CARNIVAL COMMITTEES WORKING FAITHFULLY.

Enthusiastic Meeting of Elks Last Night in Interest of the Big Fair Week Next Month—Prospects.

After the regular meeting of Wilmington Lodge No. 833, B. P. O. E. last night, the Carnival Executive Committee held a most interesting meeting at which encouraging reports from all the sub-committees were received. The amusement committee has designated Thursday of fair week as "Elks' Day," a feature of which will be an Elks' parade, participated in by all visiting lodges, each one of which will bring its own band and contribute to the gaiety of the festive week. The lodge appearing in the most unique costume will receive a handsome prize, and there will also be prizes for the tallest Elk, the shortest Elk and many other species of the antlered tribe in line.

The subscription committee promises in a few days to publish a list of all contributors to the carnival fund; also contributors of articles to the stock of the country fair. For the last named feature contributions are coming from a distance on every train.

The advertising committee yesterday began billing the town for the big event, but a majority of the sheets did not arrive until yesterday, consequently the greatest work in this line will not be visible until to-day.

Mr. G. O. Litt, the great fair promoter, will likely reach the city to-day and begin work in dead earnest.

The public comfort committee is already casting about for accommodations for the crowds that are expected, and Mr. C. O. Chabouras, the chairman, will shortly establish an office where he will be glad to hear from those who can furnish board and lodging for visitors on this occasion.

Every department of the work is being handled with great care and the success of the event is certain beyond peradventure.

ASSAULTED JUSTICE BORNEMANN;

Well Known Magistrate Had an Altercation Which Ended Severely for Him.

Mr. Robert E. Daniels, formerly a deputy sheriff of the county, but now a clerk at the S. J. Davis Livery Company's stables, on Market street, submitted to Justice McGowan last night for an assault upon Justice G. W. Bornemann. The submission will be heard Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Justice Bornemann, as a result of the altercation, has two large black eyes and other injuries about the face, which were treated after the assault, which occurred last night about 7 o'clock, by Dr. W. J. H. Bellamy.

The altercation occurred in Justice Bornemann's store, where Mr. Daniels went to assist the proprietor for an alleged indignity in asking Mrs. Daniels to leave the place some time previous. When Mr. Daniels demanded an apology for harsh treatment which he had heard the justice had shown his wife, Mr. Bornemann is said to have become angry and threateningly approached Mr. Daniels, who defended himself. Both sides of the case will be heard in the magistrate's court.

CITY IN MOURNING.

Memorial Services and Observance in Wilmington Were General and Fitting.

AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Hundreds Gathered There and Participated in Exercises of Humiliation and Prayer—St. James' Episcopal Church—On the Streets.

The sympathy of the people of a grand old Southern city, mingled with a feeling of sadness, upon the tragic death of our ruler, the late President, found glorious expression in Wilmington yesterday in the memorial services, elaborately planned and executed in his honor. Wherever services were held the attendance was large and thoroughly cosmopolitan—representative of all classes and conditions of men.

At the First Baptist Church the joint service of a majority of the congregations of the city was, perhaps, the most elaborate. The large main auditorium of the building was literally packed with people and the galleries were likewise filled. It is estimated that fully fifteen hundred persons were present, while many others were turned away. The exercises lasted a little more than an hour and were exceedingly appropriate and in keeping with the proclamation of reverence and prayer. The decorations were simple but in good taste. Around the pulpit was a profuse cluster of United States and Pythian flags appropriately draped. A shield of red and blue with the stars and stripes was in evidence where the colors fell in graceful folds over the gallery railings.

