NO. 1.

RADICALISM—A SIGNIFICANT ELEMENT.

The Union League of New York is composed of the leading men who belong to the Republican party. On the night of October 21 they held a meeting, when they passed resolutions tendering the thanks of the association to the President of the United States for his earnest efforts, in obedience to the Constitution and laws to protect the State of South Carolina from domestic violence, and to secure the rights of the free enjoyment of the right of suffrage. Thanks were also tendered to the loyal press of the country for its able and manly vindication of proof, and the preservation of law and liberty from the abuses of sectional influence and partisan corruption.

This revolution has spread into Pennsylvania, and the awakening there is causing Cameron and his crew an anxiety they have never before felt. But what troubles the managers most here is the intelligence of the old and State of New York. The largeness of the returns of the referendum among solid men, who have never been cast any but a Republican vote, and who are now determined to deposit their ballots for the Democratic candidates, are fully reported to Chandler and his confederates, and make them very blue indeed.

"But this is not the worse by any means. Chandler has found in his frequent visits to New York, especially the fact that the merchants and bankers who used to contribute thousands will not give a cent to help the Republican ticket. They know that the effect of the calamities of Blaine, Morton, Ingoldsby, Boutwell, and the outrages of the Administration against the South, has been to rest on their material interests. While this warfare is kept up there can be no real peace; and without peace prosperity is practically impossible."

He adds this significant paragraph which throws light on the New York "situation," and enables every one to see why the Republicans of that city will vote by thousands for Tilden, Peace, and Reform. He says:

A Republican Administration, headed by Hayes, should come into power. Grant would not only be captured, but at the end of four years this same sectional strife would be again renewed, as it was in 1861, 1868, 1872, and 1876, perhaps even more disastrously, on trials on the relations of the two sections. This agitation in the interests of politicians alone cannot go on without serious derangements of business, to be felt more directly and severely in New York than in any part of the Union."

A SLANDERER.—About the New York Tribune, after slandering the people of the South most villainously, has begun to slander honest old Horace Greeley, the founder of the Tribune. The stool-pigeon says that the old peacemaker, "had he been spared to his country, would to-day be found foremost in the support of Rutherford B. Hayes." We believe this to be an infamous attempt to degrade the memory of a very able old man, who in spite of crochets and eccentricities was thoroughly honest, and a true friend of peace and reconciliation. He showed a pacific and kindly spirit towards the South as soon as the war had ended. It was Horace Greeley who went upon the bail-bond of that leading rebel, Jefferson Davis, when the malignant of the North were crying out for his blood, and the blood of Robert E. Lee. We cannot doubt if Mr. Greeley were living that he would be in the forefront of the battle on the side of justice, and the truth.

NEW YORK.—The Tribune, the Washington Star, a Republican paper, has this to say of the 28th amendment:

"There is no doubt that this great State will give its 35 electoral votes for its great Reform Governor, Sam'l J. Tilden. The Washington Star, a Republican paper, has this to say of the 28th amendment:

"It is estimated that the entire cost in New York city will exceed $14,000,000, of which $10,000 are conceded to the Democrats. This would leave $5,000 for the Republicans. The Republicans claim the ability to overcome 40,000 majority in New York city, in the State at large, but it is by no means certain that the Democrats will not contest with 40,000 majority in the whole State."

Now it would seem that a change like this proposed in the 28th amendment would meet the hearty approbation of every honest laboring man in the State, whether he be Democrat or Republican, white or colored. But the opposition is making a party question of the amendments, and is thereby ignoring the true interests of the people of North Carolina. No man of good judgment can for a moment doubt that the amendment will be adopted, and that it will be a great blessing to the people of the West.

That looks "mighty" like throwing up the sponge and crying "no more." The New York Herald says:

"The steady tramp of 90,000 voters, it is expected, will be heard at the polls upon election day in support of the Democratic ticket. Many of the stragglers and malcontents who fought outside the regular ranks in consequence of the radical policy have returned to fold.

Mr. Greeley sleeps in his grave, an honored man, whose memory is still cherished by thousands of his countrymen. He can not speak in this great crisis. But his home has spoken in the person of his eldest son, and dearly loved daughter, Ida, and her husband, Col. Smith, and it has spoken for Samuel J. Tilden, and the party of Reconciliation and Reform.

