WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 29.

JUMPING ON BABCOCK.

The Republican leaders, who have not the remotest idea of letting the tariff question come up for discussion in Congress if they can prevent it, are doing all they can to bluff Representative Babcock, who says he is going to introduce a bill to put upon the free list all articles made by trusts, exported and sold in other countries at a lower price than the same articles are sold to purchasers in this country. He had scarcely announced his purpose when Senator Hanna, in a publish ed interview, jumped on him and declared that if such a bill were passed the steel manufacturers in Canada would be dumping steel into New England and would ruin our steel makers, although our steel makers boast that they can make steel cheaper than it can be made in any other country in the world Senator Hanna, however, disposed of the Babcock movement by pronouncing it so absurd that it was not "worthy of serious consideration." Mr. Hanna is very close to Mr. McKinley. Senator Depew, who has just returned from Europe, had himself interviewed on the question of tariff legislation as it would apply to trusts, and declared that a reduction of duties, or putting trust made articles on the free list, is just what the European manufacturers are longing for and hope to see, for then he says, the European manufacturer can dump their surplus on this country - just as our protected manufacturers dump their surplus stocks on Europe. He does not explain the particular process by which they could do that when our manufacturers are shipping their goods to the countries where these manufacturers operate and are selling them for less than the home made articles sell for, and are underselling these same manufacturers in the markets of the world where they compete. If our manufacturers can ship goods to the other side of the globe and sell them as low or lower than their European competitors can, why should they fear the competition of these manufacturies in this market when the goods made in Europe must be shipped across three thousand miles of ocean? Mr. Depew didn't explain how they would do that. But he wasn't in an explanatory mood, he was simply talking to create a sentiment against the Babcock proposition. Mr. Depew, by the way, is another gentleman who stands close to Mr. McKinley, close enough to give him a grand send off for a third term, without a preliminary understanding with Mr. McKinley, who was somewhat embarrassed by it, for if permitted to go along without any word from him it might strain the cordial relations between him and his friend Hanna, who is squinting in the direction of the White House himself, and expects Mr. McKinley's co-operation in getting there.

The next jumper of national reputation is General Grosvenor, of Ohio, who spent the Summer in Europe and reached home a few days ago. He had hardly landed when an interview with him on shipboard by a correspondent of the Philadelphia Press (an organ of the President, controlled by a member of his Cabinet), who crossed the ocean with him, was published in the Press. That there might be no mistakes Gen. Grosvenor wrote the interview himself. The gist of the pronunciamento is contained in the first three paragraphs, which read thus:

"I read with some interest Mr. Babcock's letter, written from Marienbad. Austria, to a Milwaukee friend and published in the Press. I am glad to see that the writer has fled from his former position in regard to changes in the tariff, but I regret to observe that he has taken up a much more indefensible one. Despite his assurance that he is a Republican protectionist, it will appear by a careful reading of his paper that he is a free trader upon all important points. He is a theoret tectionist, but a practical free

"The bill introduced in the Fiftysixth Congress, second session, by Mr. Babcock was intended to place upon the free list all the manufactures of iron and steel coming to this country, the like of which are made in the United States by a 'trust.' The wording of the bill said so and left nothing to construction. If enacted into law it would have admitted in our ports free of duty the products of the great German trusts and those of the trusts of all other countries. Such a law would be impossible of enforcement, for the ons which suggest themselves any intelligent person.

"Shortly before Mr. Babcock sailed to Europe in an authentic interview, printed in the Washington and other printed in the Washington and other newspapers, he said that he would introduce in the House in December a bill to place on the free list all the articles coming to us and the like of which are manufactured by any 'trust' in the United States, and all the long Summer since the free trade papers of the United States have been giving the idea hearty support. But now it appears Mr. Babcock has received new light, and cheerfully abandons his former position and writes a long letter to show how he has been misunderstood, and also to redefine his position. The preamble to the new suggestion rehearses that formerly he had adopted the province idea for the purpose of building up our industries to enable them to supply our own wants, but now he may that it has come to pass that some articles, the like of which we formerly imported we now can produce and except, and he proceeds to propose an act to place all such articles on the free trader in all the land could ask for nothing better than this. The test is to be that he can now sell a certain article in a foreign market. When this fact is found to exist the tariff is to be taken off and all the world is to invited to invade our markets with market. There is all the difference in the world in these two propositions and Gen. Grosvenor knows it, for

Mr. Babcock supports his position by asserting that if the American trusts can manufacture and sell in other countries in competition with foreign competitors, at as low or lower prices than they can, and at a considerably less price than they demand at home, it is proof conclusive that they have nothing to fear from foreign competition, and,

therefore, do not need tariff protection, the only result of which is to enable them to extort mere money from their home purchasers. That's

Mr. Babcock's position and Gen.