The service opened with a dirge, "Departed Comrades" (Keller) by the Second Regiment Band, which played from the gallery over the entrance to the church. There were present upon the platform, Rev. Dr. Calvin S. Blackwell, pastor of the First Baptist church; Rev. Dr. A. D. McClure, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church; Rev. Dr. A. G. Voigt, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church; Rev. Dr. S. Mendelssohn, rabbi of the Temple of Israel; Rev. Jno. H. Hall, pastor of Fifth Street M. E. church; Rev. R. H. Herring, pastor of Southside Baptist church; Rev. Dr. G. D. Bernheim, pastor emeritus of St. Matthew's Lutheran church; Rev. C. W. Kegley, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church; Rev. J. P. King, pastor of the Second Advent church; and Rev. P. C. Morton.

Following the dirge by the band the congregation and choir sang with much effect and spirit of patriotism, "My Country 'tis of Thee." In the choir were Misses Carrie S. White, Norma Foster and Mattie Lee Horne, soprano; Mrs. E. G. Woody, alto; Messrs. C. H. Cooper, R. F. Fowler and W. L. Willford, tenors; Messrs. O. S. Grainger, J. S. Williams and A. S. Holden, basses; Mr. E. H. Munson and Mr. Alf. H. Yopp, organists.

Following the song was a very solemn invocation by Rev. P. C. Morton, after which a male quartet consisting of Messrs. C. H. Cooper, R. F. Fowler, Jas. S. Williams and A. S. Holden, rendered the beautiful selection: "Remember Now thy Creator," by Rhodes.

Rev. Dr. Mendelssohn read from the Old Testament Scriptures, Second Samuel, third chapter, 26th to 39th verses, and Dr. Blackwell read an appropriate lesson from Luke, 22nd chapter, 39th to 49th verses.

Rev. Jos. P. King offered a beautiful prayer and then there were three ten minute addresses in their order as follows, all of which were listened to with great attention and profit:

Rev. A. G. Voigt, D. D. "We have assembled here not to pronounce funeral eulogies on our President, although it is hard not to do so; nor to express our horror and execration of the atrocious deed that caused his death, although prayer is not to restrain one's self from so doing. The newly inaugurated President of the United States has most fittingly, as his first official act, appointed this day of mourning and prayer. In so doing he has met the wish of the great heart of the nation. It was hardly necessary to appoint a day of mourning, for from the black hour when the fatal bullet pierced the body of our beloved President until this hour the whole land has been filled with mourning. Probably never in the history of our country has there been such a manifestation of universal sorrow as this in which we, though a vast throng, bear but a feeble part. Even without the proclamation of the President this would have been a day of mourning.

"Nor did the people wait for the head of the nation to say, 'Let us pray.' The heart of the people has spontaneously been poured out in prayer. The people have turned aside from their habitual petitions to concentrate their longings in the one request for the life of the President and the comfort of his dear widow, who so bravely bears the trial which is her personal grief and our common sorrow. And I believe that many who are not wont to pray for their own needs, have in these hours lifted up their souls in prayer to God for the common object of the nation's solicitude.

"We mourn to-day, we weep with the widow for him, who as husband was to her a delight as he is an honor to the nation. We mourn the untimely death of a President, who by his wisdom in the administration of public affairs, by his amability and urbanity in private and domestic life endeared himself to the whole country. We mourn for a man who, as many distinguished men are not, was a master character as well as a master mind. It seems to me one of the highest testimonies of his worth and wisdom as President is to be found in the wide spread apprehension that his successor will not be like him. In these days of sorrow nothing has given the country greater assurance than the announcement by President Roosevelt of his intention to continue the policies of President McKinley. It is as if the united voice of the country were addressing him and saying: 'Go on. Continue in the course of the noble man whose mantle has fallen upon you.' Continue in that course until the end of your administration, and you will receive as your noble predecessor now receives from a grateful country the plaudit: 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant of the people.'

