TILMINGTUN. A. C.

FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 22. SECRETARY SHAW HAS HEARD

SOMETHING. When members of Grover Cleveland's cabinet took the stump in the campaign of 1896 they subjected themselves to severe and deserved censure for turning the business of their departments over to their subordinates and travelling around the country making stump speeches. But President Roosevelt has turned his cabinet into a political machine and expects each of them to do his part in helping to elect Republican congressmen this Fall and in boosting his nomination, for which he is working so industriously. And the Republican organs think this is all right, and that the cabinet officers do just what they ought to do when they jump in and take an active part on the hustings. And yet when they defend it they virtually confess that some defence is necessary. The following, which we clip from the Philadelphia Press, is both an apology and a defence. Commenting upon Secretary Shaw's part on the stump, it says:

Secretary Shaw has already spoken in the Maine and Vermont campaigns, and is going to speak again. He will doubtless be frequently heard during the next two months in various States.

This is right and proper. The Administration has its policies and the people like authoritative expositions of its attitude on pending questions. It is for the Administration to lead in public discussion. Secretary Shaw i probably the most effective stumper of the Cabinet. He has a homely, direct, pungent way of putting things, with apt illustration, which is easily understood and very taking.

It is stated that Secretary Shaw, is going to devote himself largely to the tariff question and to questions associated with it. As he is the head of Treasury Department this is fit and Economic questions come within his appropriate province. It is further stated that he will follow the line of the Iowa platform. If so he is apparently getting a little new light. He didn't attend the Iowa Convention like Wilson, Allison, Henderson and the rest, but it was understood that he shrugged his shoulders at the platform -partly at the personal influences be hind it, like that of Governer Cummins, and partly from a conservative fear of its suggestions.

But now, if he is going to take a similar line, he is acquiring a better understanding. Why shouldn't he! What is there in the Iowa declarations that any rational Republican can dissent from? What is there that he must not accept? It upholds the historic policy of protection, but does not venerate any particular schedule as sacred and unchangeable. It points to revision when the progress of industry and the conditions of production and price render it expedient. But revision must come from the friends of the tariff system, and come when they think it is timely, necessary and safe.

Secretary Shaw may well couple with his plea for an enlightened treatment of the tariff an argument for the associated policy of reciprocity. Not merely the special measure of reciprocity with Cubs, but the general principle of reciprocity wherever it can be advantageously applied. This does not involve acceptance of the treaties now hung up in the Senate. A much better scheme of reciprocity would be that to which the way would be opened through the adoption of maximum and minimum rates of duty, the latter fairly protective, and admission to their benefits being given to those nations which would give us preferential terms in return.

With a liberal and intelligent treatment of reciprocity no demand for a revision of the tariff will have any terrors. If tariff rates can be used to secure concessions where we want them, the people will always be willing that they should be effectively handled for this purpose. Why shouldn's Secretary Shaw give us some leadership on the question ? The Press is a paper which stands very close to the Administration and hence may have felt that some defence was necessary for sending cabinet members out on the hustings, where Mr. Roosevelt will be shortly. Has the case become so desperate that the administration cannot depend on the numerous party organs, and the army of Republican stumpers to defend its policies, but is forced to send the cabinet out to talk to the voters Could not others intelligently discuss the tariff, reciprocity, expansion and other policies to which the administration is committed? Secretary Shaw, it seems, is above the average as an effective stumper. He has a homely, breezy Western way about him which takes with the people and makes him a popular speaker, we are told by the Press, all of which Mr. Roosevelt proposes to use for the benefit of the party this year and for his own benefit later on. He knew what he was doing when he invited Mr. Shaw into his cabinet, for he got a prospective competitor out of the way and secured a man whom he might use with advantage.