Grosvenor knew it when he wrote that interview, and yet "honorable"

and truthful man as he is he deliberately misrepresents it. He was too anxious to jump on Mr. Babcock, who proposes to jump on the trusts.

BOOK NOTICES.

"The Eternal City," by Hall Caine, is the title of a very interesting novel just issued from the presses of D. Apoleton & Company, 72 Fifth avenue, New York. It is a book of 638 pages, clearly printed, neatly and substan tially bound in cloth. This is a clever production of one the cleverest writers of the day.

The September number of the At lantic Monthly presents a varied and interesting list of contents of a literary, scientific, political and art char acter. There are some sixteen papers in all, many of them able and all in teresting. Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., No. 6 Park street, Bos-

CURRENT COMMENT

- The statement that there is a scarcity of beef is a lie given out to excuse the increase in price contemplated. The Beef Trust is a concern, like many others, that is protected from foreign competition by our tariff, and it is not obliged to make any excuse for its "hair-raising" programme, but it does.— Brooklyn Citizen, Dem.

-- The little city of Huntsville, Ala., is about to secure its tenth cotton mill, which will be a very large and fine one. It will be a pioneer in the South in the lines of shirtings and ginghams, goods that are not yet made to any appreciable amount in this section. Huntsville is fast becoming a leading center of the spinning trade. - Chattanooga

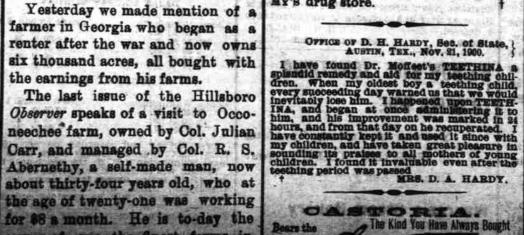

- The limit appears to have been reached in building big ships. There is room enough for the monsters at sea, but there are few ports where they can get enough to the land to be cheaply loaded and unleaded. The increasing draught of steamships of late years has compelled the expenditure of many millions of dollars in deepening the channels of approach to the harbors and wharves of maritime cities .-Philadelphia Record, Dem.

- A dispatch from Manila says that the town of Apparri gave Governor Taft the greatest ovation he has yet received, and that Governor Taft promised Apparri that it should be a port of entry and should receive a large appropriation for the improvement of its harbor. It does not appear, however, whether the ovation was given on account of the promise of an appropriation, or whether the promise of an appropriation was made on account of the ovation .-Charleston News and Courier, Dem.

Hobbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, Pa., was the subject, is narrated by him as fol-lows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in the back and sides, and no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had Maryland farmer who began as a given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying Electric Bitters, and to thirty farms and will have this year a crop of 100,000 bushels of wheat,

I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at R. R. BELLAMY's drug store.

- Greensboro Record: Just before Judge Shaw adjourned court for the term on Saturday afternoon, Roscoe Murrow, the young man convicted of intimacy with a girl under the age of fourteen was sentenced to serve seven years on the roads or pay $1,500 to the use of the girl and $500 to the county school fund, through his counsel, decided to serve out his sentence instead of paying out and was taken to jail at once. To-day he was sent to the roads. It is a most remarkable case. Young Murrow still stoutly protests his innocence and says he would serve fourteen years before he would pay her a cent. He is 22 years old and when he shall have completed his term he will be 29 years of age. It is said that his father can easily raise the money but that the son declared he would not allow him to do so, protesting that he was innecent and to pay out was not the proper thing to do. The sor row of his mother and wife as well as other relatives was pitiful, that of the mother especially, who hoped for acquittal to the very last. It is clear that public opinion sustains the jury. All of Mr. Murrow's friends told him after the first day of the trial that his son would be convicted—that there was no other hope from the evidence adduced. One thing is sure, if he is innocent, he is one of the most injured men who
