SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 25.

THE TARIFF AND TRUSTS.

The friends of the protective tariff declare that the tariff does not foster trusts, others say there are no trusts, and others say that trusts are good things and therefore the tariff is a good thing for begetting them, and instead of declaiming against it we ought to be ringing its praises. Mark Hanna, however, did the unique thing during the campaign in Ohio by denying that there are any trusts and then proclaiming that trusts are a blessing. The men who deny that the protective tariff fosters trusts discredit the intelligence of the American people, and the men who assert that they are a blessing either disto whom they talk. But those of them who are intelligent enough to know what they are talking about are playing with Originally the trusts words. were managed by trustees, hence the name. Later the boards of were dispensed with trustees and the present system adopted by taking in the plants either by purchase or issuing stock in the combination to such plants as came in, so that literally there are no trusts but combinations, the same thing with a different name. A trust to all intents and purposes, based on the same principle, operated pretty much in the same way and with the grant who cuts the ground from un der the feet of the American workingmen. Yesterday's papers announced a strike of 300 Polish laborers in a Philadelphia factory.

"The upholstery weavers of this city, some 1,600 in all, have decided to petition their employers for an increase of wages The cotton and woollen schedules of the Dingley act were written by the representatives of the manufacturers, who were seconded what they asked, on the plea that it was necessary they should have fur ther protection to enable them to pay employes living wages and meet for eign competition. Indeed, the Ledger is informed that the same schedules in the derided Wilson act were also prepared by the manufacturers. It may be that the workingmen ask too much, or the employes concede to little; but, whatever the merits of the controversy, American labor is entitled to fair wages equally as the Amer can manufacturer is entitled to fair profits.

"The whole subject of wage rates, price lists and the profits of capital is one that calls for serious and prompt consideration by Congress.'

There is scarcely an article used by the American people on which there are any tariff duties-all of which are imposed with an eye to protection-that has not been ennanced in price from twenty-five to one hundred per cent., or more. Various pretexts are offered for this. The manufacturers tell us that it is necessary on account of the increased cost of raw materials, advance in wages, &c., but the increased cost of raw materials is the result in many cases of the protective tariff on these, while the increase in wages is a trifle compared with the increased price of the goods they make.

But coming down to the equity of this thing, 75,000,000 of people are taxed for the benefit of the comparatively few thousands who are engaged in the protected industries, that is when the protection amounts to enough to prevent foreign competition, and these 75,000,000 pay from 25 to 100 per cent. more for what they buy while their buying capacity remains what it was before in the case of a good many of them and but slightly increased in others. The farmer gets a little more for the produce he has to sell and is taxed more on every thing he has to buy. The wage earner gets an advance of about ten per cent. on his wages, and he pays tribute on every thing he buys and is no better off at the credit their own intelligence or pre- end of the month than at the besume on the credulity of the people ginning, for the increase in wages s not in proportion to the advance

Max F. Abbe, 25 Cortland st., New York City, writes:

"About two years ago I noticed that nervous symptoms had commenced to trouble me. I decided to try Paine's Celery Compound, and after using several bottles I noticed that the greater part of my nervousness had disappeared, my thoughts had become clearer, I did not pass any more sleepless nights, and I felt as young as I did ten years ago, without having to stop my smoking."

CURRENT COMMENT

- From the description which the Manila dispatches give of the raiment of General Lawton's troops, it is evident that the capture of Mrs. Aguinaldo's wardrobe was quite opportune. - Norfolk Land-mark, Dem.

----- If General Wheeler is with the forces of United States cavalry which is trying to rungdown the "rebel" President in Luzon, the fact must awaken some curious recollections and reflections in his mind. Truly the times do change, and generals as well as other men, change with them .- Charleston News and Courier, Dem.

---- Now that Dewey has become target for the shafts of peace there is left no figure of our Spanisa war free from such treatment. All have shared such a fate-Sampson, Schley, Wheeler, Hobson and now Dewey. Their services are already forgotten and their shortcomings incessantly magnified until it seems that the one unpardonable crime is for a man to have attained eminence fighting for his country. Truly war, in the heat of conflict, is some times a noble thing in comparison with the pettiness of peace. - Louisville Courier-Journal, Dem.

same object, to stifle competition, secure a monopoly of the market, and dictate prices to the consumers. The Philadelphia Ledger is a non-partisan, moderate protection paper, and thus discusses the protective tariff in connection with trusts:

"The St. Louis Convention of the Republican party, in proclaiming its adherence to the protective tariff principle, defined that principle as being in its reasonable application equally opposed to foreign control and to domestic monopoly. A tariff tax is equitable where it affords to Ameri oan labor adequate protection from lesser paid foreign labor, and the American consumer protection against unjust exactions on the part of the American manufacturer. But the destruction of domestic competition as represented by the organization monopolistic enterprises vitiates principle of protection, because it puts laborer and consumer at the mercy of the producer. Advocates of the trusts contend that there are no monopolies in the United States; but this is begging the question. Combinations that control the market may not actually include every manufac turing plant in their line of business: but if they are able to dictate prices, to exercise the powers of monopoly, they are for all practical purposes monopolies.

The Houston, Texas, Post fers an object lesson in the Nail Trust, which has raised prices from $1.50 in 1898 to $4 35 in 1899, which an increase in wages of 10 per cent. and an increase in trust profits of 180 per. cent., while the increased cost to the consumer is 190 per cent. Doubltess there are nails made by independent concerns, but the trust dom instes the market. So also with sugar. A representative of the American sugar Company testifies that his concern produces 70 per cent. of that commodity used in the United States; that Arbuckle produces 5 per cent. and that other refiners turn out the remaining 25 per cent. By the rules of arithmetic the Sugar Trust is not a monopoly ; but by the evidence of every day experi ence it controls and regulates the mar ket, with power to absolutely crush its competitors should they reduce prices. There are a few, a very few, independent tin plate plats in this country, and thing but attractive. Poorly sorted, the Tin Plate Trust is a virtual mo nopoly, and has enormously increased prices that it may pay dividends on over capitalized stock. An indication of the extent of this inflation is af forded by the testimony of a witness before the Industrial Commission, who declared that the promoters of the tin plate concern had received for their
