WORK FOR ALL.

We have too much confidence in the patriotism of the white men of North Carolina and too much respect for their intelligence to permit ourselves to doubt that they will ratify the constitutional amendment when they are called to render their decision at the polls, but we realize on the other hand that we are confronted by wily and unscrupulous party leaders who will resort to anything to defeat it. If it were simply a contest between the white voters it would be practically no contest at all, for the vote for it would be to all intents and purposes solid, but there are in round numbers 120,000 negro voters and it is with these that their white leaders hope to defeat the amendment and perpetuate the franchise of the mob, the vile and the vicious with the well-meaning and intelligent-as few and far between as they are.

As experience has taught us how this black mass can be manipulated and controlled by the white bosses, how they can be solidly voted against anything these bosses tell them to vote against, we must be prudent and by united effort and harmonious action foil them in their schemes to defeat the will of the white people with the votes of the black. There is only one way they can do this, and that will be the result either of overconfidence among the white people which may prevent as close organization and industrious work as we should have and the systematic efforts to enlighten those who may not comprehend, or may be in doubt, or may have been misinformed, as many have been, as to the intent and scope of the proposed amendment. Yesterday we quoted part of a statement by Chas. B. Aycock, our candidate for Governor, in which he called attention to the only danger and gave a warn-

"I could hear of no Democratic disaffection anywhere in the West, but I did observe a disposition to regard our success as altogether too certain. I am impressed with the necessity of a more careful and systematic organization and detailed work. The tide is undoubtedly our way and Republicans are without enthusiasm, but their leaders are determined to make an active campaign. It is, therefore, of the uppermost importance that the local organizations in every precinct take pains to inform every voter of the real meaning of the amendment. Whenever this is done the voter has no immediate personal interest against us and is certain to vote with us.

Over-confidence, resulting in inaction, has defeated Democrats in elections in this State. We have known counties to be lost when we could call by name voters enough to have saved them, voters who never voted anything but the Demoocratic ticket when they did vote, but who felt so confident of victory that they didn't consider it necessary or worth while to go to the polls and never realized the necessity of their votes until the ballots were counted and it was discovered that the Democrats had lost, and then these over-confident, stay-athome Democrats felt like hiring tion not more than half what she some able-bodied fellow to take them out and kick them. The results involved in this elec- work together and help each other.

tion are altogether too momentous to permit us to take the chances of over-confidence or run the risk of defeat by failure to take due precaution against surprises, and to exercise due diligence not simply for victory but for such an overwhelming victory that there may be no ground for doubt or cavil, or for charges of fraud. We want a victory which will not only mean the triumph of the white man but one backed by such a majority as will give it a moral significance, one to show that the white men of North Carolina are practically a unit, and thus duly impress not only the eaders of the negroes but the negroes themselves with the unquestionable white man's country. There is work enough for us all to do in this, and glorious work, too, in which every white man who is proud of North Carolina and loves her as a loyal son should love her, should take a zealous interest and filial pride. It is a contest to determine not who or what party shall rule for the coming four years, but whether the white man or the negro is to be the power that rules, and shapes the destiny of our mother State. This is the issue and this thought should fill every white man with a holy zeal and a fixed determination to spare no effort to rescue North Carolina once and forever from the impending peril or

fact that this is and must remain a

It does not matter whether the white voter lives in a county or section of the State where the negroes are comparatively few and do not figure materially as a political power, for every white man who loves North Carolina is interested in her, and negro domination in one section is virtually negro domination in all, and whether or not, "blood is thicker than water," and when it comes to going for or against his own race, then the blood that courses through his veins demands that he should stand with his own race, as the negroes do, not simply because his race is white but because his race is the only one fit to rule themselves or others and because their rule means peace, prosperity and happiness for North Carolina, better rule for white and black alike, a better feeling between the races, because there will be less friction, less cause for race conflicts, and this in itself is a "consummation devoutly to be wished" and worth struggling for if there were nothing else to be gained. There is work for all, a grand and a glorious work for every true, white son of North Carolina.

AN OBJECT LESSON IN CO-OPE-RATION.

