THE PRICE OF COTTON.

Every one in the South is more or

Why it has remained at such low fig causes have been assigned. The fact that cotton is very low is about the

it. At one time it was believed it

The President's message is well written. It is long, which is the fault of nearly all of the public documents of the day, but it is short when compared with one of Mr. Tilden's annual messages to the Legislature, when he was Governor of New York. It will repay the reader, and contains many passages that are well deserving of careful attention. We believe it will make a good impression upon the country, however much exceptions may be taken to particular parts. Mr. Hayes may be said to have no party—to be without and could be constrained to vote for any organs to champion his cause and the passage of a law for the protecpraise all he says. The fashion in tion of sheep husbandry. But w other days was for the partisan press to indorse and laud all that was said by their President, and for the opposition to criticize adversely all that was recommended. There was no honesty in such praise or criticism. Mr. Hayes will fare better in some sense. He will not be praised throughout by any paper, we dare say, but he will be justly treated by all papers, of every party, that are governed by a seuse of right and fair-

His remarks upon his efforts to secare "domestic tranquility" to the country are certainly deserving of hearty praise. He began his administration with a set purpose to give peace to the country, and he has done so. It is with truth that he declares that "political turmoil and turbulence have disappeared; useful industries have been resumed; public credit in the Southern States has been greatly strengthened; and the encouraging benefits of a revival of commerce between the sections of the country lately embroiled in civil war, are fully enjoyed."

In the discussion of the financial questions now before the country the President commits himself clearly and irrevocably to the resumption of specie payments. His views upon the silver bill are not precisely what we supposed they were from reading the brief synopsis telegraphed. He thinks it wiser to fund the debt at a low rate of interest than by forcing silver upon the holders of its obligations. He has a kindly leaning towards a silver currency, not as an unlimited legal tender, but to be restricted by boundaries. But we were doubtless correct in saying that he will veto the Silver Bill if it passes Congress in its present shape. His only indorsement of silver is to make it legal tender to a limited extent.

His remarks upon civil service re form will not increase the confidence of the country in the ability of the President to carry out successfully his plan. The comment of the Philadelphia Times may be accepted as just:

"There will be disappointment in some quarters, as we have before hinted, that the message is not more aggressive in its enunciation of the principles of civil service reform, upon which the administration has staked so much of its good name. No doubt, however, it is better that such aggressiveness should be seen in deeds rather than in ness should be seen in deeds rather than in words, for of the latter we have had quite enough in previous official and semi-official utterances of the President and his Cabinet. All that was needed on this occasion was a concise statement of the principles that animate the administration and the assurance that they will be faithfully executed. This statement and this assurance we have, but in language that will neither arouse the enthusiasm of the friends of reform nor greatly quicken the ire of his ene-

port duty on tea and coffee. He These suggestions are practical and certainly worth considering. If by keeping back the cotton even one cent per pound is gained, it is an item of great importance. A planter who has fifty bales of cotton would receive, at this rate, not less than $225 additional for his cotton, or $4.50 for each bale. At two cents he would receive $9 more on every bale made

When men are compelled to sell they must take the market price. Men who can afford to hold ordinarily secure larger prices than they who are forced into market. It strikes us that the suggestions of the circular are far from visionary, and, if acted upon, might be of immense benefit to the South.

A Young Man from Fayetteville Ar rested on the Charge of Highway Robbery.

Chief of Police Brock received a telegram from Fayetteville, Thursday evening, signed by E. P. Powers, J. P., requesting him to arrest one John Williamson, charged with highway robbery, who would arrive here during the night on the steamer A. P. Hurt, with further directions to search the prisoner and send him back to Fayetteville. Accordingly a look-out was kept for the steamer in question, and at 2 o'clock yesterday morning she landed at her wharf near the foot of Mulberry street, up which she was boarded by Sergeant Savage, of the police force, and the young man ing asleep. He aroused and dressed himself, asked no questions as to why he was arrested, and was taken to the guard house where he is held to await a requisition from the authorities of Fayetteville. The sum of twelve dollars and fifty cents was found Williamson, who is a young man of prepos sessing appearance and well dressed, stated in conversation with the Chief of Police yesterday morning, that he talked with Mr. Powers, on the market square in Fayetteville on Thursday morning, justibefore the steamer left, and that nothing was said about the matter for which he is now under arrest, and that no effort was made to detain him; if there had been he would not have been here; that he had intended to get off at a point on the river, but finally concluded to come here, and had expecte to return on the boat yesterday afternoon He also requested the Chief of Police to send him back to Payetteville as soon as possible, in accordance with the instructions from Mr. Powers, Justice of the Peace; but as he would have to be sent under guard it was thought best that an officer should come after him, and a telegram to that effect was sent to Mr. Powers.

We learn that young Williamson has a nother in Fayetteville, who is highly re-

After the above was written, Capt. Albert Worth, of the steamer A. P. Advantages of Railroad Connection with Onslow and Jones Counties. A friend and correspondent at Palo Alto, Onslow county, Mr. Daniel N. Farnell, has sent us a communication relative to the advantages which, in his opinion, railroad from Wilmington to Onslow county and from thence to Trenton, in Jones county, would result to this city and also to the people of those counties. He says: "If a railroad was thus constructed "The most important depressing influence is the number of people who have lately gone into the business of offering every night to Europe, from every Southern port, cotton at cheaper prices than can be done in any legitimate way. These people calculate that the necessities of planters will compel large deliveries and lower prices, and enable them to cover the accepted offers, with a commission. This system interferes with all regular business. the vast products of Onslow and Jones would be rushed entirely to the Wilming. ton market. * * * From Wilmington across New River at Speed's Ferry and from thence across White Oak River at Smith's mill and thence to Trenton, would be the most profitable route. Along this route would be found fertile lands which have no equal in North Carolina for all kinds of farming. Thousands of acres of very rich land, now nothing more than a desolate forest, would be brought into thorough cultivation, and the production of cotton, corn, peas and peanuts would be immense. Besides all this, vast quantities of been, for the past two years, in the same direction. Instead of offering advances to planters and others to carry cotton until a fair price can be obtained, every effort is made to depress prices, in order to secure at model to depress prices, in order to secure at would be shipped in the morning and the evening to the evening the evening that the evening the evening to the evening that the evening the even that the even that the evening that the even that the evening that the evening that the evening that the evening that the even the evening that the evening that the evening that the evening that the even the even the even the even the even the even that the even would reach Wilmington in the evening, or would be shipped in the evening and be ready for delivery early the next morning." Our correspondent then proceeds to portray in glowing colors the great advantages which would speedily result to our port, which would soon rival some of our most progressive cities in wealth, population and enough in previous official and semi-official ulterances of the President and his Cabinet. All that was needed on this occasion was a concise statement of the principles that animate the administration and the assurance that they will be faithfully executed. This statement and this assurance cuted. This statement and this assurance would, try toget the best attainable price?

When we consider that Ic per pound on the three millions exported is $18,500,000, and 2c. is $27,000,000, it becomes a subject of great importance to all the country; because we connot benefit the planters of the South without also increasing the prosperity of the whole country. My idea is to have the bank officers consider well this time forward until this great work is trought, taken in connection with the railroad facilities we already enjoy. He says:

"Our sister State of Virginia is going shead with rapid strides to make Norfolk the chief of Southern cities. Let the enterprising men of Wilmington and other sections of the State carry this important project successfully into effect, and yours will soon be among the most important cities on the Atlantic coast. It is my carnes hope that one people may arouse to the importance of this subject and invest their capital and work steadily from this time forward until this great work is strength, taken in connection with the rail-
