Hughes offered no resistance when captured, but had on his person an ugly-looking knife and an old cap and ball pistol, almost as long as one's arm. Semi-Centennial Celebration Will Take Place To-night-Annual Regatta

All arrangements are complete for the semi-centennial celebration of the Carolina Yacht Club at Wrightsville Beach to-night and if the weather is at all favorable there will be a large number of clubmen and their friends in attendance. The club house will be brilliantly lighted from two powerful arc lamps of 2,000 candle power each and at the entrance, on the exterior, the figures "1853-1903" will be wrought in brightly-burning incandescents, making the scene a resplendent one indeed. The flags and colors of the club will also be used in an artistic decoration of the interior. Mrs. M. S. Willard, assisted by Mr. S. M. Boatwright, has charge of the interior decorations, while Maj. Wm. F. Robertson is looking after the outward appearances of the building upon this festive occasion.

Features of the celebration will be music, dancing and refreshments. The excellent Seashore Hotel Orchestra has been engaged for the night and that is sufficient guarantee of the succeas of the dance and musical programme. Mr. Geo. W. Kidder, assisted by Mr. F. A. Lord, is in general charge of the affair.

Another notable event in the life o the club this season will be the annual regatta of the club fleet on Saturday. July 4th., over the regular course in Banks' channel. There will be a dozen or more entries and the race promises to be exciting for all enthusiastic yachtemen. Maj. Wm. F. Robertson, chairman of the regatta committee. officially calls the race to start at 2:30 P. M. and all boats are required to re port at the pier at 1 P. M. A handsome sum was appropriated yesterday for the purchase of first and second prizes which will be selected and placed on exhibition by the committee to-day.

Puneral of the Late William Iredell Gore Sunday Afternoon-Tributes.

The funeral of the late William Iredell Gore, whose death occurred Saturday night, was conducted in the presence of a large assemblage of friends by the Rev. W. B. Oliver, of Florence, S. C., former pastor of the First Baptist church, this city, Sunday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Oliver made a touching reference to the beautiful life and character of the deceased and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones.

The music was by the First Baptist church choir, composed of Mrs. C. D. Weeks, soprano; Mrs. F. A. Muse, contralto; Mr. Chas. Dushan, tenor, and Mr. W. H. Alderman, bass. "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "Rock of Ages" and "Nearer My God to Thee," were the selections rendered at the residence and at the grave "Abide With Me" and "Good Night" were aweetly sung.

The grave was literally covered with beautiful flowers from friends as a token of their love and esteem. The pall-bearers were: Honorary, Capt. Alves Walker and Capt. J. L. Urge Second Regiment to Come Here.

The Wilmington Chamber of Com merce will make a persistent effort to secure the encampment of the Second Regiment, North Carolina National Guard, for Wrightsville beach or sound this Summer. It was decided by the Adjutant General several days ago to have the encampment of the Guard by regiments in each of their several territories and it is highly proper that the Second should come to Wilmington. Indeed, it is said that a large majority of the companies of the regiment favor coming here.

President J. A. Taylor, of the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday appointed the following committee to exert every effort to get the troops to come to Wrightsville, viz: Col. T. C. James, chairman; Col. Walker Taylor, Capt. A. P. Adrian, Mr. Gabriel Holmes and Mr. M. W. Jacobi. The committee will take the matter up at once with the authorities at Raleigh and will without a doubt be successful in its efforts.

The strongest bill of the season is now on at The Casino and the patronage should be large. Melville and May, comedy sketch artists; Miss Helen Pelletier; Jeanre and Renund, musical comedy team, and E. Will Bensley, a novelty foot-juggler, are some of the people who go to make up the company playing during the week. A 60-minute promenade concert is given after each performance.

NURSES GRADUATED.

First Annual Commencement Exercises at James Walker Memorial Hospital:

ADDRESS BY DR. BELLAMY.

Presentation of Diplomas by Dr. Joseph Akerman and Other Interesting Peatures- informal Reception -Masonic Temple Quartette.

The exercises last evening attending the graduation of the Class of 1908 of the Training School for Nurses, conducted in connection with the James Walker Memorial Hospital, was a thoroughly charming and delightful affair indeed, reflecting greatest credit upon Dr. Joseph Akerman, the clever surgeon in charge; Miss Laura P Clark, the graceful and highly efficient superintendent of nurses; the gentlemen composing the Board of Managers and those of the physicians of the city, who by the sacrifice of their time and attention, made possible a thorough course of lectures during the

The exercises took place in the assembly room on the first floor of the southwest wing of the building and were attended by many of the leading people of the city-both ladies and gentlemen-including almost the entire board of physicians of the county. The south end of the room, occupied by the speaker of the evening and others who took part in the exercises, was banked with palms and flowers, giving a very pretty effect indeed. The evening opened with devotional exercises by the Rev. Dr. A. D. McClure, pastor of Saint Andrew's Pesbyterian church, after which the audience listened with great pleasure to a superb rendition of 'Iwilight" (Koschat), by the Masonic Temple Quartette, composed of Messrs. Charles McMillen, Burdis Anderson, C. H. Cooper and H. K. Holden.

