TO PUNISH THE BEEF TRUST.

Senator Lodge, President Roosevelt's personal and political friend, made a speech in Portland, Maine, just before the election, and devoted most of it to a discussion of the trust question. His remarks were pretty much on the same line as those of President Roosevelt in his New England speeches. He deprecated wholesale attacks on "the big one of the coal roads, the Philadelcombines which most of us incorrectly call trusts." He was opposed to attacking the trusts by repealing the tariff duties on trust controlled articles, for we were enjoying prosperity and we ought to be satisfied even if some got more of the prosperity than others did.

But he made an exception of one trust-the Beef Trust. He would punish that and to punish it he would repeal the protective duties on animals for slaughter and on slaughtered meats. He didn't seem to be influenced by the desire to give the people cheaper meat, but only to punish the Beef Trust which seems to have become a target for a good many of the Republican statesmen to shoot at since Mr. Roosevelt and his Attorney General tackled it, after they were forced to tackle it by the exposures that had been made by the press and by the public clamor against it. He has probably been paying more for his porter house steaks, roasts, &c., than he feels like paying and would punish the Trust and get even by repealing the duties on cattle, &c., and on

There seems to be a difference of opinion between him and Secretary Shaw over the way to do the punishing, and also on the Beef Trust. The Secretary thinks the Beef Trust is a pretty good institution, for he told in one of his Vermont speeches tenants in Iowa who had a "nice bunch of cattle" which he would be perfectly willing to sell to any comwould. The inference from that adjust those grievances. They have was that his tenant had no complaint | heretofore denied that the miners against the Trust, and was well satisfied with its way of doing business, and the further inference was that this was the way that other Iowa farmers who have cattle to sell feel the beef didn't figure in the Secretary's remarks; it was only the men who had cattle to sell. He evidently didn't think that the Beef Trust deserved any punishment, but if it did he didn't agree with the Massachusetts Senator, who is also Presieffectiveness of the punishment he suggested, for putting cattle on the all. He opened the campaign in Vermont with a speech which was mainly devoted to a discussion of the Trusts, especially the Beef Trust. Referring to the demand for the repeal of the duties on cattle he said: "Suppose we take the dred years it was taken for granted tarriff off beef, and then suppose the herds of cattle from Mexico and of the Hot Springs reservation in South America are brought in by Arkansas, and now a lot of people the hundred thousand. They will find their way to the stock yards old soldier bob up and say it is and the butchers will be compelled theirs on the strength of an old as now."

Even if that were the case, wouldn't that mean cheaper beef for the American people, if it be true, as the Beef Trust men say, that the high price of beef is caused by a scarcity of cattle? But the cattle of South America would not, and very few of the cattle of Mexico would find their way to the stock yards, for the cattle raisers of South America couldn't afford to ship cattle to this country and then ship them by rail to the stock yards in the West. They might be able to ship them to our Atlantic or Pacific ports and sell them there, where the butchers could buy them, which is doubtful; but whether or not the Beef Trust would find itself rather full handed when it undertook to buy all the cattle that came into the country, in addition to the homeraised cattle, just to prevent competition in their business.

It is somewhat remarkable that one man, standing as close to the administration as Secretary Shaw does, and who was presumably speaking for the administration when he was making his deliverances on the Beef Trust, should have views so diametrically opposite to the views of Massachusetts Senator, who the personal and political friend of President Roosevelt, and is generally supposed to be his spokesman. With which of these does Mr. Roosevelt agree? With his friend, Senator Lodge, or with the representative of his administration, Secretary Shaw, who believes the Beef Trust which the Senator would punish, to be not only undeserving of punishment, but rather a beneficent institution? We will see, however, how much in earnest Senator Lodge is, in his desire to punish the Beef Trust. He can, when Congress meets, have a bill introduced to repeal the duties on cattle, &c., and on meats. We will see whether he will do it, but we take the chance of predicting that he will not, and that he will forget all about punishing

the Beef Trust, when the time comes to punish it.

As it has become a political necessity to end the coal strike in Pennsylvania it will doubtless soon be ended, although the coal monarchs declare that they will tolerate no outside interference. There are indications, however, that they are feeling more or less the pressure of public sentiment, and would like to see the out a seeming surrender by them. Referring to a statement made by President Baer, of the Reading road, phia Press, Republican, says:

In the statement of President Baer concerning the coal strike, given to the public last week, he said: "If the men at each colliery go to work every grievance or complaint which they may have shall be honestly and fairconsidered and decided.

The declaration neither admits no denies that any just grievance exists. Taken by itself it recognizes that there are complaints and implies that they are entitled to be heard, though in other parts of the statement Mr. Baer contends that there are no real grievances. But accepting the declaration as made in good faith and as involing a pledge. in case the men go to work, to grant s fair hearing and to give fair treatment, why should not this hearing be accorded now? Why should it not have been accorded any time during the last three months? That is the first and the obvious question suggested by the announcement. But it is not the only one. If the operators will not grant the hearing now, why should not the miners put themselves in the position where they will command it under the pledge? They may hold and the public may hold that the operators should have met them half way long before this, and should meet them half way now, but as a matter of fact the operators will not. They are firm and uucompromising in their position that they will do nothing till the men go to work. Then they promise that "every grievance or complaint shall be honestly and fairly considered and decided.

