Mecklenburg, the county Then, indeed, will fraternal feeling which took this stand, covered all that western country extending over the fertile valleys of the Appalachian chain, which teemed with the "Hornets" who afterwards stung Ferguson to death at the battle of King's Mountain, and whence the swains flew on the flanks and rear of Cornwallis in his pursuit of Greene. Their resolutions were sent off by express to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia and the Provincial Congress at Hillsboro, but were not adopted as the general policy until the passage of Richard Henry Lee's resolution, in June, 1776. Such is the simple story of the Regulators and the first Declaration of Independence by the mountain men of North Carolina.

I have only shadowed faintly those stirring scenes and not even named the patriot leaders who fired the people's hearts and directed their arms in those days-for in the war which swiftly followed, every cross-road became a battle-ground and every river ford a pass, held at arms. The romance of the Revolution was in North and South Carolina. The homogeneopinion, for there the germs of an aristocratic society had never existed. But the foundation of South Carolina was based on a landed nobility and gentry, and John Locke's Institutes of Government for North Carolina attempted to organize hereditary rank as the foundation of society there. Again, after the rebellions of 1715 and 1745, many of the Highland adherents of the House of Stuart found refuge near Cape Fear. Neal MacNeal purchased lands near Cross Creek, now Fayetteville, and settled 500 or 600 colonists there. Flora McDonald, who saved the Chevalier Charles Edward, after Culloden, settled here, and between the Highlands of the Cumberland and the Covenanters of Mecklenburg there was sure to be bad blood. The Highland stock appears to have been the back-bone of loyalty, as the other was of rebellion, and their feud waged hot and bloody during the ensuing years. The hardest fighting, the most destructive encoun-Whigs and Tories of North Carolina, civil war always is and even now loyalty has no very fine savor nor any very refreshing associations in the Old some inquiry and interest in our Revimmediate locality in which we pre-serve and cherish them. RICHLAND, STAFFORD Co., VA., April 27, 1875.

GENERAL W. F. BARTLETT-My dear Sir: In common with many other ex-Confederate soldiers, with unfeigned pleasure I have read the remarks recently made by you at the Lexington-Concord celebration.

Just such soldierly sentiments, generously felt and expressed, will do more in a brief space of time towards restoring good feeling, fraternity and fellowship between the two sections of a common country than all the reconstruction eloquence of political partisans delivered during these past ten years-a period which you so truly say should have been sub tiber-

Your words in reference to Federal soldiers are equally applicable to the Confederate soldiers, for they too "have a prejudice in favor of peace," and I fully agree with you that "be-tween the soldiers of the two great davit of the claimant, setting forth sections of our great country frater-nal relations were established long erty upon which the lien attaches, ago," and we feel that if such a feli-it shall be the duty of Justice of citous companionship of sentiment | the Peace or the Clerk of the Sucould have found a resting place in the hearts of other classes of people, the suit shall be pending to issue an the rehabilitation of the South would order to the constable or sheriff, as long since have been assured. PORK FROM DRY CORN.

A correspondent of the Indiana Farmer reports that he is feeding thirty-three hogs for market, keeping them in a small lot, and feeding nothing but dry corn and giving them good water as their only drink. Commencing March 6th he fed them four bushels of corn daily, counting sixtyeight pounds in the ear as equal to one bushel of shelled corn. The hogs weighed 6,010 pounds, or an average ons democratic population of New of 181.6. In ten days they gained England allowed little difference of 595 pounds, a fraction over eighteen pounds each; or fourteen and threefourth pounds for each bushel of corn ted. The age or breed of the hogs is not stated, but they were probably, judging by the weight, young hogs in only "store" condition. This is a very good showing indeed.

Shoved Him in the Ditch for Being "Too Unanimous" Every Time. An acquaintance of the late Rowland Williams, the English elergy-man who was formally suspended for his review of "Bunsen's Biblical Researches," recently told this story concerning him: He was once walking beside a deep dry ditch with a friend of no particular mental consequence, and the talk turned on the Apocalypse. Is the Pope Antichrist? This, according to Rowland Williams, was absird, for-but the reasons need not be given. In this view his silent friend acquiesced, and there the Pope was Antichrist, and Rome Middling 15 Babylon. The silent Umbra looked a little surprised, but again he acquiesced. Instead of being flattered by this double submission, the controversialist shoved his companion into the ditch and walked home alone.

What the Nervous Require.

What the nervous require more than anything else is invigoration. Sedatives alone will not cure nervousness. The reason that the nerves are so susceptible is that they are weak. Compensate for this deficiency of strength, and over-acute nervous sensibility disappears. The most rational, wholesome, and agreeable tenic is Hostatter's Stomach Bitters. Medical men recommend its use for the cure of general debility, knowing it to possess strength giving properties of the highest order, and at the same time to be a means of reforming those bodily irregularities which induce nervousness and loss of vigor. It is the best known remedy for dyspepsia, whether nervous or billious, and is powerfully conservative of a regular habit of body. As it is notorious that those who are afflicted with weak nerves, billiousness or constipation, are peculiarly hable to the influence of malaria, it is invaluable to such persons on account of its preventive efficacy. It endows the body with health, and the mind with cheerfulness. What the Nervous Require. apr 30-deodiw fri su wed-wit
