[Philadelphia Times.]

The returns from Maine swell the measure of Republican disaster as they come along. It is not now a matter of doubt that the combined opposition forces of the Democratic and National parties have defeated the election of Governor Connor by the people; have carried the popular branch of the Legislature by a majority so decided as to give them control, on joint ballot; have secured the election of either Garcelon, Demcrat, or Smith, National, to the Gubernatorial chair, and the control of all the State departments; have certainly elected Ladd, Democrat-National, to Congress in the Fourth district, by a clever majority, and have probably defeated Hale in the Fifth district, electing Murch, National, to succeed Blaine's ablest lieutenant. It is no mere faltering of the Republican lines; it is the capture by storm of the Republican citadel that has defied all Democratic or opposition assaults for a quarter of a century, and it gives the Democrats and Nationals the entire administration of authority in the State, with certainly one and most likely two representatives in Congress. It is a crushing blow to the Republican armies in the field in Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and it practically withdraws Blaine from the now apparently hopeless Repub-lican Presidential race of 1880, but he will be with the "great majority" of the old-time leaders in what to him may be welcome retirement. If staunch Republican Maine can be swept clear out of sight of her Republican moorings with so heroic and inspiring a chieftain as Blaine in command, what sort of a serenade will doubtful Pennsylvania give the Cameron domination in November next?

[Richmond (Va.) State.]

The news from Vermont startled the Republicans, but that from Maine has completed the work of fright and demoralization, and they are now panic-stricken and on the run, and will soon be utterly routed. So long as their stronghold in New England was impregnable the party presented a bold and defiant front, and nothing could cause it dismay. But their very citadel carried, by a flank movement as it were, they are at once thrown into confusion, and admit their desperation and despair. They can find no consolation in the fact either that their defeat is due to the Greenbackers. No matter how it was brought about, it is their defeat-the defeat of the "great Republican party," and not the defeat of the Democracy. Though not an actual victory for the Democrats, yet it is the

THE REPUBLICAN DEATH-WOUND. The results of the recent elections in Vermont and Maine send a cold shiver through the very marrow of Republican bones. These are the strongest Republican States, where the Democrats have been not only small in number but weak in organization and leaders, and accustomed to defeat. The Republican party there, on the contrary, has been strongly organized and officered, numerically powerful, and haughty and confident in tone. Mr. Blaine carried Maine in his waistcoat pocket. The course of these elections was, therefore, watched with great interest, for they gave the first trustworthy indications of the degree to which the Greenback Labor party has disorganized the Republican party and prepared for its crushing defeat. Last year the Greenback vote was inconsiderable in those States, but it has gained considerapower.

Special telegram to Richmond Dispatch. 7 GOLDSBORO, N. C., September 12. -A most destructive cyclone passed in three miles of this city about 7 A. M. to-day, from northeast to southwest. Its path was one hundred yards wide, and it demolished every house, scattering timbers, bedding, and wearing apparel for half a mile or more. A negro woman was mortally wounded, and a negro man killed and blown some distance. Four white people were seriously hurt, and not expected to live. Their legs were broken, and they were internally injured. A number of hogs, cattle and horses were killed. Barns, outhouses and dwellings shared alike. Cotton stalks were stripped naked. The loss is very considerable, and

> One View of Disraeli. [London Spectator.]

He is a mountebank of genius; but mountebank with a deep belief in his race, himself and his destiny. It is this which has colored all his life, from his first shrill, warning to the House of Commons that one day he would make them hear him, to his recent policy in relation to the East. The few ideas he has have a tenacious sort of hold over him. His dreams get a little way at least toward actual life--too near, by far, for the good of England-but also enough to show that with all the cynicism and trickery in Lord Beaconsfield, he is a semiclairvoyant dreamer, who dreams himself into history as well as into
