Ted's Beginning.
The new assistant rector was trying to impress upon the mind of his young son the difference between his own position—and that of his superior. "Now, Ted," he ended, "I want you to remember to be very polite to the rector. We are strangers, and I am only the assistant. It becomes us to be extremely courteous. Some day perhaps I shall be rector myself."
The next day the boy was walking with his father when they met the dignified rector.
"Hello!" promptly began Ted. "Pops has been tellin' me 'bout you—how you're the real thing, an' he's just the hired man an' we got to knuckle under! But some day he may be 't' himself, an' then you'll see!"

Chicken Obstinacy.
A police court story which is said to illustrate "the indifference of the average chicken to good advice" was told recently at Kingston, England, when a carter was charged with stealing a fowl.
"I am guilty of stealing the fowl," admitted the prisoner. "It was eating the corn out of my horse's nose bag, and I said to it, 'If you don't go away, I'll make you,' and struck it with the whip. When I saw it was dead, I put it in the wagon. I didn't know who owned it."
"I judge it was the chicken's fault," remarked the prosecutor, "and I'll not press the charge against the man."

Luck.
Luck means rising at 6 o'clock in the morning, living on a dollar a day if you earn two, minding your own business and not meddling with other people's. Luck means appointments you have never failed to keep, trains you have never failed to catch. Luck means trusting in God and in your own resources.—Exchange.

Helping Her Out.
Miss Peppery—No, he didn't like your eyebrows. He said they were too black. Miss Painter—The knee! Miss Peppery—However, I assured him they were not as black as they were painted.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The good man prolongs his life. To be able to enjoy one's past life is to live twice.—Martial.

Her Self Control.
"There's one thing I will say," remarked Mr. Millions, "and that is that my daughter, Arabella, has a fine disposition."
"Indeed!"
"Yes, sir. The way she can listen for hours to her own playing on the violin shows remarkable self control."

Accounted For.
"The baby's awful bald," said Mabel. "Yes; they come bald on purpose. If they had hair they'd pull it all out, and then all that hair would be wasted" said Thomas.—Philadelphia Ledger.

IN THE DEATH CHAIR.
How It Feels When the Killing Current is Turned On.
He waited a second or an age. Then suddenly it seemed as if he must leap from the chair, his body was swelling to some monstrous, impossible, inhuman shape; his muscles were stretched, millions of hot and dreadful needles were piercing and pricking him, a stupendous roaring was in his ears, then a million colors—colors he had never seen or imagined before, colors no one had ever seen or imagined, colors beyond the range of the spectrum, new, undiscovered, summoned by some mysterious agency from distant corners of the universe—played before his eyes. Suddenly they were shattered by a terrific explosion in his brain—then darkness.
But, no; there was still sensation. A dull purple color slowly spread before him, gradually grew lighter, expanded, and with a mighty pain he struggled, groping his way in torture and torment over fearful obstacles from some far distance remote as black stars in the cold abyss of the universe. He struggled back to life, then an appalling confusion, a grasp of consciousness; he heard the ticking of the two watches. Then through his brain there slowly trickled a thread of thought that squirmed and glowed like a white hot wire.
A faint groan escaped the pale lips below the black leather mask; a tremor ran through the form in the chair; there it relaxed and was still.
It's all over. The doctor, lifting his fingers from Archie's wrist, tried to smile and wiped the perspiration from his face with a handkerchief.—From Brand Whitlock's "The Turn of the Balance."

A Hypothetical Question.
"Miss de Smythe," began the young man, "I want to ask you a hypothetical question."
The girl nodded assent.
"If a young man of good family and sound health and an assured income of $5,000 were to meet the most charming of girls and feed her ice cream for a year; if she had a complexion like a rose, hair a crown of golden glory, the hand of a fairy, the bearing of a queen; if she knew how not to play the piano, was versed in cooking, competent to superintend a home, and if the young man, auspiciously catching the young girl alone, were to murmur into her ear of pearl, 'Will you marry me?' what, in your estimation, would be her condition of mind and what her answer?"
"While not an expert alienist," responded the girl coyly, "I think she'd believe him a chump for being so slow, but she'd say 'Yes.'"
With the preliminaries thus settled, the naming of the day was a simple matter.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RULES GOVERNING THE CONTEST. READ THEM CAREFULLY:

- A.—All subscriptions must be received at the regular published rate. No discounts or commissions whatever will be allowed.
- B.—No subscriptions will be received for a less time than three months.
- C.—Every subscription sent in under this offer must be a bona-fide new subscription to The Morning Star. No others will be received, and a careful investigation will be made to determine whether or not the name sent in is a new subscriber.
- D.—Cash must accompany all orders.
- E.—All that is necessary to win any of the trips enumerated above is that the subscriptions sent in shall aggregate the amounts named. Orders need not be for yearly subscriptions only. In securing subscriptions the following ratio may be observed: Two six-months' subscriptions are equivalent to one yearly subscription; four three months' subscriptions are equivalent to one yearly subscription.
- F.—The names of new subscribers, and the amounts collected, should be sent in as soon as obtained. Receipts will be forwarded to the subscribers at once, and the amount placed to the credit of the contestant.
- G.—This exceptional offer will remain open to all until September 1, 1907. If you get to work at once there is time a plenty for you to secure one of the best trips. You may visit the Exposition any time you please.