Mr. Shaw may understand his him some prestige and add to the effectiveness of his speeches, because he speaks as one of the inner circle, and as by authority, but that does not put him above playing a very ordinary kind of politics, from going ahead or taking water, as the politics in the case may suggest. He since he has been out.

adopted the planks on tariff revision. trusts, corporations, &c., he said it would never do, that tariff revision was beset with two many difficulties, low tariff on some things, another plexing problem to deal with, and section might want a high tariff on hence seem to be in favor of adopting those same things, and then would in part, at least, the Boer methods.

come the clash that would bring trouble and make revision a very difficult and a very dangerous thing. For this reason he was, opposed to the tariff revision feature of that platform, and thought the Iowa convention made a mistake in declaring for it. But it seems from the Press editorial that he has taken the back track on this and now considers the Iowa declaration all right, and will say so in his stump speeches

Has he heard from Iowa or from Mr. Roosevelt since he made his objections to the Iowa platform? Something has changed his views. What is it? If the revision declared for in that platform was a mistake and bad policy a few weeks ago, when did it cease to be a mistake and become good policy? Within the past few weeks he has learned something by mingling with and talking to the people, he has caught on to public sentiment as voiced by the press, and like a trimming politician he has steered his course accordingly. With the ear and the eye of a politician he heard and saw that it would not do to run counter to the popular demand for tariff reduction and hence he changes his views and goes for it to the extent of endorsing the Iowa platform, which, by the way, is very non-committal as to tariff reduction. Those platform builders

GOT THEIR ORDERS.

It comes from Oyster Bay that President Roosevelt expressed himself in somewhat emphatic language to a visiting Texas Republican on the Republican factions in the South. He doesn't like the factional squabbling at all, insists that the Republicans must get down to business, quit thinking about the spoils, unite, pull together, and try to elect somebody. He supplemented the expression of these views with the significant and impressive information that the Republican or Republican faction which didn't do that and make a strenuous fight when there is a fighting chance will not have any claims on him. That is a settler, for they all want to have claims on him.

The sum and substance of this is that Mr. Roosevelt has given his party workers and machine managers in the South to understand that they must cease hair pulling while there is any Democratic hair to pull. That's the way it ought to be, but Mr. Roosevelt does not seem to fully comprehend the true inwardness of the Republican politician in the South, and his main inspiration, when he tells him that he must cease hankering for and squabbling over the present or prospective spoils, for these out of count politics would have few inducements for him. That's what he is in polities for, like the distinguished Mr. Flanagan, of Texas, who sized it up when he interrogatively ejaculated "what in h-ll are we here for ?" That covered the case with nineteen and a half out of twenty of them.

The wires inform us that Senator Pritchard, of this State, will shortly visit Oyster Bay and dine with the President, when they will doubtless talk over the political situation in North Carolina. Possibly it may occur to him that it would not be bad idea for him to secure a certified copy of the Rooseveltian remarks to that Texas caller, and shake it at those recalcitrant Republicans who are kicking at his way of bossing things and are trying to run him off the Senatorial track or ditch

THE RACE PROBLEM LOOMING

That was an interesting and portenteous dispatch published in the STAR yesterday about the prospective trouble with the race question in South Africa. What makes it the more menacing is the disparity between the races, the blacks so far outnumbering the whites, while surrounding and mingling freely with them. We published a few days ago an article foreshadowing this trouble, as one of the results of the overthrow of the Boer Republics which stood as a wall, as it were, between the native blacks and the white race, which fully comprehending the conditions, adopted heroic methods and thus awed the blacks whom a timid or vacillating course might have encouraged to become assertive and aggressive. The white race is there confrontbusiness, and the fact that he is ed by the very same perils that con-Secretary of the Treasury may give front it in the Southern Statesnegro aggressiveness and the assailing of white women by negroes. #### G. B. PATTERSON WON.

After an all-day and all-night contest, and a very warm one from the start, the Congressional convention which met in Fayetteville Wednesday morning closed its work by the nomination of Mr. Gilbert B. Patterson, of Robeson county, who on the 310th ballot received 174 8-10 votes, and was declared the nominee of the Democracy of the Sixth Congressional District.

