The indignation of the citizens reached its culmination at night, in the hanging in effigy of Jim Tillman to the big theatrical bill board at the corner of Irby and Evans streets, where the gruesome guy swung in view of the early toilers as they came to work. To the figure was pinned a card with the name and a skull and crossbones. Who hung the figure there nobody seems to know, but nobody seemed to care to cut it down and nobody had aught to say against it.
