

Mr. Peterson Dunn, of Danaville, near Newse Post Office, Wake county, has been a most successful farmer, and his success proves that the business of farming is as profitable as any other...

Although a statute may be unconstitutional in part and constitutional in part, yet where only one object is aimed at and the same is unconstitutional and all the provisions are contributory to it, and would not have been enacted but for the main object, the whole is void.

Where a furnished supplies to a cropper of B upon a promise by B to pay for the same, and afterwards B took into possession cotton belonging to the cropper, and sufficient to pay A's account and thereafter promised to pay the same, B is liable to A upon the latter promise.

Where by agreement between them, A bought the land of B at a sale, and the title in trust to secure the amount of his bid, also the amount due to his (A's) ward, Held, that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust was established, and that B was entitled to an order for an account to ascertain any balance that might be due to A.

One who claims a prior donee or creditor as a purchaser for value, must prove a full consideration, not only to the full value, but a price paid which would not cause surprise or make any one exclaim, "He got the land for nothing; there must have been fraud or connivance about it."

Where A procures his land to be sold under execution with intent to defraud his creditors, and B purchases it at a grossly inadequate price, without knowledge of the fraudulent contrivance of A, he is not a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration.

Justices of the peace have no jurisdiction of actions founded in tort. Nance vs. The Carolina Central Railway Company.

Caral knowledge of a married woman, obtained by fraud in personating her husband, does not amount to rape. Therefore, when B was indicted for an assault, with intent to commit rape on a married woman, and the court charged the jury, that if he intended to have connection with her by fraud in personating her husband, he was guilty. Held, to be error. State vs. Brooks.

When A dies leaving a will and testament, appointing B and C his executors, "with discretionary power to settle my estate as they shall judge best for the interest of my heirs at law." Held, that the executors had no power to sell the lands of the testator. Skinner vs. Wood.

To confer a power to sell lands under a will, plain and express words are necessary or the power must be implied by the imposition of duties on the executor, which cannot be performed except by sale. Ibid.

A clerk of the Superior Court, appointed to sell real estate in a proceeding for partition, acts in his official capacity, even though he is not designated as clerk in the order of appointment. And the loss of money collected by him, in pursuance thereof, by being stolen from a safe in which it was deposited, is an official default and breach of bond for which his sureties are liable. Coy vs. Blatt.

A bill from a railroad is sometimes not more demand than a mere receipt. A well merited reputation has Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and this remedy is sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents per bottle.

No remedy can be afforded for an attack of pneumonia, severe bronchitis, consumption, and other lung troubles, unless the system is purified by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It is a powerful purgative and cleanses the system of all impurities, and is a most valuable remedy for all lung troubles, and is sold by all druggists.