While in common with the hosts of Mr. Bellamy's friends, and those who stood by him so earnestly to the end, we regret his defeat, like him and his friends and the delegates who went to Fayetteville and manfully fought for him, we loyally accept the decision of that convention, composed of representative men and Democrats of the district, and will give Mr. Patterson the same unfaltering, loyal support that we would give Mr. Bellamy if the convention had conferred the honor upon him, who so well and ably represented this district in his first and second terms.

While Mr. Patterson is to be congratulated on his victory, Mr. Bellamy has reason to feel proud of the devotion of his friends as shown in their zeal for his renomination and in the splendid vote he received from the first to the last of the 310 ballots, a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held, and a played that for politics as Secretary recognition of his faithfulness and Shaw is now playing it by giving it of the a bility with which he represented his people.

Mr. Patterson is a lawyer of ability, and popular where known, shown by his strong support in a convention where he had three distinguished and popular men to contest the honors with him. Now the nominee of the convention and of the Democracy of the district he will receive from every Democrat the loyal support he would give to his first choice.

When W. O. Garrison, county collector of Cumberland county, N J., became a defaulter and skipped with $25,000 he showed due consideration for his bondsmen, by taking the bond away with him, and there is no record to show who the bonds

CURRENT COMMENT

- Although he invented the strenuous life, President Roosevelt seems to have no patent on it. There is President Schwab, for instance, forced to retire from business, a physical wreck at thirty-nine .-Atlanta Journal, Dem.

- The visit of ex-Boer generals to King Edward suggests the possibility of something similar being done with the leaders of the Filipino forces. Why would it not be practicable to bring a number of the native chieftains to Washington and there impress upon them the folly of continuing in arms against the United States? Of course, this would not be quiet so exhilarating as the shooting of them, but it might have the advantage of saving the lives of some of our own men .-Brooklyn Citizen, Dem.

- It is reported that in and about Shenandoah, in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania, there are about 17,000 Lithuanians, 8,000 Poles, 3,000 Ruthenians, 1,-000 Sloaks and 300 Bohemians. Perhaps it is not surprising that some of these men are found lacking at times in true American respect for law and order. Not a few of them may have had such surroundings from infancy that they have been ill trained. But most of them are likely to remain in this country in which they have found homes, and they must be taught that violence in times of strikes or at any other times is sure to be repressed with vigor .- New York Tribune, Dem.

CASE OF IDENTITY

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.] The postmaster at Clayton at the time I write of and for two years previously was a single man, thirty-five years old, named Henry Day. He made his home with a widow named Martin, who had three children. As postmaster he was known to every man, woman and child for five miles around, and you would say that his identity could be proved above any other man's. One morning Day was missing, and within an hour the widow startled the community by charging him with attempted assault and robbery. Her statement was to the effect that she had been awakened about midnight and found him in her room. She had that day received $2,000 in cash, and he demanded the money. When she cried out, he struck her with a club, and during the few minutes she was unconscious he secured the money and fled. Did any one doubt her story? Was there the slightest reason to suspect she could be mistaken? She had seen him and heard his voice, So also had Frank and Hattle as he left the house. He had taken a freight train which passed the station at 1 o'clock a. m., and the station agent had even spoken to him. As he was the only passenger, the conductor and two brakemen could fully identify him. Was there ever a plainer case? It was three weeks before Mr. Day was overhauled and brought back for trial. He was not even flustrated. He calmly denied that he was Henry Day. He denied that he had ever been in Clayton. Indeed he was so cool and nervy that the officers, who knew him as well as they knew their own children, began to doubt if he were really the man before they started back. The prisoner declared the officers mistaken, but made no objection to returning with them. There were 500 people at the depot to see him. Every one recognized him as Henry Day. Next day he was arraigned before justice of the peace under that name. He denied it and gave his name as James Bailey. His plea was "not guilty," and he had the best lawyers in the county. The doubt which the officers brought back with them now began to bear fruit. When Mrs. Martin took the stand, she positively identified the prisoner as Day. On cross examination she began to waver. One of her children swore positively; another "thought so." A clerk in the postoffice was put on the stand to idehtify the prisoner. He was positive at first, but ended by doubting. Only two young persons out of thirty called to the stand were positive. The defense claimed a case of mistaken identity. The prisoner declared his name to be James Bailey and that he was born of American parents in Switzerland. He had come to the United States as a tourist and had only been in the country two weeks when arrested. He had about $1,000 in money, some of which

