WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 19 RETRIBUTION.

Richmond News Leader: Thirtyeight years ago to-morrow two men were walking side by side on the ramparts of Fortress Monroe. One of them was Jefferson Davis, 57 years old, the defeated, crushed and captive leader of a government overthrown, a country desolate and beaten, the representative of a people's bright dreams vanished and hopes blotted out in their best blood. He was feeble, wasted, stooping and helpless, barely able to walk, compelled to pause now and then for rest, gasping at the free air which he was permitted to breathe as a special favor and after long denial. The other of the two men was Nelson Appleton Miles, stalwart and sturdy, 26 years old, in the very fush of vigorous young manhood, having risen from the ranks to brevet major-general, commander of an army corps, one of the favorite heroes of a triumphant country and a conquering army.

At the order of General Miles, about three months before, on May 23, 1865, Mr. Davis had been shackled. The former president of the Confederate States of America was physically a weak, worn and sick man. He was confined in a fort with great thicknesses of stone wall, with many locked iron doors, trebled lines of armed sentinels and a deep most with high walls between him and the possibilities of escape or rescue. Yet he was thrown to the stone floor of his cell by four strong young soldiers, while guards stood by with cocked and loaded muskets, and shackles were fastened on his emaciated ankles. Thus degraded and tortured, he was kept day after day in a hot, slimy and foetid cell, denied a moment of solitude or peace, with a light blazing in his eyes all night and an armed soldier standing the commonest comforts and neconsities allowed to the vilest convicts in our penitentiary. Private soldiers were given the right to insult him and it was part of their duty to offend his natural human instincts and tastes in small and large details of life. All this was done by the order of General Nelson

A. Miles. Now, after these thirty-eight years, Mr. Davis sleeps peacefully in Hollywood, with the rushing waters of the James river singing endless requiem near by, with the love and reverence of his own people for his memory expressed daily in a thousand ways, with the growing respect principles demonstrated dally. General Miles, after a career of apparently brilliant success, after years in which, to do him right, he did good and valiant serfrom the command of the army of the Union, with scant courtesy, with curt words from his commandthrough history. He is wounded -Life. deeply in his vanity, a sensitive part for every man, but in him abnormally developed and peculiarly sention. We wonder if the memory of a pound this Fall. those days at Fortress Monroe comes to him in these times of his own dissater and suffering in his old age, and if he thinks now and then that perhaps it may be retribution. Be it remembered, at he knows well, that the torture of the prisoner was Miles' own act and will. He and At the first thought of self destruction take Electric Bitters. grading mutilation. We do not think that docking has ever been a pravalent custom in the military service. On the contrary, the United States cavalry has rather prided itself on treating that brutel surgery as an affectation both foppish and unsoldierly. But the War Department's order puts the seal of official condemnation on the practice whenever and wherever followed in the military establishment. We hope that the influence of the example thus set will not be lost on owners of horses who still permit docking as a concession to false ideas of equine fashion .- N. Y.

SCOOP OF THE SEABOARD.

Wall Street Says the South is About to be Huntlegtonized as Was the West.

Special to Atlanta Journal. NEW YORK, AUG. 15 .- Wall street is asking if the Frisco Sea board Air Line deal means that the South is to be Zollis P. Huntingtonized. The railroad situation in the South is attracting about as much attention in the street as any one other thing.

It is the general belief that in bringing about the Frisco-Seaboard Air Line deal there has been accomplished by indirection what was sought to be accomplished directly in the northwest through the North ern Securities company; that is, a consolidation of all the railroads of the section if not under one management, at least under managements so closely allied that they will work in thorough harmony and there will be no chance for throat cutting competition, and that the Southern States from Mobile and New Orleans to Cincinnati and Norfolk and from the Mississippi river to the Atlantic seaboard will be bottled up as was California when the Huntington combination controlled all the railroads to the coast. Now Morgan is in practical control either by combination or direct ownership of all the railroad systems south of the Potomac and east of the Mississippi and is in a fair way to bring the lines in the southwest, beyoud the Mississippi into the fold.

That is the Wall street view, and it seems to be borne out by the facts. The Seaboard Air Line as an independent system has long been a menace to rates and has on several occasions been a thorn in the side of the Southern railway system with which Mr. Morgan's firm is the controlling factor and with which it came into most direct competition. Severa times efforts to get control of it have been made by Morgan, but they have in the yast been fu-tile, the Richmond financier, J. Skelton Williams, believing he could do better outside the combination than in it. The situation in the South has been thus summed up by Wall street man who knows i theroughly:

"This Southern combination nov ncludes the Atlantic Coast Line, Southern railway, the Seaboard Air Line, the Louisville & Nashville and the Frisco, and the minor roads which are simply appendages of the great systems when they are nominally independent.