As an illustration of what co-operation will do when directed by good sense and business methods we clip the following from the Atlanta Con-"Our readers cannot have missed news story from Rome printed in the Constitution concerning the success of a co-operative venture in that city. Iwo years ago the molders in a local foundry went upon a strike, with the usual prospect of a long lock-out and the loss of both time and cause. Happily one of the men met Hon. Seay, a prominent and respected citizen, who asked the simple question: "Why work for another when you can work for yourselves just as well.' It was like the rising of the sun, driving darkness before it. Why not? The question lingered. It was repeated to the other men, and they called upon Mr. Seay to find out what he meant, any how. The result was the organization of a co-operative foundry, the work of which will bear repetition and studo. Every stockholder is a worker in some capacity, but there are only two salaried officers. The plant was capitalized at $20,000 and only 10 per cent. was called for at the outset. A large part of the stock was paid for by the molders in labor in the building of the plant. Some worked as carpenters, some as common laborers. So a large building was erected in North Rome, and orders booked months ahead for all of their product. At the first annual meeting a dividend of $30 per share was declared, and at the second annual meeting held last night a dividend of $37.25 per share was declared, and the capitalization increased from $20,000 to $30,000; and this concern has been the salvation of some of the men molders now near life meridian, who, though always making good salaries, had never saved a cent, but under present conditions are well fixed. They have lived well and comfortably, have their stock paid up, and are getting a magnificent dividend. All of the molders own from $500 to $1,000 in stock. A. Randle, a councilman from the fourth ward, is superintendent of the workers. If the men had been able to buy quantities of pig iron while prices were lower, their rofits would have been greater. "Mr. Seay has lost no money by his suggestion to these men. In lending them the benefit of his business know edge he has built up excellent friends and neighbors, and has furnished a esson to men of his class in other towns, who seem to be at a loss to know what to do."

One of the greatest and most imposing object lessons presented anywhere in this country is in the city of Charlotte, where not more than twenty years ago there was but one cotton mill, and that only for spinning yarn, and where there are now fourteen or fifteen. The people of that city started building mills on the co-operative plan, and now they have not only their own home mills but own a controlling interest in a

When this co-operative mill building began Charlotte was a town of seven or eight thousand people, if so many, while now she has a population of 25,000 or more. If her people had not caught on to the cooperative idea the probabilities are that Charlotte would still be a cotton trading station, with a populahas new. Mighty results are possible when people think together,

AMERICAN COTTON GOODS ABROAD

There has been much talk lately about finding foreign markets for American cotton goods, and also some speculation, in view of the rapid increase of cotton mills in the South, as to the danger of overdoing the cotton-manufacturing business. At the recent meeting of the New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association, in Boston, an address delivered by Dr. W. P. Wilson, Director of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, which presented some interesting facts and figures, showing the subordinate position this country holds as an exporter of cotton goods, although it produces over three-fourths of the world's output of cotton.

Last year the United States exported $23,000,000 worth cotton goods, while little Switzerland, which is so small and so modest that but little is heard of her, exported $25,000,000 worth, and Great Britain, which buys most of her raw cotton from us, exported $328,000,000 worth. If we deduct from the $23,000,000 exported the cost of the cotton goods imported the amount to our credit on exports would be very materially reduced.

It is only within the past few years, however, that earnest effort has been made to enter foreign markets, even those in neighboring countries, where from proximity and other reasons we ought to lead. Until it began to be a matter of necessity our manufacturers seemed to be content with the home market and when that became overstocked they reduced production until the surplus stock was worked off. But with the increase in the number of mills this course had to be abandoned as involving too much loss of time and money and foreign markets became a necessity.

But the fact that Great Britain, which imports the bulk of her cotton from this country, can export $328, 000,000 worth annually, shows the possibilities there are in the cotton manufacturing business, and the little danger there is of overdoing it. The world must have the goods, and more every year, in accordance with the ability of people to buy and pay for what they buy, so that it is simply a question as to who can furnish the world's needs at the lowest price. Surely American millers should be able to successfully compete with the English millers, and snatch a good many millions of their trade away from them. As this country is the world's cotton producer, it ought to control the cotton goods trade and have the larger part of it.