If the miners can secure assurances of such consideration, why is it not best for them to resume work and put the operators to the test? In such action they would have the support of the public and the moral certainty that the pledge would have to be respected It is time to end the strike.

The coal monarchs have caused of receiving a letter from one of his it to be given out that President Mitchell is the obstacle in the way of a settlement, that they will not recognize him, but will treat with petitor of the Beef Trust which the miners, and if they have grievwould pay him as much as the Trust ances will, as President Baer says, have grievances, and have asserted that they were as well paid as people in other employments of a similar character.

The public has become convinced about the Trust. The consumer of I that the miners had grievances, and that is why public sympathy has been with them.

But the miners will have to yield, for it is with them a question of work or starve. The strike, however, although it has cost the miners a good deal, the State of Pennsyldent Roosevelt's friend, as to the vania a good deal and the public a good deal, has not been without its lesson, for it has demonstrated the free list wouldn't punish them at absolute necessity of some law to regulate such corporations and make such strikes impossible.

It is right hard to tell when one really owns a patch of real estate in this country. For nearly a hunthat Uncle Sam was the proprietor who claim to be descendants of an to bid against the packers then as grant to the aforesaid deceased soldier by Louis XVI., also deceased. They would prabably comp cheap.

> It is sald that Secretary Chamberlain was surprised by the array of demands that those three Boer generals made when they called on him. But that wasn't the first time they surprised Mr. Chamberlain.

CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the PRITCHARD'S GAME.

Senator Pritchard, the big boss of the "lily white" Republican party of this State, is showing neither courage nor principle in his party manipulation. He is running it strictly on the dicker plan, his axiom being "anything to win." It is claimed that his party is now "respectable" since it has lopped off the negro and accumulated some disgruntled Democrats, and yet it doesn't seem to have respectable men enough in it to supply it with candidates for the various offices, and he goes out hunting for "independents" who will consent to accept his aid and run against the regular Democratic nominees. He has found a few. If he had any convictions and was fighting for principle, and his party was the party of principle he pretends it is, he would make a bold and manly instead of the tricky, sneaking fight he is making. He would proclaim his principles, throw out his banners and make his fight in the open, instead of pulling down his flag and making a bushwhacking fight as he is now doing. People respect courage in politics as they do in other things, and they have no use for the petty trickster who poses as a leader and a champion of great principles, while adopting pothouse methods.

The platform adopted by his convention at Greensboro is nothing but chaff and subterfuge, its sole purpose being to play to gullible or mercenary voters outside of his own party and thus offset the votes of his old allies, the negroes, to whom he is indebted for the seat he holds in the Senate and his present prominence as a leader and whom he unceremoniously kicked out when he came to the conclusion that they couldn't be of any further use to him.

CURRENT COMMENT.

- Henry D. Clayton says he has no fears of any new Republican strike ended if it could be done with- party. That new Republican party is a thing of talk, created entirely by Democratic papers. There are fewer Republicans in Alabama now than any time since the Fifteenth Amendment was made law. - Birmingham Ledger, Dem.

- The vote in Maine on Monday was at least not discouraging for the Democrats. While the Republican plurality on the Governorship was about as usual, the Democrats gained ten Assemblymen and one Senator. This is far enough from being indicative of any anti-Republican tidal wave, but it at least shows that whatever change is in progress is toward the Democracy. Broaklyn Citizen, Dem.

- The gentlemen who make their living at the Southern delegate business will not forget that it was the astute Mr. Quay who, in 1900, handled in the most reckless manner a resolution which had for its object the curtailment of Southern representation in Republican national conventions. When a man's bread and butter is threatened his memory becomes rather scute. - Washington

- Senator Lodge says: "Let us first define what are trusts. The technical term does not apply to-day to any of the great corporations or combinations that pass under that name." Of course, of course. It only applies to the | concerns that have "busted" and have retired from business, and, therefore, can't make any more contributions to the parent party's campaign fund. - Charleston News and Courier, Dem.

Deadly Prussic Acid. Hydrocyanic acid, or, as it is most commonly called, prussic acid, is one of the most deadly poisons known to animal life. It is a volatile principle contained in numerous shrubs and trees, chiefly the wild cherry, bitter almmond, sherry laurel, St. Ignatius bean and the peach tree. It is obtained by distillation from ferrocyanide of potassium by the action of sulphuric acid in the form of a light, colorless gas. The preparation kept in the drugstore is a dilute acid of a strength of 2 per cent of anhydrous acid in distilled water, a colorless liquid, with the odor of bitter almonds. The dose is from two to six drops. One-half grain of the anhydrous acid is sufficient to produce death. It is used in medicine in correcting diseases of the stomach, also in whooping cough and the last stages of consumption. It is very volatile, and the fumes will destroy vegetable life, causing the stems of plants to wither and dry up. Its effect on the lower animals is simllar to its action on man, with the exception of the horse and the hyena, upon whom it does not appear to produce any impression. In fatal doses it causes death quickly by paralyzing the heart's action. After death the rigor mortis sets in, and in a few moments the unfortunate subject is as stiff as a board.