It is proposed to fix the pay of members of the Legislature at $4 a day, and ten cents for mileage, not to pay members for more than sixty days.

Now, it is confidently believed that these changes would be highly beneficial to the State. The cost of the Legislature could not be more than $50,000, everything included. This would save the people at least $10,000 annually, or in ten years $100,000. Look at the following figures. The Republican Legislature of 1870-71 cost $240,000. The Democratic Legislature of 1872-73 cost $101,000. The Democratic Legislature of 1872-73 cost $120,000.

Under the proposed change, no Legislature could cost more than $60,000, and might not cost more than $50,000, for the session might not extend to sixty days.

Now it is plain to every understanding that every economical view demands that this salutary and important change should be made. No fair-minded, honest tax-payer can

THE TILDEN DEMONSTRATION.

What says Governor Tilden will not carry New York? Read the account in our telegraphic columns of the tremendous demonstration in New York city on Thursday night, when more than sixty thousand voters were in line with torches. The grand old man, Uncle Sammy Tilden, stood at the Everett House from 7 o'clock, when the procession began to move, until 1 o'clock Friday morning, reviewing the Reform army of the greatest American city as it marched on to assured victory on the 7th of November. O, don't you hear the tramp, tramp, tramp of the millions of freedmen as they press on to the day of deliverance? O, don't you hear the slogan of the clans as they are marching upon the strongholds of the enemies of civil liberty and constitutional government? Men of North Carolina, there is work to be done. Only do your duty as our great leader in New York, and our great leaders in North Carolina are doing their duty, and when November's sun shall set it will be amid the rejoicings of a free, united and happy people.

SUPPOSED DEATH OF GENERAL LORING.

North Carolinians will remember

the gallant Confederate Major General W. W. Loring. He was a native of our State, and a nephew of the late Thomas Loring, who founded the Raleigh Standard. At the close of the war of the States he went to England and accepted service in the army of the Khedive. He was a brave, bold, enterprising officer. We hear he has met his death thousands of miles from his native land. The following we take from an exchange:

"The London Times' account of the second disastrous Egyptian expedition into Abyssinia mentions that Lord Raglan, an English officer, and general of the same nationality, formed part of the staff of Prince Hassan, its commander, but their individual fate is not recorded. The first expedition, whose slaughter the second went to avenge, was totally exterminated, from the humblest soldier to the General-in-Chief. The only exception being the Count de Lichi, who was left for dead, but was recovered by Providence upon it in such distress, the recognition of which he addressed the assembled multitudes for nearly three hours, he addressed the cheering and applauding throng, calling forth the cheers and the applause, and kindling, as probably never before, the enthusiasm of the hearers."

The day was fair, all business was suspended, and the people of the City of Raleigh, though very numerous, were gathered in the streets to witness the passage of the amendment.

The State barrier between the

lina, and the

From a private letter from Maj. J. A.

Engelhard to a friend in this city, dated

Henry's, N. C., Oct. 24th, we get the pariculars somewhat more in detail of the terrible and thrilling adventure of the party of the 28th inst., in the mountains about two miles from that place on the evening of Tuesday last, the 24th inst., already mentioned in a special STAR telegram.

The Major says: "Well, before this reaches you I suppose you will have heard all about the stage accident." It was the most narrow escape I ever saw. Mr. Nutt was on the seat with the driver; Mr. Parsley's two daughters were with him above the driver, and the master, Col. Conner,

the mountain, just at dark, the lead horse

became unruly and reared up, pushing

the other lead horse off the road. Mr.

Nutt jumped; Jannie hesitated; I forced her to jump, and I took Mamie around the wrist and jumped with her, and got to the door of the stage in time to assist Mrs. Wm.

Parsley and one of Mrs. Taylor's children out. The left wheel horse had borne up the mountain, and the stage had gone over the edge of the three horses, after a moment or two, which enabled all to escape, for just as Mrs. Parsley got out, the stage went head foremost and stage and horses fell full fifty feet into a ravine. I got a light sent the driver after help and went down and relieved the horses.

One horse was a faithful fellow, but was not able to do more until help came. I think only one of the horses in fact died, but those who are alive are in bad condition.

Mr. Nutt was buried in his yard with honorable military honors.

He was laid to rest on Saturday morning, and the services were conducted by

Rev. Mr. Englehardt.

At the funeral, the
