Columbia turned with weeping eyes To where her true knight dying lay: "When thou art in God's Paradise And I so far away—
Though others may forget
I shall remember yet!"

God's angel heard, and hearing, sighed,
"Alas, e'en he will be forgot!
Forgotten ('tis his destined lot)!
By her for whom he lived and died, Columbia may forget— God will remember yet!"

Faithless Columbia turned with smiles To greet her dead's triumphant foes. Their gilded train her grief beguiles: Her broken vow God's angel knows;
A tear his eyelid wets—
Columbia forgets!

God's angel turns his face away
To where, at rest, God's hero lies—
"Men call him dead, but from this day
"Tis he who lives—Columbia dies! Death comes when men forget Vows, God remembers yet!"

A NEWSPAPER MAN IN THE SOUTH Wilmington as Seen Through Northern Eyes. Southern Letter in the Buffalo (N. Y.) Daily Courier.

A three hours' stop in the night time did not afford an opportunity for gaining a very extensive know-ledge of this apparently handsome little city, whose population is about 18,500. After supper I started out for a stroll, that I might be able to about the appearance of.

THE LITTLE METROPOLIS. The first thing which struck my attention was the evident economy of the city fathers in forming a copartnership with the moon in a contract for lighting the city. This happened to be one of the nights when the moon was unaidedly performing that duty, and in a manner that would give its patrons no occasion for grambling when the monthly bill should be presented. In fact, it seemed to me that I had never seen it give forth such entrancing radiance as illumined the streets, bathing richest States of the Union. house-top and steeple, and creeping through the branches of tree and shrub in quivering waves of silvery light. Perhaps it served to heighten the beauties and conceal the defects of surrounding objects; certain it is, at any rate, that, as thus seen, Wil-

and attractive place. precisely at right angles, with rows of fine trees on either side. The principal business streets are Front, Water and Market, Water street being the only one, I believe, that is paved. There are a number of fine buildings on these streets, and I after the legislation to enable this noticed many very handsome private | company to retire its bonded indebtresidences during my stroll. In fact. everything about the place, as viewed by the brilliant light of a southern moon, has a neat. well-to-do appearance, suggestive of substantial growth and prosperity. There are twelve white folks' churches, the Episcopalians having the greatest number,

which would seem to indicate the aristocratic tendencies of the place. The finest edifice, however, belongs to the Baptists, and is really a magnficent structure, of striking proportions and tasteful architecture. It is of brick and has two slender spires very much like the minarets of a Turkish mosque. One or two of the bank buildings would not appear at a disadvantage on Main street in your city. The peculiar, loud, long-drawn exhaust of a cotton compress calls my attention to the fact that there is a large institution of that kind down by the wharves. From my slight observation I should imagine fully half of the circumference of the city must be river front, thus affording the finest shipping facilities imaginable. The city is located at the confluence of the Northeast river with the Cape Fear; but on the east side of the former, which throws it outside the crotch of the two streams. It is only thirty miles to the sea, with plenty of water except at one point, which has only fourteen feet. Vessels of deeper draught than this are lightered below that point until they can pass. I notice a very considerable amount of shipping at the various wharves. One thing about the location of Wilmington struck me as quite singular, and that was, that although the entire country around, so far as seen, as flat as a plank, the city itself is ituated upon a considerable hill, descending to the river, its highest point being probably forty feet above tide. This gives it fine drainage and keeps the unpaved streets dry and clean. Wilmington has several newspapers, only one of which, the DAILY STAR, has come under my special notice, and its brightness is in full keeping with its name. I regret that the lateness of the hour and the briefness of my stay did not admit of my calling upon some of the newspaper men, and also that I could not have prepared myself to give a more thorough description of this seemingly charming city.

Dr. Canedo's Proposition. Raleigh News-Observer.

OFFICE NEW YORK AND SOUTHERN RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION Co., NEW YORK. Dec. 15, 1881. Col. J. E. Peyton:

DEAR SIR: -As president of this company I have the pleasure of laying before you its proposal to the State of North Carolina, as represented by his Excellency the Governor and commissioners. As the matter stands to-day I find the following facts:

1. The State owns a controlling interest in the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad Company, which it proposes to sell for $55,000.

2. There is a floating debt of about, say, $100,000, which must, of conrse, be paid off before this company can issue any bonds on the Grand Trunk

3. The sale by the State must be acquiesced in by the remaining stockholders of said road before it is

4. This company could not, if it owned said road to-day, issue $1 of new bonds on the Trunk Line, neither could it transfer or merge its interest into the Ohio and Carolina Railroad Company without the consent of the Legislature.

5. This company is organized only with the intention of building said tell the Courier readers something | Grand Trunk Line to connect Wilmington with the great northwest, and the Cape Fear and Yadkin Val-ley Railroad is but one of the subordinate links thereof.

6. The building of such line is of inestimable value to the State and people of North Carolina. It cannot fail to add a very large amount to the taxable values of all the property within a radius of twenty miles of the road, as well as give such an impetus to all enteprises as will enable the people to pay such increased taxes and within five years place the credit of the State on a par with the

In view of these facts we ask, will the State of North Carolsna grant all necessary facilities and legislation to our company? I can see but one answer. They will do all they can to aid us.

Therefore, as President of the New mington appears a decidedly neat | York & Southern Railroad and Tele-The streets are broad and are laid thorize you to make the following

1. This company will purchase of the State of North Carolina all of its interest in the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad Company for the sum of $55,000, payable sixty days edness and to issue on its total line bonds to the amount of $25,000 per mile, and said act shall have received the sanction of the Governor.

2. This company will at the same time pay off all the floating debt of the company. 3. The State's interest or the evidence thereof is not to be delivered to us until the final consummation of the aforesaid payments, but this company must be authorized to go on with the surveys and building of the rest of the road as fast as they desire, all the work it may thus do being, of course, at the risk of the contract and a guarantee of its fulfil-

4. The State guarantees to this company its full proportion of the convict labor under as favorable a contract as can be given, and exemption from taxation during the building of the road.

5. Also grants full authority to consolidate the present road into the Ohio and Carolina Railroad, or such through line to connect with the Northwestern States as one company shall organize. Finally, our position is this. We desire to build a great trunk line from near Cincinnati to Wilmington, N. C. We have secured already the West Virginia line, with very valuable and substantial assistance through that State. Now if we can secure the route through North Carolina on terms equally equitable to that State and ourselves, by the purchase of the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad, as before proposed, then we are ready to go ahead with the whole line, and for this purpose all we now ask is a contract subject to all the above terms. Yours, truly,

CHARLES WENDELL. The commissioners then adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock this morning. They held a private conference last
