The closing feature of the North

The trip was made on the commodious enjoyable one. Stops were made at both places. The Wilmington also made a short run to sea and on the return trip ran alongside the revenue cutter Algonquin, lying at anchor at Southport, and the visitors were welcomed aboard by Capt. Willey, the cleyer commander of the cutter.

After sharpening up the expectancies of the unsophisticated Red Birds to the degree that an even break was possible the Giants yesterday afternoon carried off a fourth victory and now with the horse editor gives King Kelly's Konquered Klub the horse laugh.

The game yesterday was the best of the three played here this week, which is saying a good deal, as both Thursday and Friday's games were "corkers." However, the contest yesterday had the advantage of being the final one, so to speak, as each club went in to "do or die," and it's "up to" the Birds to give the funeral. But, then, they want to keep up with the procession even if they have to ride in the hearse.

The game was witnessed by about 600 people and there never was a time that their interest was allowed to lag. The Giants played winning ball from the jump, notwithstanding the fact that Crockett in the second made his semi-annual error and allowed one of the Birds to fly across the pan. But for this the visitors would have suffered their second shut out this week. Later, Crockett atoned for the error nobly by making the most phenom enal catch of many moons. It was perfect high-way robbery of Stanley's expected two bagger. Seabring also made a star play by making a long throw from left field home, after fail ing to catch a difficult flyer. Both were brilliant plays and merit more than passing comment, but as the horse editor claims the distinction for his department why, of course, the religious editor will have to subside. Wilmington tallied her runs in the first and fifth, while Raleigh scored in the second. In the first it was one. two, three and out for Raleigh, Stanley going out on a hit to second, Kelly fanned and Atz popped to Warren. Clayton made a bad beginning for the Giants-very, very strange to say-by fanning, but Devlin followed with a other peg on Sherman's wild throw. Crockett gave Kelly a hot grounder, which his Kinglets let go by and Davy covered the initial bag as Dev lin crossed the rubber. Stafford went out and Sebring, next up, thrashed

The second gave the Birds their only run. Sorber was given life to first after Henneger had hit to Stewart and out and just before Sherman fanned. On a pass ball by Thackara, Sorber went to second and then home on Crockett's muff of LeGrand's high flyer. Venable retired the side by hitting to Stewart. The Giants' time at the bat availed nothing, although Warren made a pretty single, and subsequently went to second on Mc Ginnis's knock to the box. In the third, after Person and Stanley had lost out, the former fanning. Kelly and Atz both obtained singles, but Henneger could not save the day. He gave Crockett a high one, and thus ended the third for Raleigh.

From this inning until the fifth not hit, except a single by Crockett, was made, but in the fifth the Giants cruelly shattered the Red Birds' 'vague hopes," and that, too, after Stewart and Clayton were chalked down. Deylin singled, stole second and scored on Crockett's No. 2 single. Stafford likewise singled and Crock ett scored. Sebring singled and Starford moved to third, where he died, as Thackara fanned. It was also in the fifth that Sebring made his feature play. With Venable after a very short session adjourned on second, which base was obtained on a pass to first and a sacrince of Person, he failed to make a running catch of Stanley's fly to left field, but recovered the ball quickly and threw it homeward, cutting Venable off within a few feet of the plate.

The sixth netted one hit by Atz, but Crockett made a pretty double and made his joy short. He stopped Person's "hot one," touched Atz, who was journeying to second, and then doubled Person at first.

The rest of the game was devoid of hits, save for a single made by Venable in the seventh and one by Atz in the eighth.

In the eighth "Davy" got in his phenomenal work when the Birds in their half presented their strongest batters. Stanley, the "slugger," toed the scratch first and after a couple or breath holding fouls hit a mighty line drive between first and second, which looked good for two bags, but "Davy" was equal to the emergency and brought it down with his left hand, while the crowd made the welkin ring for several minutes. The drive was a terrific one and is estimated at five feet above "Davy's" head.