The annual address by Dr. W. J. Bellamy, which is published in full below, was delivered in most graceful and pleasing manner and was listened to with keenest interest and enthusiasm. He was warmly applauded upon the conclusion of the remarkably fine effort.

The presentation of diplomas by Dr. Akerman came next. Dr. Akerman s an easy and fluent speaker and accompanied the formal presentation with a pleasing allusion to that part of Dr. Bellamy's address referring to the establishment of the profession of trained nurse, citing the example of Ambroise Pare, who died as early as 1590. He also gave an incident of nurses having been kept at their post with a stick and spoke of the difference in favor of the present, when the trained nurse is the noblest and truest of God's creation. The value of military discipline was emphasized and he illustrated it by an incident of Napoleon's army in Italy where even teamsters were uniformed and taught to love and respect that uniform. He concluded his remarks with the formal presentation of diplomas, saying to the graduates, Miss Florence E. Hayes, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Miss Alberta Robinson, of Clinton: "By authority of the State of North Carolina, delegated to the Board of Managers of the James Walker Memorial Hospital, I hereby present you with this diplome, thus conferring upon you the title of trained nurse, with all rights and privileges thereto appertaining. As a further token of the appreciation of your care and attention by the managers, I hereby present you with the badge of the institution."

The diplomas are handsome works of art and the badge, a beautiful gold pin, circular in shape and bearing in the centre a white enamel cross. On the front around the circle are the words "James Walker Memorial Hospital, Wilmington, N. C.," and on the reverse side the name of the recipient beautifully engraved. The diplomas were received gracefully by Misses Hayes and Robinson amid the applause of the audience, their twelve school mates and other nurses in the institutution, who occupied the front row of chairs in the room.

Upon the conclusion of the presentation of diplomas, a duet, "The Pilot" (Millard), was rendered with splendid effect by Mr. Cooper and Mr. H. K. Holden, after which Dr. Akerman made an announcement and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. McClure. Following the graduating exercises, in a room across the hallway which was beautifully decorated for the occasion, an informal reception was held, during the progress of which dainty refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Clark, who was, with her associates, most charming in her hospitality.

The refreshment room was decora ted by Rehder Bros, the florists, in yellow and white, the colors of the intitution. The centre piece was a lovely creation in yellow cannas and asparagus ferns, while from each corner of the table to the chandeliers were suspended white ribbons. The chande liers were draped withs milax, and in the four corners of the room in advantageous positions were stately palms and other plants. As the guests were assembling for the reception the quartette sang in the hall, "Stars of the Summer Night."

Sincere regret was expressed that President Walter G. MacRae and Mr. M. J. Corbett, two enthusiastic and devoted members of the Board of Managers, could not be present owing to their absence abroad. The other members of the Board were present, however' and took great interest in the exer-cises. They were Vice President W. H. Sprunt; Mr. Geo. R. Dr. Bellamy's Address. The full text of Dr. Bellamy's excellent address is as follows: Ladies and Gentlemen:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I acknowledge and appreciate the kind motives of those who selected me to address you on this eventful and auspicious occasion, marking as it does an epoch in the history of James Walker Memorial Hospital—the establishment of a training school for nurses. It is the consummation of the wishes and desire of the noble benefactor himself, who, with a counte-nance expressive of delight, often conversed with me on the subject. Would that this great man could have lived and could be with us on this oc-casion. It would be our greatest pride and pleasure to place him in a seat of honor, and enjoy with him these exercises; but providence has decreed otherwise, his living body cannot be with us, his spirit hovers over us; and in that presence let me say, with reverence and candor, the city of Wilmington has never known such a benefactor.