"We mourn for a good President. But we have reason to mourn also for ourselves and our nation. We must confess before God we are a guilty nation. This one chief cause of infamy that has afflicted the soul of the people to its depths is but one of countless deeds of wickedness that are committed in our borders; however much we may lament the past, we must be blind to the fact that it does not stand isolated and disconnected from the injustice and oppression and greed that prevail in this and other lands. This day of national mourning is a time for us to say with the psalmist: 'Thou hast set our iniquities before Thy, our secret sins in the light of Thy countenance. It is in Thy mercy to pray to God to purify our hearts, to purify our nation, and so to establish us in righteousness that such a crime as this should not be repeated. The head of the nation will become a moral impossibility among us.'

"Our new President has appointed this to be a day of prayer. Doubtless he was prompted to do this by the overwhelming sorrow on account of his and our chief. It seems to me that he must have been touched, also, by a sense of the grave responsibilities he has just assumed. But whatever actuated him, he needs our prayers. Every man who assumes the duties of the presidency needs the prayers of the people. Be it our prayer, therefore, to pray for our young President. May he receive wisdom, guidance and strength from God on high, in whom we trust now with minds chastened by sorrow and humiliation let us turn to a more pleasing thought. The life and administration of President McKinley has done much to raise the nation and strengthen the unity of the people. His death has done still more. There is comfort in this thought as we in spirit stand by the grave while the body of our ruler lies in state and over to the ground. Even in the sadness and gloom of this day we can rejoice, with Senator Hoar, who said: 'Thank God, there is no division in the people to-day. Both our Protestants and Catholics, native born and foreign born, are mingling their sorrow. The coward blow that has stricken our nation has been strengthened the life of the nation.'

Reverend John H. Hall.

When Moses and Aaron died the congregation mourned for them, and so did the Israelites when Samuel passed away. The same holds true of the civil rulers of the people, yet they were also their leaders in a higher and better way. All of them had been chosen to lead the children of God, communicating, by word and example, the will of God to the people. Being faithful to their high trust till the day they were greatly mourned in their land, they died as they lived, and far removed from these in time and circumstances but not in character another leader, our chief, William McKinley, has fallen and is mourned as truly as the children of God were they. The strongest evidence of devotion to lofty ideals and near approach thereto which a nation can furnish to the world has been furnished by us and that is, true and heartfelt sorrow for the death of our chief and righteous indignation and horror for the manner thereof. God's greatest gift to our nation is a man of such upright and noble character as our President and the devil's greatest curse is such an one as his slayer. The one from above and the other from below. The one stands for law, order, righteousness and peace while the other is the enemy of them all. He belongs to that class which breaks down the carved tablets of God's law with axes and hammers and casts fire into His sanctuary and defiles by casting down the dwelling place of God's name to the ground. In the garden of the Lord the thistle for the fig, and the apples of Sodom for the fruit of life. With whips and scorpions they scourged the children of God, and they play ground and hush forever their songs and shouts at prayer. But, thank God, their number is small and doomed to become smaller. If not extinct.

"They shall go down to the vile dust. From whence they sprung. Unwept, unmourned, unending."

But the virtues of our dead President shall be told in song and story for a king and men shall delight to do him honor. Like Moses, he was the leader of his people over rough and rugged ways and like him he was a man of God, a man who sought divine guidance in the discharge of his high and delicate duties, and still further like him in people into the earthly Canaan. But God reserved something better for him—a crown of righteousness, a home in the Father's house, a membership in the general assembly, and the spirit of just men made perfect and our elder brother. He went to his rest, and men shall sing and praise his name and sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. A man of lofty purpose, of unimpeachable character, of a pure nature, of a loving, tender, affectionate soul—one of God's noblest and best—that grand old name of gentleman. Blameless in his private and official life, as gentle and sympathetic as a woman, as brave and as true as a soldier, who so bravely bore the burden of our nation's sins, and in his visit to them his bright smiles and kindly words fell upon them like a ray of sunlight on a prison wall. And what was more was to her a delight as he is an honor to the nation. We mourn the untimely death of a President, who by his wisdom in the administration of public affairs, by his amability and urbanity in private and domestic life endeared himself to the whole country. We mourn for a man who, as many distinguished men are not, was a master character as well as a master mind. It seems to me one of the highest testimonies of his worth and wisdom as President is to be found in the wide

Rev. Dr. A. D. McClure.

