FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 10 A CONSTITUTIONAL AMEND-

MENT. The Baltimore Sunkays: For many years there has been a strong sentiment in various States of the Union in favor of a change in the method of electing Federal Senators. The Constitution requires that they be elected by the Legislatures, but there is and has long been a movement to change the Constitution and have the Senators elected by the people. The idea of the framers of the Constitution was that the Senators should represent the States in their sovereign capacity rather than represent the people. When Mr. Calhoun was Vice-President it was his theory that the Senators were to be regarded somewhat as ambasadors from the States, and as presiding officer of the Senate he treated

But in the process of time, as the country has developed, changes have taken place, which, in the opinion of a great body of people, render a change in the manner of selecting Senators desirable. If it is essential to carry out the idea of the framers of the Constitution and have Senators as representatives of the governments of the States, there is no just reason why the sovereign people cannot select the representatives of their States just as truly as the Legislatures can.

There are two methods of changing the Constitution prescribed in that instrument. Congress may propose an amendment which shall become a part of the Constitution when ratified by three-fourths of the States. A bill or resolution proposing an amendment must receive the assent of two-thirds of both houses. The House of Representatives has more than once passed a resolution by the necessary vote submitting an amendment providing for the election of Senators by the people. But in this action the Senate has never contures naturally prefer that method.

The other way to amend the constitution is as follows: Congress is required on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States to call a convention for proposing amendments which shall become effective when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States or by conventions in three-fourths thereof. Recognizing that it is hopeless to expect any amendment of this character by the voluntary act of Congress many of the States have taken the initiative for a convention. The Legislatures of 12 of them, we believe, have made application to Congress to call a convention, and those in nine other States have adopted resolutions favoring the popular election of Senators. It will require the action of 30 States to compel Congress to call the convention, and with the prevailing sentiment in its favor there should be no difficulty in securing action for the reform in so many States. After such an amendment has been proposed by a convention, there is little doubt of its ratification by the necessary three-fourths of States. The obstacle which stands in the way of State initiative in calling a convention is the personal and political influence of Senators over the Legislatures of the several States. The Federal Senator owes his election to his influence over the Legislature, and in late years the Senator, when he belongs to the party of the national Administration, is the dispenser of Federal patronage, and that, as a rule, makes his power over his Legislature abso-

The great reason why the people desire the popular election of Senators is that the United States Senate rather than the people. They are at R. R. Bellamy's drug store. thus made independent of the people and find it perfectly safe to defy the public will.

There is another objection to the present method, and that is that the Senatorial elections interfere with the legitimate work of the Legislatures, consuming time which should belong to law making. It also has a bad effect upon the personnel of Legislature. Men are elected to the General Assembly frequently with regard only to their vote for Senator and with no regard for their fitness as law-makers, and it has almost come to pass than the Constitutional plan has been reversed. namely, that the Senator appoints the Legislature rather that that the Legislature appoints the Senator.

MAKING THE PEOPLY PAY FOR STRIKES.

The cost to the State of Virginia of keeping the peace in the city of Richmond during the recent street railway strike is estimated at $2,000 a day. "The true policy of the State," says the Philadelphia Record, "is to collect the cost of protection from the property holders who are protected. This would not be only a measure of justice, but it would assure the best insurance against mob violence. There is nothing so cooling upon popular outbreak as the knowledge that property destroyed by mobs must be paid for by the cities or counties where such destruction is per-The Charleston News and Courier wants to know how would this sort of an arrangement work in the striking section of the State of Pennsylvania? How would the taxation of the property holders of the coal regions have a cooling effect upon the mobs in that region, the members of which have no property, and would therefore not be liable to the payment of any taxes? If the rule laid down by the Record would be a

A man in San Francisco had to pay pretty dear for being "sassy. Smoke from a gas and electric company's plant greatly annoyed Mr. Claus Spreckles, the sugar king. He tried to get the president of the company to have the nuisance abated. The president was very curt to Mr. Spreckles, and the latter, to avenge himself, established a rival gas and electric plant, at a cost of $4,000,000, and began cutting rates. Prices were soon brought down to one-fourth what had formerly been paid. This proved too much for the "sassy" man and he begged for quarter. Spreckles' terms were to be bought out at the price of $6,000,000, which were agreed to.

A dispatch from Grafton, West Virginia, says that the total value of the coal mined in that State last year was $21,694,748, an increase of curred, and it is too much to hope $3,590,356 over the previous year. that it ever will. Short and Long Courtships. Young ladies in Russia are not at all averse to long engagements and use all sorts of artifices to stave off the wedding day as long as possible, while in Siam, where old maids are unknown, as all girls marry, the recognized length of an engagement is one month. If an engaged man in the Argentine Republic dallies beyond a reasonable time in leading his fiancee to the altar. he is heavily fined, and if a resident of the republic should fail to marry he is taxed until he reaches the age of eighty. In no country in the world are courtships so abnormally long as in Bohemia, where engagements commonly last from fifteen to twenty years. In fact, there recently died at the age of ninety-nine an old man who had been courting for seventy-five years and who was married on his deathbed. A Marble Slab. A writer in London Nature describes a white marble slab 2 inches thick and 35 by 70 inches, which is supported on stone posts and sags in the middle three inches out of level. It furnishes evidence that marble is in reality a fluid of enormous viscosity. This has some bearing on the question of the frigidity of the rocks composing the crust of the earth and the gradual adjustment of the earth's contour under gravity. The slab was placed in its

NEW YORK, July 9.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of thirteen points to a decline of one point, the loss being confined to the January option. The gains were due to further bull support and firmer cables than expected, particularly in regard to spot cotton, which was ten points higher in the English market, with sales reported of 10,000 bales. The bears were in no way disheartened apparently by this showing, however, and with the favorable weather all over the belt they imme-diately attacked the Blist vigorously, selling prices down from about five to eleven points. Then their offerings diminished and the bulls began to appear more prominently in the dealing. From that time to the finish the course of values was almost uninterruptedly upward. At first the rally was slow and lacked the violence and activity which has recently marked the movement of prices, but finding the apparent powerlessness of the Wall street syndicate and reports of damage by boll weevil in Texas, were in full retreat. In the last hour the market became very active and excited and the near positions were advanced in quite as sensational a manner as has yet been witnessed during the bull campaign. August had reached 12.07; then 12.20 was bid and no sale; finally a seller was found at 12.30; then 12.35 was reached, this being an advance of ninety-seven that I add my name to those endors. points over the closing of the preceding day, or nearly $5 a bale.
