The Landsthing, did the right thing when it decided to let the people of the Danish West Indies say by ballot whether they would be willing to swap bosses or not.

General Chaffee reports that he will discontinue the reconcentrado business. It had stimulated too much opposition in this country and was not panning out satisfactorily.

We admire the pluck that the little bull showed when he disputed the right of way with a locomotive, but cannot commend his discretion. Ditto for some of our Democratic Senators who sometimes have a boomerang way of hurling remarks.

Gen. Chaffee reports that those thirty-five Moro prisoners who were killed while attempting to escape, were fired upon without orders and that he "regrets the accident." Accidents of the killing kind have been entirely too numerous in that quarters.

The Nashville Courier trots out a colored denizen of Tennessee who is 102 years old, has forty-seven children and is now living with his sixth wife. One of the remarkable things about it is that all of his forty-seven children are still living. They are all married and have 140 children. Must be a pretty healthy country around there.

Chas. M. Roberts, a jeweller, of Massachusetts, is a candidate for Congress. He bases his claim on the fact that he won, against the combined competition of the craft in Europe, the contract for supplying the King Edward coronation medals, a $40,000 job. He thinks the proper place for any American smart enough to do that is in Congress.

A writer in the New York Sun, who has been nosing around and claims to know all about it, says there are some very erroneous notions about the number and size of millionaire Senators. There are only an even dozen, the richest of whom is Clark, of Montana, who has to