Dr. McClure began by reading the first five verses of the thirteenth chapter of the Apostle Paul's letter to the Romans, and said:

"This is the message of the Apostle by inspiration to his day and suits the conditions that call us together to-day. As a nation we are guilty in the terms here used. It is time to realize this. There is too little regard and reverence for office bearers in our country; we are hasty and rash in our fault finding and criticisms. It is enough that a man be of the opposite party to be condemned. But the scriptures say, 'Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.' Our fault in this is but a part of our national sin that gives excuse and license to men to go further and kill any such ruler as our late lamented President, whom we mourn to-day. I wish to call attention to this and to raise my voice to condemn it.

2. Another sin may be mentioned as important here, because it is the evidence of a wide spread and serious national tendency. This is the spirit of lawlessness, and disrespect for authority. It appears in our lynchings. President McKinley feared this and said, 'Do not let them hurt him.' There is crime in our Southland which is base and I yield to none in denouncing it. It does not warrant the hasty procedure I recall published without a due process of law. That only adds means let the trial be speedy and the execution of the penalty swift. But let the law have its due course. It is time for us all to create and cultivate a public sentiment to uphold the majesty of the law. Anarchy is a contempt for law and order.

3. Nothing but religion can cure this evil. 'Righteousness exalteth a nation, and righteousness is true religion in relation to God and to man.' In this I hear a call to carry our religion to these godless and lawless ones. I hear a call for home missions to enlighten and save. By all means let the guilty be punished. But let us try to redeem and save as far as possible.

If any one says I cannot understand how the will of God is done in the death of President McKinley, so good and so great, I point to this assembly called together; to the thousands assembled throughout our country as we are; to the unity of our minds, our hearts and the union of our patriotism, expressed and promoted by this thinking of what it means to the President. I recall an incident of a railroad employe on his way to execute a command. His train was flagged and he was ordered to report to the superintendent. He was stopped in the way of duty and called to the presence of our Great Master. He is only promoted as he hears the bidding: 'Friend, come up higher.'

The Remaining Exercises.

Upon conclusion of the addresses, Dr. Blackwell read with much feeling a touching poem, "Death Has Crowned Him a Martyr," written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox soon after the death of the President.

The solo, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," (E. VanLaer) was sweetly rendered by Miss Mattie Lee Horne and Rev. R. H. Herring offered a very fervent prayer after which "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung with much effect by the congregation. Rev. C. W. Kegley pronounced the benediction.

The Services at St. James'.

The service for the Episcopal congregation of the city at St. James' church was largely attended and the Rev. Dr. James Carmichael spoke with much feeling and appropriate ness upon the life and character of the deceased President. The music was also befitting the occasion and greatly enjoyed.

General Observance in the City.

The day as a whole in Wilmington was spent as one of mourning and sadness. Many business houses and offices were closed for the entire day; others were closed for part of the day or during the services at the churches.

Several of the colored congregations held memorial services during the day, notably St. Mark's Episcopal and St. Stephen's M. E. churches.

At noon the Wilmington Division, Naval Reserve, fired a salute of twenty-one guns in honor of the dead President.

Mr. and Mrs. Huggins Bereaved.

Friends in the city will extend to Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Huggins tender sympathy in the death of their infant son, John Cantwell, which occurred at the family residence, Eighth and Princess streets, last night at 10 o'clock. The funeral will be from the late residence at 4 o'clock this afternoon, with interment in Oakdale cemetery.

Moore & Frisk, Bankrupts.

