WILMINGTON, N. C. TUES A MORNING. JUNE 10.

J. J. HILL ON PROTECTION.

J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Pacific Railway, delivered an address in Chicago last Wedneedsy night at the dinner of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, on "Commercial Expansion," which was devoted mainly to picturing the possibilities of trade with the Eastern hemisphere and its prospective value. He believes that the possibilities of trade with the Orient are practically unlimited, and therefore believes that the energies of our manufacturers and commercial bodies should be especially exerted in that direction and with that aim.

Being the President of and largely interested in a great railroad system, which spans the continent and has expended much money in establishing termini on the Pacific with a direct view to oriental business he is, of course, interested in its growth and magnitude and therefore speaks forcibly and earnestly on it. That he is honest in his views may be taken for granted from the fact that his company worked with that object in sight and has great steamships running to oriental ports in connection with its railroad. This shows that he believes in the possibilities that he pictures. In the course of that address he referred to the protective tariff, which has become a very absorbing question in this country. He said:

"We have enjoyed all the benefits of a protective tariff for many years and whatever good it can do in the way of building up infant industries has already been accomplished. The growth of our enormous iron and steel industries, which are pointed out as the result of our protective tariff, can be more surely traced to our enormous resources in the iron mines of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota than from all other sources.

Mr. Hill was talking to an association of manufacturers when he told them that they had enjoyed the benefit of the protective tariff for many years and that all the good it could do in the way of building up our infant industries had already n accomplished. Mr. Hill doesn' believe in the "infant" business after the infants become large enough to wear number ten boots and a number eight hat. His talk reads very much like the talk of the average Democratic reformer: but he is not a Democrat. We do not know that he is a Republican: as we size him up he is one of those gen tlemen who has opinions of his own on economic policies and is governed by those opinions without regard to party declarations. But on this question he was talking like a Democrat and was simply echoing what had been said times without number by representatives of the Democratic party in opposing protection for protection's sake.

The Republican protection advocates eulogize the protection given by the tariff as the main in fact the cause of the great development of our manufacturing and other industries, the expansion of our commerce, the return of prosperity, and everything else. But Mr. Hill stated the case tersely and truly when referring to the claims made for the tariff as the great promoter of our iron and steel industries, he said: "The growth of our enormous iron and steel industries, which are pointed out as the result of our protective tariff, can be more easily traced to our enormous resources in the iron mines of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, than from all other sources." In the States that he refers to and in some others, (Alabama, for instance,) iron can be mined and delivered at the mills at less cost than in any other country in the world, and after that it can be converted into pig and bar and steel at less cost than it can be anywhere else in the world, and after that, with American skill, timesaving methods and labor-saving machinery, it can be manufactured into machinery and other finished forms at less cost than it can be done anywhere else in the world. This, and not the protective tariff, has made it possible and practicable for our iron and steel manufacturers to compete with the world, and to make the remarkable progress they have in exporting their products. This tariff gave them control of the home market, but it could never give them control of or a foothold in foreign markets, but on the contrary has been somewhat of a handicap on them.

But the supporters of the Dingley tariff contend that it must not be touched, for to touch it would be to paralyze our industries, even those which have demonstrated their abili- again, but threatens to continue ty to compete with the world not- in public life five years longer, until withstanding the "cheap pauper la- her youngest son, Ben Hur, comes bor" about which we have heard so of age. Even the great steel trust spired with ambition about two which last year made a profit of weeks before Ben was born, so that $111,000,000 would be rained if it he is in a measure responsible for it. were deprived of tariff protection. Old man Lease, who had ne ambifor has not Senator Hanna, speaking for the Trust, declared that the withdrawal of protection from steel would stock this country with steel from Canada, which means that the Canadians could undersell the steel makers of this country who have already demonstrated their ability to make raised in Florida. Perhaps it is besteel more cheaply than it can be cause they raise too many dogs.

made anywhere else. They would have to sell it cheaper if they undertook to compete with our steel makers. That's what the agents and spokesmen of the Trust are afraid of. If steel were free of duty then the Trust would have to reduce its home prices to compete with steel makers of Canada and or other countries who shipped their manufactures to this country. In such event the Trust's loss would be the country's gain. Mr. Hill has effectively in this paragraph answered the clamorers for high tariff protection to "foster our infant industries." The infants have outgrown the bottle.