When the trial in the higher court came on, the crew of the freight train and the station agent were put on the stand. Each set out to be positive, but each ended by doubting. The testimony of the station agent was a fair sample:

"Mr. Jones, you were acquainted with Henry Day?"

"Yes, sir." "What sort of nose had he?" "Nose? Why, a straight nose, sir."

"Sure of this?" "Yes, sir."

"That will do." The prisoner in the box had a Roman ose. Did Day have that sort of nose? One half the village said yes, the other half no. The Widow Martin was determined to be positive this time. She not only believed in what she was going to swear to, but a hundred different people had encouraged her in her conviction. This was the way she came to grief: "You think it was about midnight when you awoke?" "Yes, sir." "Well, what did you see?"

"I saw the prisoner at the foot of the bed and called out." "Did you know who it was before you heard his voice?" "No. sir." "Well, what did he say?"

"He said, 'I want that money or I'll nurder you.' "You were greatly frightened?" "Yes, sir."

"And yet, frightened as you were, ou recognized his voice?" "Yes, sir."

"Well, let us see if there is any similarity. Prisoner, you will call out the words used by the man in the bed-

The prisoner complied, seeming to put himself in the other's place, and his words knocked the bottom out of the prosecution. The Widow Martin seemed stupefied as she looked at him. "So you swear that this is the voice you heard in your bedroom, do you?" asked the lawyer.

"I-I can't say.' Of the two men who had been positive at the preliminary examination one backed square down, while the other was full of doubts. When the case was closed and the jury went out, eight were doubtful and the other four not very positive, and the result was a verdict of "not guilty." Bailey remained in town for a couple of weeks, meeting everybody as a stranger and wandering around to see the sights, and then went quietly away, to be seen no more. Was he Bailey or Day? I have told you how they failed to prove he was anybody but Bailey, and yet he was Day. Years afterward Interviewed him in a South Carolina jail for two days before he was to be tried for burglary, and he acknowledged his identity and laughed heartily Tying a Four-in-hand. "The majority of men in tying a four-in-hand, scarf or bow tie it too carefully," said an expert the other day. "A tie very symmetrically tied looks like the ready made up article, a resemblenace that no dressy man aims at. The proper way to do the trick is to knot the tie a little bit awry. This does away with the made appearance that comes of too careful tying and gives an artistic effect. There is quite a knack in doing the thing correctly-that is, getting just enough of the negligee into the appearance of the tied up scarf."

COTTON MARKETS.

G. $3 50; W W. $3 70.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21,-The cotton market opened barely steady with prices one to three points lower, in keeping with weakness in the Liverpool market when prices had dropped some two to two and a half points. There were foreign selling orders here and the more prudent local longs sold out for a turn, believing the recent advance too great on the bullish factors at work, and that a large scattering long interest had accumulated. The Wall street bull element came to the rescue soon after the call and bid prices upward rapidly, January reaching 7.92, while August managed in some way to reach 8.56. But at these figures the realizing movement by scattering longs again set in on a liberal scale; prices were unable to stand the strain and worked point by point lower. Reports of showers over the central and eastern belt, with a forecast for showery weather generally to-night or to-morrow, thus indicating a break in the hot wave west of the Mississippi river, helped to undermine bull confidence. Trading was spasmodically active throughout the session, and in the last hour was general with liquidation over-topping all other operations. Fear of August notices to-morrow led ongs to disgorge holdings in that deivery with the result that the price broke twelve points from the top to 3.44. Later months were weak in sympathy. The close was easy and net six to seven points lower. Total sales were estimated at 100,000 bales.
