PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION FOR WEAK WOMEN.

TOILET HINTS.
Care of the Complexion and Hands in Winter.
It is very important, especially in the winter time, that the skin should be thoroughly dried after the hands or face has been washed. A soft, dry towel should be used and every trace of moisture removed. Otherwise chapping, roughness and redness are almost sure to ensue. After walking or driving in an open carriage and always before going to bed the face should be thoroughly washed.

TOILET HINTS.
with warm water to remove all dust. To retire at night with the complexion covered with powder and atmospheric impurities is a practice which greatly impairs beauty. The French are fond of saying that one need not be beautiful, but one must not be ugly. To take care of the teeth, skin and hair, to dress neatly and becomingly and to cultivate so gently and cheerfully a disposition that its reflection softens and brightens the countenance will effectively prevent any woman from being ugly, even if she has not a good feature in her face.
The illustration shows a coat of mastic cloth, close at the back and half loose in front. It is trimmed with bands of black velvet, which are arranged so that they follow the rounded outline of the coat. Horizontal bands of velvet cover the sleeves. The collar and double revers are of black astrakhan. A black silk skirt is worn, a white mouseline cravat and a hat of black velvet trimmed with white feathers.
JUDIC CHOLLET.

ORNAMENTS.
Trimmings and Jewelry For the Winter Season.
Louis Quinze knots continue to be a favorite motive in dress decoration. They are incrustated in velvet or applied in beads on tulle, and they appear in embroidery of all kinds, forming designs about the edge of tunics.
A great deal of jewelry is worn with gowns of almost every sort, but especially with evening costumes. Brooches, barrettes, buckles and clasps are seen in all the latest fashions. Pearls, diamonds and rubies are used in all the latest designs. Birds, bees and flowers are also popular motifs.

MORNING BLOUSE.
ties, buttoneries, etc. They are used in the drapery of the bodice, at the belt, in the cravat, in the hair and upon millinery.
One of the prettiest of hat or hair ornaments is composed of small peacock plumes, the eye of the plume being set with jewels. Peacock eyes are also combined with other feathers very effectively. Butterflies of lace and spangles are also worn in the hair with evening dress.
Black velvet belts, now fashionably adopted, are very narrow, except where the buckle is attached. At that point they widen somewhat.
The morning blouse shown in the picture is of silk. It has a wide collar edged with a band of embroidery and a ruffle of lace, which continues down the front in a double jabot and around the waist. In front the blouse ties with two long ends, also embroidered and bordered with a lace ruffle. The petticoat of black silk has two circular ruffles of plain silk edged and headed with silk ruffles.

Slanders.
"Never waste time in denying slanders," said the corn fed philosopher. "Start a new slander about some one else, and yours will be forgotten."—In-Sinneapolis Journal.
Mother and Son at the Zoo.
I once watched a monkey, which had a baby in arms, being fed with grapes. The youngster was most anxious to have a grape, but his mother, being either too selfish to allow him to share her treat or afraid the fruit might not be good for her son's juvenile digestive organs, would not allow him to have any and boxed his ears soundly for being rude enough to attempt to take a grape out of her mouth. The keeper in charge said she did not "spare the rod and spoil the child" when he became "obstinate."
As his parent would not give him any fruit, the little fellow endeavored to obtain some on his own account and several times escaped from her arms and began to climb the wire netting in front of his cage, but was promptly hauled back by the tail. At length he managed to get free, and, running up to the top of his cage, put one hand through the meshes of the galvanised wire and plucked eloquently with his upturned dark little eyes for a "taster," while his mother actually bit herself in sheer rage over naughty boy's bad behavior.—Cassell's "Little Folks."

CLOCKS OF BYGONE DAYS.
Curiosities in the Museum of a Clock Making Village.
In the town of Schramberg in the Black Forest district of Wurttemberg, Germany, where one of the chief industries is clock making, there has recently been established an interesting museum of timepieces. The collection displays the gradual development in the making of clocks for many centuries.
Among the curiosities are many of great historical value. There is an alarm clock constructed in the year 1680 for the use of a watchmaker. In form it resembles a lantern and the interior is designed to hold a lighted candle. The candle is slowly pushed forward by a spring, which also controls the mechanism of the clock. A little pair of shears clip the wick of the candle automatically every minute to regulate its light. The lantern is inclosed with movable slides, so that the sleeper is not at first disturbed by the presence of light.
The alarm is set by inserting a peg in the second dial plate. When the required hour arrives, the alarm is sounded and at the same time the movable slides fall, flooding the room with light.
Among the curiosities is a Japanese saw clock. The clock itself produces the motive power by descending a saw formed strip of metal, the teeth of which operate the wheel of the clockwork. In another Japanese clock the hand is attached to a weight, which slides once in 24 hours. The time is indicated by a hand on the perpendicular scale.—Chicago Times-Herald.

SHE RAISED THEM.
A Georgia Widow's Recipe For Bringing Up Her Son.
During a visit to the army camp in Savannah General Joseph Wheeler was entertained by a party of northern men at the De Soto. When, in the good humor of the hour, the general was asked to give a little of his life, he said laughingly:
"How is it, general, that the sleepy farms of the south produce such whirlwind fighters in such small packages?"
"Well, gentlemen," said the general, puffing at a large man's cigar, "I believe I'll have to give you the answer an old 'cracker' woman once gave me when I asked her a similar question. Not many years ago she had occasion to make a saddle journey through the pine barrens of Georgia, where most everybody is a 'cracker' and mighty shiftless. One day, however, I rode into a little community that showed such signs of thrift as to be quite out of keeping with the general character of the barrens. I do assure you, gentlemen, I rode up to a cabin where a grand old woman stood in the doorway and asked her who owned these little farms that were so well kept."
"That farm for the old belongs to my son Jabez," said she, and the next day to my boy Jabez, and the next day to my lad Jason, and the next is my boy Potphar's place, and—"
"Hold on, sister," said I. "How did you manage to raise such a fine lot of boys out of here in the woods?"
"Well, stranger," she answered, "I am a wid' woman, and all I had to raise 'em on was prayer and hickory, but I raised 'em powerful frequent."—Philadelphia Post.