Harnett, Lillington, Waddell [and Ashe, of the American Revolution, contributed much to our existence; Nature, with its bountiful provision, has done much for our prosperity; but compare anything and everything that has been done in the history of our town with what James Walker accomplished for suffering humanity, in the alleviation of its ills. Forty thousand dollars, made in the State of North Carolina, honestly and industriously, has been expended judi-ciously and in a most praiseworthy manner in the erection of this superb structure, and he, too, not "to the manor born." It is a monument to his memory, and even though his name should be ffaced from the building, generations yet unborn will revert to the establishment of this institution as a great event in the history of this time-honored town; a "monument more lasting than brass and more durable than marble. The institution of a school for the training of nurses, by a systematic course of instruction, having been considered essential to every hospital of any importance, in connection with made by a special act of the legislature for a training school for nurses. the legitimate offspring of an excellent system all over the country. Though the training of nurses in an established training school was not commenced in Europe until Miss Nightingale, fresh from experience in the Crimean War, with great generosity established the first training school of nurses, under the auspices of the Order of St. John, at St. Thomas' Hospital in London in 1860; as early as the year 1800, however. Dr. Valentine Seaman gave a course of twenty-six lectures to the nurses of the New York Hospital upon impor-tant topics in relation to nursing and hygiene; these lectures were pub-lished and are the first recorded efforts for the improved training of nurses in the United States.

It was not, however, until 1863 that training schools were successively founded as follows: In Philadelphia in 1863, in Boston 1872, in New York 1878, and from that time dates the impetus to the improved nursing system, which has led to the organization of schools in all the great cities of the United States, graduating many thousands annually.

Every year of the continuance of this school, in connection with the hospital, will, I believe, teem with fresh proofs of its importance, its utility and its blessings, and as each succeeding occasion similar to this rolls around, I trust the number of graduates will increase and the charecter of them will remain good, thus enhancing the value and increasing the reputation of the institution. The young ladies, who are to receive their diplomas, have after hard study and arduous labors at the bed side, and under the most trying circumstances, fulfilled all their obligations, and passing successfully the most rigid examinations, will now enter upon a different arens, and will I trust and believe, reflect credit upon their alma mater. I have seen personally their good work and I bespeak for them a prosperous future. They will do their duty, they will smooth and soothe the pillow of pain and disease, and will materially and effectually contribute to the success of the medical attendant whoever and wherever he may be. And right here, and appropriately too, let me say in words of admonition to the graduating nurses, that there is and always should be a community of interest between the doctor and the trained nurse; one is dependent on the other; whatever benefits one, benefits the other; harmony, congeniality and a hearty co-operation will always re-dound to the comfort and materially aid inteffecting the cure of the patient.

They must remember that, as graduate nurses, they are presumed to be resourceful and tactful, and under the most trying circumstances which preyail in severe emergency cases, wheth-er surgical or medical, they should be gentle, but firm, patient and forbear-ing, ignoring the uneasiness and whims of the suffering victim; for imnationce in a trained nurse as well as a physican, is never tolerated by the suferer or those immediately interested

Remember that cleanliness, cheerulness, vigilance and systematic regul arity are the great qualities needed in a sick room. Remember, too, to hold on to a case, no matter how adverse the circumstances are, with a tenacity which never abandons a case while It was my pleasure to lecture to you

luring the last session of this Training

School, and as a prelude to my recasion to say, and will now reiterate, that nursing in fevers constitutes the greater portion of a trained nurse's duties, especially in private work. The services of trained nurses in such cases services of trained nurses in such cases are needed for a longer period of time, demand more vigilant attention, more patience and forbearance, intelligence and tact, than in any other branch of work. The nurse should be clean, cheerful, uniformly kind and attentive and strike always a happy mean between extremes, on the one hand avoiding dereliction of duty, such as tardiness in carrying out the directions of the physician, failure to note in time changes in the condition of patient, and on the other hand supof patient, and on the other hand sup-plying the patient's wants, and pay-ing many little attentions which are agreeable to the patient and appreciated by him and often remembered with leating gratitude. Fussiness is a destructive quality and ignorance is always fussy." Nurses who know their business, but imperfectly, are apt to be always in motion, always addressing the un-fortunate patient, keeping him awake when he wants to sleep, constantly forcing drinks upon him, never resting themselves or letting him rest. Nurses from experience having acquired great skill will be able to see not only "the disease in the sick man, but the sick man in disease.' A most pleasant relation should exist between the physician and nurse: if differences there are, they should be adjusted, and under no circumstances should a nurse, particularly in private practice with prejudices against a physician, consent to nurse a patient under his care, unless the nurse should make up her mind to do her full duty to both physician and pa-tient. Nursing is frequently as im-portant as medical attention. Indeed the doctor and the nurse should be regarded as "twin forces each of which apart from the other loses half its value." Nurse every case without temerity but with tenacity and never abandon a case while there is life.

In conclusion let me say, that yours is a well established profession, train-ing schools of the highest grade being in all the principal cities of the world Competition is the order of the day there is always room at the top, and if you wish to be successful aim high. My best wishes go with you, and I believe I bespeak for all interested in the welfare of our institution as well. May you encounter but few thorns and thistles on your pathway, and may many flowers and much sunshine cheer and encourage you, while battling with the great enemy and horrible monster "disease." I thank you for your kind attention.