Artist Rehn, who occupies a room on the tenth floor of one of the New York hotels, is so stuck on it after a trial of sixteen years, during which time he has paid $16,980 rental for it. that he has just concluded a lease for 48 years at a rental of $1,000 a year. By the time the lease expires the total rental for the term of occupancy will amount to $67,840. As he is now something over 40 years old, he doesn't expect to have use all that time for "Spion Kop," as the hotel boys call his lair, but thinks his children and grandchildren might like to frolic around among the souvenirs he will leave.

If that Philadelphia woman who attempted suicide because she was growing bald had read the papers she would not have tried to get away with herself for such an insufficient reason as that. She would have bought some of that never-failing hair-propelling stuff and revelled in a luxuriant top growth that would have made the circus Caucasian girl green with envy. Some Philadelphia women are so behind the times.

HAD SOME EXPERIENCE.

But the Cornet Player Didn't Get the Place He Wanted.

"Have I had any experience?" repeated the amateur musician, who wanted to play second cornet in the D. C. and A. C. symphony orchestra. "I should certainly say I have."

"Where have you played?" inquired
Director Rothleder. He makes it a rule to find out something about unknown amateurs who want to join the orchestra

"just for practice, you know."
"Where have I played? Well, everywhere, I guess. I helped to make Pittsburg a musical center years ago when some of these guys with long names and scraggy locks didn't know the key of B flat from K sharp. "Years ago, when I worked over on the South Side in the glass house I was the best 'kennett' player around here. One day I was walking along Smithfield when

George Teorge, you know him, saw me on the other side of the street.

"'Hey,' he shouts, 'I was just going over to the glass house to get you. want you to play for us tonight-me at the piano and me brother at the violin and you with your kennett. Swell affair, dress suits, white ties and all that, you know, out in the East End. Big reception. Be at the Union depot at 7 sharp. "Well, I said I'd be there, and we went to the reception. Mighty fine people and all that, you know, and the three of us, the Teorges and meself, got into position to give them some classical selections in he music room. "The first thing we played was a waltz in six flats, and I had never seen it afore But I pressed down the flat keys of me gold kennett and got ready. "'Cut 'er loose,' says George, and cuts her loose. Well, sir, I was right with 'em. I played all around them. "Then George he hunts out a polka in 11 sharps and hands over the kennett part to me. I suspected he was putting up a job of some sort, but I says nothing. So I pressed down the sharp keys of me kennett, and I was right with 'em, repeats, cadenzoos, introductions and all the rest. The people stopped dancing to come and watch me play, and I could see some of the other fellows were getting jealous. Then George borrowed the key of the attic from the lady of the house and went up stairs and hunted around until he found some old music in 14 flats. He gave me my part and says, 'Cut 'er oose,' and, well, sir, I was right with 'em. When I got through, I was surrounded with bouquets. After that the lady of the house says I must play a solo, so I cleans out me gold kennett and gives them 'Home, Sweet Home.' It made such an impression on the guests that they all went home before I got through. After considering the application Di-rector Rothleder decided that there was no vacancy for a second "kennett" player in the orchestra just at present .-Pittsburg Press.

HE LIKED THE CARTOON.

Story of Ingersoil and an Artist Who Caricatured Him. A New Orleans artist tells this interesting little story of the late Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll: "Over 20 years ago, when I was a boy between 14 and 15, Colonel Ingersoll was creating great excitement among the devout by his first assaults on orthodox religion. I always had a knack for pen and ink sketching, and one day I drew a cartoon represent ing the great agnostic registering at the Hotel de Inferno. The devil was behind the desk as clerk and was supposed to be saying: 'Front! Make up a nice bed of coals in No. 114 for Colonel Ingersoll!" "Without telling anybody of it for fear of being laughed at I sent this not overbrilliant production to the New York Daily Graphic, which was then at the zenith of its career as 'the only illustrated daily in the world.' My father subscribed for The Graphic, and you may well believe that I scanned it with fever ish interest every evening when it arriv ed at our home. Finally, after the lapse of a couple of weeks, I was struck dumb one day to see my cartoon on the front page. It had my name in bold letters across the corner, and I am certain there was no prouder or happier boy in the whole country. I never got any pay for the drawing, but I basked in local fame and was fully satisfied. "It so happened about a month later that Colonel Ingersoll came to town to deliver his then famous lecture on 'The Mistakes of Moses,' and he was standing in front of his hotel chatting with some gentlemen when I passed by and was pointed out as the author of the recent cartoon in The Graphic. "'What! that boy!' exclaimed Ingersoll. 'Call him over.' "They did so, and when I was told that the jovial, portly stranger was really the redoubtable agnostic whom I had pictured in the infernal regions I was ready to sink with embarrassment. Colonel Ingersoll observed my confusion and put me at my ease by declaring the cartoon had amused him immensely. Then he inquired kindly what instruction I was receiving in drawing and ended by sending to his room for a copy of his printed lectures, which he presented to me, after writing his name on the fly leaf.

