THE DOCTORS DIAGNOSING THE DISEASE.

Gov. Seymour says the present deplorable state of affairs has resulted from the decay of virtue among the people; Mr. Adams ascribes it to lack of head and vigor on the part of the President.

THE VICE PRESIDENCY.

There does not seem to be any anxiety about the Vice Presidency. Nobody appears to be working for the place, and the journals seldom refer to "the second place on the ticket."

Hendricks was not far from the Fifth Ward himself, and said he saw the negroes running with clubs. As soon as possible he ordered the Sheriff to organize a posse of men to protect the city from violence, and authorized him to receive such arms as he might find necessary for the purpose.

VANCE AND KELLEY.

We alluded last Sunday to the generous and kindly speech of Mr. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, in Committee of the Whole, House of Representatives. That little speech was interjected into a set speech of Gen. Robert B. Vance, before the committee, on the question of paying nearly four hundred thousand dollars for postmasters and contractors for services in 1861.

The tide is setting in strongly for Gov. Tilden, and in all human probability he will receive for the office of President the nomination of the united, energized, resolute and confident Democracy at the St. Louis Convention. We have been among those who, while favoring the strongest man, no matter from what quarter he might come, have thought that the nominee should be a Western man or a Pennsylvanian.

THE CHARLOTTE BREMEN WILL CELEBRATE THE 50TH OF MAY.

The Charlotte Bremen will celebrate the 50th of May, and the anniversary of the battle of Spotsylvania Court House.

An Incident of the Battle of Spotsylvania Court House. The battle at Spotsylvania Court House was, in many respects, the most fiercely contested struggle of the war. At times the contending lines were but a few feet apart. Hancock's veterans, cooped after a desperate charge in massed columns, and under cover of darkness, which for a time met with resistance as stubborn as it was grand and heroic, carried a portion of the works behind which stood a single line of our troops, who, during the previous seven days' fighting, had nobly upheld the martial renown of the Army of Northern Virginia. To retake the work another division was ordered forward. Under a murderous fire of musketry and artillery they advanced to the attack. On reaching the outer line of fortifications it was found that our forces did not extend far enough to the right. McGowan's brigade was ordered right flank by file right, and moved in that direction at the double-quick. The ground was slippery from the rain and crimson with gore.
