A CANAL A NECESSITY.

Whatever the differences of opinion may be as to certain features in the message of the President, there will be pretty general agreement as to the favorable mention of the isth mian canal. The desirability of waterway between the two oceans has been recognized for over half century, it has been discussed more or less for over half a century, it has been before Congress in some shape a number of times, it has been endorsed by State Legislatures, it has been endorsed by the platforms of all the political parties, recommended by the Chambers of Commerce of numerous cities, advocated by repbut the probabilities are that the resentative speakers of the respec Senate bill will finally pass substantive parties and by the press of the country regardless of politics, and yet we have progressed only so far in this work as the appointment of some committees to visit the proposed routes of the canals talked about and report their conclusions. While we have been talking about a canal the Suez canal was built, in spite of the opinions of eminent civil engineers that it was an impracticable scheme; the trans-Siberian railway, a more colossal undertaking than this canal, has been practically completed, and while we are stil talking about it that other great railway, conceived in the bold brain of Cecil Rhodes, connecting North and South Africa, will in all probability become an accomplished fact. In the meantime while we are talking a European company is pushing work on the Panama canal, the object apparently being either to complete it before work is begun on any other canal, or to deter this Government from giving substantial aid to any other scheme, on the ground that one isthmian canal will answer all the demands of commerce, making the other a dead venture. Without arguing for or against any particular route this fact is apparent that if an isthmian canal was ever desirable to promote the material interests of this country it has now become a necessity, not only from a commercial but from a military standpoint. We have annexed the Hawaiian islands, we claim su premacy over Guam and the Philippines. This changes our geography there own way, if they can. and gives us territory on both sides of the Pacific and in the middle to defend in case of attack. This necessitates a large increase of our navy, distributed in two oceans, with 7,000 miles of land between. Such a canal would be equivalent to a large increase in the navy, for then the warships in one ocean might be speedily sent into the other in case of need, and there will be need of them in the future, and principally in the Pacific if we hold on to the Philippines, for there, in the scuffle for commercial ascendancy on that side, will be our weak point and point of attack. With the new departure we become necessarily involved in the game of European powers in their schemes for commercial supremacy and territorial empire, and can no longer by the neutral power we were when our boarders .extended beyond neither ocean. Empire brings responsibilities and responsibilities require arms to maintain and defend.

CURRENT COMMENT:

- A London firm of caterers has sent to the British troops in South Africa a Christmas present in the form of 22,400 puddings of various sizes. The dispatches of a week or so ago told that some tons of plum pudding had been or would be forwarded to the troops. The Queen has made provisions for presenting to every one of her soldiers in South Airica a small quantity of chocolate. So much for the commissariat of Tommy Atkins. Meantime his Boer enemy is eating parched corn, and fighting like a demon - Savannah News, Dem:

-- Coarse cotton shirtings, refined petroleum, flour and lumber are now the principal commodities exported to China. The Chinese Minister tells the correspondent of the Boston Transcript that American trade might be almost indefinitely extended by a study of the requirements of the Chinese markets and by fair dealing. China is traversed in nearly every direction by canals, which furnish slow but very cheap transportation; hence imported merchandise is readily delivered in the interior of the Empire. The most serious obstacle to trade is internal taxation levied at the border line of every province .-Philadelphia Record, Dem.

- - At the beginning of the war with Spain Congress published the following declaration: "That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control over said island, (Cuba.) except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people.' Does not this resolution, it is noted, "apply in good conscience" and with equal force to every island and people that we now hold as a consequence of that war? Conscientious Congressmen should consider the question very seriously. There is but one answer to it .- Charleston News and Courier, Dem

HIS FORTUNE ÷ IN A DREAM. But Everybody Is Not Expected to Believe the Stury. t table la fala a la fala a la fala a la fala There lived at Swaffham, in Norfolk, a hardworking, industrious man, who followed the trade of a tinker. This man dreamed one night that if he took a journey to London and placed himself on a certain part of London bridge he should there meet with a person who would communicate some thing to him of great importance to his future prospects in life. This dream made some impression on the tinker's mind, and he related it very circumstantially to his wife in the morn ing. She, however, half laughed and half scolded at him for his folly in paying attention to such idle fancies and told him he had better get up and go to work. The next night he dreamed the same again and likewise the third night, when the impression was so powerful on his mind that he determined, in spite of the remonstrances of his wife and the ridicule of his neighbors, to "go to London and see the upshot of it."

Accordingly, having made arrangements as to the management of his business during his absence, he furnished himself with a sum of money and set off on foot for the metropolis, distant about 90 miles. He reached the end of his journey late on the third day, and, having refreshed himself with a night's rest; he took his station the next morning on a part of the bridge which corresponded with the description in his dream.

There he stood all that day without any communication to the purpose of his journey. The next day it was the same and the third, so that toward night his confidence in his dream as well as his patience began to be considerably shaken, and he inwardly cursed himself for his folly in not yielding to his wife's advice and resolved that next day he would leave London and make the best of his way home again. However, he kept his station until late in the evening, when just as he was about to leave it a stranger who had noticed him standing doggedly and with anxious looks on the same spot for some days accosted him and asked what he was waiting there for. After some hesitation the tinker told him his errand, without, however, acquainting him with the place he came from.