"I was a grown man when I met him again and must have changed greatly, but he gave me a quick, keen look when we shook hands and asked me whether we had not encountered before. 'I seem to have you associated with something, he said, 'some incident, I cannot remember what.' The episode was rather awkward to recall, so I made an evasive reply and after chatting a moment passed on."-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Touchstone of Amiability. Is there any woman who cannot be amiable? Do not understand me to mean the forced sweetness that degenerates into flattery. Such an attitude is unworthy. The first definition of "amiable" given in the dictionary is "worthy of love." To be worthy of love we must get ourselves into right relationship with the world. Love begets love, and the woman who would be amiable in the highest sense must learn to love her fellow man. She should seek out the older people and find what delightful companionship she has hitherto missed. If she will sympathize with the younger in their affairs of heart and ambition. The love affair of Jack of 21 and Betty of 18 may seem to her foolish in the light of her larger, deeper experience, but she should remember her own life story and bring some of the great tenderness which seeks for an outlet to the unraveling of their tangled skeins of perplexity.—Tem-ple Bailey in Woman's Home Companion.

An Eccentric Maori Princess. The Maoris of New Zealand are a curious mixture of the old and new order. There is a Maori princess today, for instance, who was in her youth very handsome. She and her cousin, whom she was to marry, won great praise many years ago by swimming out to a wreck through a terrific sea, carrying a life line. She is quite a personage in society, dresses as well as the white women, does her hair elegantly and has a beautiful house. But if anything brings a concourse of natives to her vicinity she at once becomes a Maori and may be seen with her hair so lately beautifully coiffured tangled about her face and shoulders and wreathed with willow, crouching on the ground smoking a pipe or joining the tangi or nose rubbing.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

COTTON MARKETS. By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Speculation in cotion was very dull to-day and prices took a lower level. The opening call showed a loss of two to four points, which later transactions increased to eight to eleven points. The decline followed unsatisfactory cables and improved weather news in general; the feature of the latter being reports of better conditions in flood threatened districts of Texas. Selling orders from the South, many of which were said to be for planters, constituted an im-portant point and brought pressure on the market. Selling for the European and Wall street account was also con. siderable. As far as the general public took any part their orders were rather for selling than for buying cotton, in the expectation of poor cables to mor. row, estimated larger receipts and following unsatisfactory accounts from dry goods centres. Shorts were the principal buyers. The market closed SPIRITS TURPENTINE .- Market irm at 46% cents per gallon for machine made casks and 46 cents per

THE COTTON SITUATION

Stock Smallest on Record Since 1890 When Cotton Sold at 122 Cents. By Telegraph to the Morning Star NEW YORK, May 1 .- Messrs. Price,

McCormick & Co., in their circular, saued to day, say: The stock at all the United States ports is reduced this evening to 400,000 bales, against 500,000 on the 21st of April, or a net loss of 100 000 bales in ten days. Allowing 60,000 bales on shipboard not cleared and 40,000 bales overestimate in the New York stock, the net stock is reduced to about 300, 000 bales. These figures are the smallest on record since 1890, when cotton sold at 124 cents per pound. The present consumption is 50 per cent. greater than in 1890. The bears here are vainly selling paper contracts in an effort to force the Southern holders of their small remnant of cotton to part with it at a decline in value, but their operations cannot have any very pronounced effect as long as those who hold the actual cotton recognize the unprecedented strength of the situa-