Southport Standard: "Messrs. T. L. Vines, Jackson Standan and Peter Rouk, the appraisers appointed in the Moore & Frisk bankruptcy case, met at Shallotte on Tuesday and appraised the real estate and personal property of the bankrupts in the bankruptcy firm. It develops that there is only about $1,100 resources in sight, after deductions of real estate and personal property exceptions are made, while the estate is valued at $4,800. The assets of the late Capt. E. D. Gilbert, partner in the bankruptcy proceedings, hold claims aggregating about $4,800."

Married Last Night.

At the residence of Mrs. Sutton, Fourth and Chesnut streets, Rev. Dr. A. D. McClure last night performed the solemn ceremony which made man and wife Miss Dornie Currie and Mr. Frank P. McDougall, late of Snow Hill, N. C., but now of this city. Mr. and Mrs. McDougall will reside at No. 311 Chesnut street.

STEAMER SEABRIGHT.

Doubtful Now Whether She Can be Taken Off the Bald Head Shoals.

ATTEMPT MADE YESTERDAY.

Boat Is Too Far From Deep Water for Tugs to Get at Her—Second Examination Will be Made To-day and Final Disposition Determined.

The coastwise steamer Seabright, of the Wilmington and Little River Transportation Company, of this city, reported in these columns yesterday as being stranded and in a perilous position off Bald Head Island, was not moved yesterday and it is now doubtful with the owners if she can be saved at all.

Her position is still extremely dangerous and tugs of appreciable size can approach no nearer than between 500 and 600 yards. The gale of Tuesday afternoon sent her away up almost "high and dry" upon the island and it would be indeed a herculean task to get her into deep water again. It is reasonably certain that the anchor jabbard a big hole in her hull just under the boiler and if this is the case her condition is very critical.

The steamer Compton, Capt. W. A. Sanders, went to the wreck yesterday morning but could get at no convenient distance to pull upon the boat. He proceeded at once on his regular run to Little River, S. C., but will return to-day and make a closer examination of the condition of the wreck and her location with regard to the channel. This will be done on low tide when the vessel is almost entirely out of water. When this is done, the disposition of the wreck will be determined.

The Seabright was built in 1880, at Oceanport, New Jersey, and is 72 feet long, 15.9 feet in breadth and 4.7 feet deep. She has a gross tonnage of 38 and a net tonnage of 19. She has withstood many a storm and was regarded as one of the hardest little craft on the Cape Fear.

DEATH OF A GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. Susan Elizabeth Gilbert Passed Away Yesterday at Advanced Age.

Numerous friends in Wilmington and elsewhere learned yesterday with sincere sorrow of the death of Mrs. Susan Elizabeth Gilbert, relict of the late Capt. Henry D. Gilbert, which occurred at 11:45 o'clock the same forenoon at her home, No. 107 South Fifth street.

Mrs. Gilbert had been in feeble health for some time, but not until the day before the death was her condition considered dangerous. She quietly passed away with members of the family around her and carrying with her to the grave the rich heritage of a sweet Christian life. She was born in Wilmington and had lived here throughout her advanced age of eighty years. She early identified herself with the Christian people of the city and was at the time of her death a consistent member of Grace Methodist Church.

Deceased is survived by three daughters, all of whom have the sincerest sympathy of a host of friends. They are Mrs. Annie E. Bowden, Mrs. H. M. Ford and Mrs. W. J. Kirkham, all of this city.

The funeral will be conducted at 4 o'clock this afternoon from the late residence with interment in Oakdale Cemetery.

COAST LINE OBSERVANCE.

All Business Suspended for Five Minutes Yesterday in President's Honor.

For five minutes yesterday every department all over the great Atlantic Coast Line system ceased work out of respect to the memory of the late President McKinley. Thousands of employes along the various lines of the company observed the following self-explanatory order of General Manager John R. Knapp:

"Wilmington, N. C., Sept. 19, 1901. 'At 8:30 P. M. to day all work in every department, and in the shops, will be suspended for a period of five (5) minutes, and trains of all kinds, except those in the line will stop for a period of five (5) minutes as a mark of respect to President McKinley.'