"The Illinois Central and Gould roads are friendly. This means that the railroad business in the South from Texas to Virginia will run primarily in the interest of the railroads, as Mr. Morgan and his friends see it. The general interests of that section of the country may or may not be served, accord ing to how they jibe with Mr. Morgan's ideas as to what is the best interests of the roads. If they run in parallel lines well and good of the country, if not, well the railroads will not suffer. The fact that most if not all the Southern States have commissions with power to fix maximum rates will perhaps prevent any general raise freight rates, nominally, but the experts employed by the Southern railway trust can find a hundred ways of evading the exactions of the commissions and as they are able to employ the most astute political manipulators in the various States, there is little danger of adverse legislation. One good result which may follow the combination is that rebates and discriminations may be done away with because there will not be the scramble for business which makes such things advisable. If this result follows i will be a good thing, both for the country and the railroads."

The general impression in the street is that the combination would be a good thing for the railroads and this belief was evidenced by the better prices for their securities.

Going Through Them. "Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Caterpiller, "it must be very expensive to clothe such a large family as you

"It's simply awful," said Mrs. Moth, "the habit that all the young Moths have of 'going through clothes." -- Baltimore Herald. An Eskimo Episode. "You are the light of my life," sighed the lover, edging a trifle closer to the hand carved ice settee. "You only say that because you know I drink so much train oil," she blubbered. "However, it resulted in a match."

PROGRESSIVE CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Charles Conrad Abbott, whose work as a naturalist has made him well known, returned from a fishing excursion not long since deeply impressed with the cruelty that is an almost inevitable attendant upon living. Dr. Abbott caught on this excursion a pike, says the Philadelphia Record. It was a fish about six inches long, and on opening it to clean it the angler found in its stomach a good sized mud minnow. He examined the mud minnow in some amazement, and his hand felt something bulky inside it. Accordingly he cut it open and found with-in it a tiny pike. He felt now as they feel who study those Chinese puzzles that have ivory ball within ivory ball, and without hesitation he ripped open the little pike. Within it he found what he had expected to find-another mud minnow. Thus in one catch he had come upon a pike containing a minnow that contained a pike that contained a minnow.

The Norwegian Costume. It is at church in Norway that the national costume is best seen. In the north the women wear short, dark gowns, with fringed handkerchiefs tied becomingly over their curly fair hair, black ones for the matrons and white ones for maidens.

In the south the old Norwegian dress is often worn. It consists of a short dark petticoat, with a stripe of bright colors, a full white blouse, and a red bodice heavily embroidered, while on Sundays a quantity of silver pins and chains are added. The headdress varies according the occasion and the wearer's social condition. The girls wear jaunty red caps, the married women a coif made of many folds of starched white linen, plaited over a wooden frame, and a bride wears a high metal crown, curi-ously chased and set with jewels.

To Avoid Telling Secrets. A New York theatrical manager was advising a friend to be cautious in "You can't take too many precautions," he asserted. 'An ounce of prevention,' as the copy book used to say, 'is better than seven pounds of alfopathic, homeopathic or hydropathic cure.' One of the most contented men I ever knew was the most cautious. He was deaf and dumb, and he never went to bed without putting on boxing

COTTON MARKETS.

By Zelegraph to the Morning Star New York, Aug. 18.—The cotton narket opened quiet but firm and unhanged to an advance of five points changed to an advance of nee points and while showing occasionally reactions ruled generally steady to firm all day on the better Liverpool cables, moderate bull support and covering following the weekly bureau report, which while indicating an improvement in the average condition of the crop was hardly so universally favorable as expected. During the forenoon trading was very dull and midday found the market at seven to ten points higher. Following the reading of the weekly crop report prices immediately advanced another three to four points, but eased off again under realizing. Then came more general demand led by Wall street commission house and which centered on September and October and the list was very steady at within a point or two of the best of the session or at a net advance of nine to nineteen points. Sales were esti-mated at 20,000 bales. The weather map was again very favorable and in-fluenced the partial reaction following the initial advance, but was largely offset by the higher cables which were practically good on the decline of fourteen points on spot cotton. The clique leader bid 12.20 for 5,000 August around midday after that position had sold at 12.10 and did not get an offer though afterward the position sold at 12.30 and closed at 12.29.