The stranger smiled at his simplicity and advised him to go home and in future pay no attention to dreams.

"I myself," said he, "if I were disposed to put faith in such things, might now go 100 miles into the country upon a similar errand. I dreamed three nights this week that if I went to a place called Swaffham, in Norfolk, and dug under an apple tree in a certain garden on the north side of the town, I should find a box of money, but I have something else o do than to run after such idle fancies. No, no, my friend; go home and work well at your calling, and you will find there the riches you are seeking here." The tinker was astonished. This, he doubted not, was the information he was seeking, but he said nothing further to the stranger than to thank him for his advice and to declare his determination to follow it. He immediately went to his lodging and the next day set off for home, which he reached safe.

ference committee will get together to compromise and adjust the dif ferences between the two bills and we will have what the Republican gold-standard reformers call "financial reform." This is a cut and dried job which had, as far as the Republican Solons of each House are concerned, been practically agreed upon and decided before it was offered for debate at all, so that the debate will be a mere matter of form which will not materially affect the final action.

But doesn't it look like a farce that a measure in which the whole country is as vitally interested as it is in a financial scheme, that its consideration should be limited to one week, and that it should be Pasquotank o e. rushed through as agreed upon by a party caucus ? Of course it may be desirable that measures of this kind should not be unnecessarily protracted in discussion, but in all such matters, when such great interests are involved, it is better to make haste slowly, act with due deliberation and try to avoid the blunders that haste may cause. To consider measures and not to rush them with through without due consideration is what Congress is supposed to have been instituted for. Congress is are convalescent.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John O iver, of Phil delphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes unken, t ngue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetitegradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up Fortu ately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters:' and to my great subject of his journey, but rose early the next morning and commenced digging on the spot supposed to be pointed out by the stranger. After proceeding in his work a few feet downward his spade struck against a hard substance, which, upon clearing the mold from the top of it, proved to be an iron chest. He quickly removed it to his house, and, having with some difficulty broken off the lid, to his great joy found it full of money. After securing this treasure he discovered upon the outside of the chest an inscription, which, being no scholar, he was unable to decipher. He therefore Cow Peas. HIDES-F D-Green salted.... Dry fint. hit upon the following expedient to ascertain its meaning: There was in the town a grammar

He said but little to his wife on the school, several of the pupils from which were constantly in the habit of passing his smithy on their way to and from school. The tinker judged that by placing the chest at the door it would excite the attention of the boys, and thus he should be able to obtain the object in view without exciting any suspicion among his neighbors.

He soon had the opportunity he sought. A number of the boys having gathered round, as was their custom, to witness the operations of the forge, he took occasion to challenge their scholastic skill in the translation of the inscription. Some shook their heads; others, after conning over it awhile, said it was not sufficiently legible.

At length, one older than the rest, anxious to display his superior learning, after scraping and brushing off the rust, gave the following solution of it: Where this stood

Is another twice as good.

Overjoyed at this information, the tinker next morning resumed his labor. and, a little below the ground already cleared, he found a second chest double the size of the first, and, like it, filled with gold and silver coin. The account goes on to state that, be coming thus suddenly a wealthy man, the tinker showed his gratitude to Providence by building a new chancel to the church, the old one being out of repair. And, whatever fiction the marvelous taste of those ages may have mixed up with the tale, certain it is that there is shown at this day a monument in Swaffham church having an effigy in marble said to be that of the tinker, with his dog at his side, and his tools and imple ments of trade lying around him .-Mirror.

Costly Admiration. A characteristic story of General Lafayette was told in a Paris journal som vears ago. At Lamarque's funeral the crowd took out General Lafayette's horses, as the famous soldier was returning home from the service, and drew his carriage to his hotel with many evidences of enthusias tic love and admiration. The scene was a stirring one, and a friend, in referring to it some weeks afterward, said. "You must have been very much pleased." Lafayette looked at him for a moment in silence and then said, with a whimsical smile:

much pleased indeed. But I never saw anything more of my horses, my dear friend!

COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, December 7.-The drop n cotton futures yesterday was entirely wiped out in the first hour today and a net gain of several points established. Influenced by firm cables and the assurance that receipts would fall several thousand bales below predictions, the market opened firm at an advance of three to eight points. Shorts covered, giving special attention to the January position, which had been heavily oversold un-der the impression that there would be a continuation of yesterday's, unloading. The local bull faction offered vigorous support, as did the investing public. Buying orders from Europe, together with a fair demand from Southern parties, kept the market in a healthy condition late in the forenoon. By midday a rise of ten points had been secured with the feeling at that time strongly bullish on predictions for Stmr Driver, Bradshaw, Fayettelight receipts throughout the rest of the week. Continued abnormally light shipments to Great Britain and private cables to the effect that Manchester Stmr Seabright, Sanders, Calabash spinners were showing great uneasi ness on account of small supplies and unusually light Liverpool stocks, were a sourch of uneasiness to the bear element. The market was finally steady, with near months eight to ten points and far months one to three points higher.
