreage of 8 per cent. and a crop condition 85.7. The acreage last year was 22,560,334 and the condition of the crop in June was 89. The figures given were as expect-ed. The market closed steady with prices net unchanged to two points