WILL AMOUNT TO NOTHING.

The Trust question will be one of the leading issues in the next campaign, and when the Republicans are confronted with it they will quote their State platforms in which they condemn trusts and pledge themselves to crush them, and they will "point with pride" to the action taken by the law department of the government which has brought the Beef Trust to bay, and through its attorneys secured restraining orders from the federal courts in Chicago and from the State courts in New

But the law department of the government is not entitled to as much credit for this as are the New York journals, in the lead of which was the New York Herald, which secured the proof and the testimony on which the action in the courts was taken and which made success an easy matter as far as establishing the fact as to the existence of the Trust, within the meaning of the law, and showing up its methods. But giving the law department all the credit it may be entitled to, and assuming that it is really in earnest and anxious to destroy this Trust, its action will amount to nothing more than driving the Trust under some other cover, and compelling it to do business in some other way to dodge the law. It will not give the people relief from extortionate prices. Since the action was begun against it the prices of meats have steadily advanced and are now two or three cents a pound higher than they were two months ago. Attorney General Knox with his corps assistants may win in their fight, but that will simply drive the beef men into adopting some other method that would not leave them liable to prosecution under the Sherman law. If the Republican leaders were in earnest in their fight against the Trusts they would adopt the quickest and most effective method to bring them down-by breaking the monopoly they have of the home market. They could do this with the Beef Trust in twenty-four hours if they would put mests, cattle, sheep, etc., on the free list and thus give consumers the benefit of competition, which is barred out by the Dingley tariff. They cannot take any credit to themselves for their proceedings against the Beef Trust, while they refuse to touch the monopoly that the Beef Trust has.

SILK WORM COCOOMS.

As a matter of interest to our readers who may have tried the experiment of raising silk cocoons we publish the following sent out by Mr. Gerald McCarthy, Biologist of the State Department of Agricul-

An excellent crop of cocoons seems to have been harvested by all whom we supplied with silk-worm eggs this year. The Department will endeavor to have a buyer visit Raleigh during he summer or fall to purchase co-

In meantime growers are advised to choke them carefully and dry them out as is explained on pages 27 and 28 of our our Bulletin No. 131. The dried cocoons, if of good quality, should bring about $1,25 per pound. Due notice will be sent you of the date of the

There is likely to be considerable demand for eggs next Spring at about $2.00 per ounce. But we cannot guarantee this. We advise everybody to select at least 200 of the best and finest cocoons and from these raise one ounce of eggs, but not more, unless there is assurance of sale for the eggs in your own neighborhood.

Your attention is called to the premiums offered for silk by the State Fair. You will have a fair chance to secure one or more of these. Copies of the advance premium list may be had by addressing C. B. Denson, Raleigh,

This looks like a pretty good start in this industry, good enough to be encouraging. It is but the first step, however; but with three silk mills in the State, and another being built, it seems to us there should not be much trouble in disposing of the cocoons or of the reeled silk. Imported raw silk sells at about $2 a pound.

He walked around a moment or two and showed where he was shot, but soon fell and was dead. Immediately after the shooting Blount started off and was followed by three or four negroes, but after going a short distance Blount turned, drew his pistol and told them if they continued their pursuit what they might expect. He had just recharged his pistol, and the men following needed no further admonition and dropped the chase right there.

the South and in Liverpool came forth on the advance. Drought, cool nights and insects were mentioned in the dispatches from the Carolinas, while hot winds, boll weevil and need of rain were reported from portions of Texas. In the afternoon the market slowly lost most of the forenoon advance under profit-taking by room longs and absence of healthy support from the public. In the last five minutes prices broke two to four points on Summer months. The close was barely steady, with prices net four points lower to six points higher. June alone showing the extreme decline. Trading for the day was limited to about 75,000 bales.
