FARMING IN THE SOUTH. How Farmers Have Prospered.

Wadesboro Intelligencer. We know another man who raises nothing but cotton. A few days ago we saw him come to town and sell four chickens for one dollar, seventyfive cents of which he used to purchase a bushel of corn. He took his horse from the field, and lost the horse's work and his own work for the better part of one day. At this time, and we have $2.25 for a single bushel of corn. No man can follow such a course and prosper. A double of such a man.

Carthage Blade. Never in the history of the county, we suppose, has money been as scarce and so hard to get hold of as at present. Usually in the Southern or turpentine section money is generally plentiful in the turpentine season, but like the farmer does in summer, mortgage to obtain supplies, so does the turpentine man in winter and the result of it is that most of the men who are working turpentine owe their entire crop to some merchant. We hoped when turpentine began to run, that money would become more plentiful, but it seems we hoped in vain. And a great change must take place before the times will be better here. The only change that we see can be made is for our farmers and turpentine men to economize, try to pay their debts and then keep out of debt. They can never hope to be independent men until they abandon the system of spending their products before they are made. Get even this year if possible and stay so, even if you have to live on bread and water to do it.

Savannah News. In saying, however, that the agricultural districts were being neglected the Governor made no mistake. The whites, more than the negroes, are to blame. The farmers in many instances have left the frarms. The truth is, in many parts of the South, the farms are practically in the hands of the negroes. In the cities and towns of Georgia may be found many owners of farms who rent or lease their property to negroes, or who exercise only casual supervision over negroes hired to make crops, and, what is quite as bad, for the ruin of hundreds of acres of good Norfolk Virginian. Gen. D. H. Hill declared that the recent multiplication in the South of manufacturing and mining industries is one of the marvels of modern times, attracting the attention of capitalists not only in the North, but in Europe. But the great drawback is that agriculturalists devote too much land, labor and time to cotton, neglecting food products of the soil. This is one of the chief causes for the present depression in the agricultural interests of a large majority of the Southern States. Farmers now, as did the planters in ante-bellum days, risk everything upon the production of a single crop of cotton. Shelby Aurora. We see now too many empty wagons from the country coming to Shelby to be loaded with bacon, corn and other supplies bought on a montgage. This fall and winter these same wagons will return loaded with cotton and the wagons will return empty and the farmers with empty pocket-books to their homes. This suicidal policy has been tried in many States many years. Our Cleveland county farmers cannot pay | 1 asked several of the men on guard $1.25 per bushel on time for corn if they knew whose house they were worth 75 to 80 cents each. This is only 50 per cent. interest for six months time or the Dutchman's "one per cent. or double" for the year. No farmer can prosper at that. Raise your crops, economize and save your manure, make compost heaps instead of buying so much commercial fertilizers, cultivate more grasses and at the end of the year your crops will belong to you and not to the mortgagor. We buy and import stoves and ranges, sewing machines and grain eradles, whetetones, axes and axhandles, bonnets and ribbons, calico and sheeting, bacon and flour, sugar home and expect a financial miracle in October to the last Monday in September by the last Legislature—all these purchases, when raising all chapter 49, Laws of 1887.

cotton is suicidal policy. Our farmers cannot profitably raise all cotton on a mortgage with heavy-interest to

FEDERAL OFFICES.

New York Star, Admin. The World says of the Tribune's table of changes in Federal offices:
Out of 56,000 offices enumerated, it is alleged that changes have been made in 48,000. Thus, out of 2,359 presidential postmasters, it is 'esti-mated" that 2,000 have been supplanted by Democrats. Out of 52, 509 postmasters of the fourth class estimate gives 45,000 changes. Out of a possible 111 collectors of customs the President has scored 100, and 85 collectors of internal revenue have yielded 84 places. The informant concludes that the "clean sweep will be completed before Congress meets.

Accepting the table as correct, it does not "consist" very well with Mr. Cleveland's famous letter to Mr. Curtis and Mr. Eaton. But masmuch as the Mugwumps seem ready to support the President, whatever he may do, it is not necessary to consider them. What he has lacked hitherto has been the support of the "old Democratic wheel horses" and the "party workers." The Tribune has done its best, however unwittingly, to supply this "long-felt want."

On the other hand, the Post goes into an elaborate statement to show that the Republicans hold their own in the departments, and that the Federal service has by no means passed into Democratic hands. The fact is that both statements are substantialy correct.

COTTON.

N Y. Commercial and Financial Chronicle NEW YORK, June 17 .- The movement of the crop, as indicated by our telegrams from the South to-night, is given below. For the week ending this evening (June 17) the total receipts have reached 3,549 bales, against 4,032 bales last week, 7,-599 bales the previous week, and 9,765 bales three weeks since; making the total receipts since the 1st of Sept., 1886, 5,183,468 bales, against 5,232,880 bales for the same period of 1885, showing a decrease since Sept. 1, 1886, of 49,362 bales. The exports for the week ending this evening reach a total of 8,528 bales, of which 2,887 were to Great Britain, - to France and 5,641 to the rest of the Continent.

On Thursday a better report from Liverpool, and improved tone and time of the year the horse's work is values in other speculative circles, worth $1.00 per day, and the man's gave renewed spirit to the speculawork certainly not less than fifty | tion for the rise in cotton. Hamilton & Hardin vs. R. R. Co. When a shipper of live stock offers cattle for shipment, it is the duty of the carriers to furnish the cars, and have them in readiness for the cattle to be put aboard. The bill of lading issued after the cattle are on board is an execution a preliminary agreement, resting in parole and is its consummation. Where a carrier undertakes to furnish cars and transport cattle on a certain day, and neglects to furnish the cars for the stock to be put aboard on time, it violates its agreement. In case of a delay in carriage arising from the default of the carrier, damages are recoverable for the deterioration of the stock incident to the delay and attendant circumstances.

Additional damages are recoverable where it was in view of both parties, when the contract was made, that the cattle should he delivered at their destination in time for a particular sale day, and the contract is broken.

BUFFALO BILL IN LONDON.

T. C. Crawford in New York World. Although Mr. Cody has not been in London over a month he is to-day as well known to the masses of this great city of 5,000,000 as is the Queen. You could not pick up in the most obscure quarter of London any one so ignorant as not to know who and what he is. His name is on every wall. His picture is in every window. The wonder of this lies in the fact that the London public is strangely dull and unimaginative. The people of one quarter are often as ignorant of a neighborhood within a stone's throw of them as if It were in Central Africa, You find constantly the proof of this in inquiring your way about town. The policemen never know where particular streets or buildings outside of their beats are located.

An Englishman who has lived in London for a quarter of a century tells me that no one but an American would think of asking a London policeman for anything like information. London policemen are often placed on guard in front of English officials' houses where they are absolutely ignorant of the name of the occupant. It is a genuine and not an affected ignorance. I have asked higher police officials about this and they say that the men very often do not know and do not care. I saw some twenty policemen guarding one day the house of the Prime Minister. guarding. They all replied in the most courteous negative. Finally, one of them referred me to an older who had been on the beat in the neighborhood for some years, and he your own supplies at home, diversify was able to give me the information. Imagine a set of New York policemen guarding any prominent offi-cial's house in New York without their knowing just what they were doing, and particularly if it were the house of the chief officer of our government. Meeting of the Supreme Court.

A TRIFLE ECCENTRIC.

It must be admitted that Dr. Frank M. Deems, of New York, is a trifle eccentric. His wife, who is suing for divorce, in her testimony told how her husband would spend his days hunting and shooting at Clifton Springs, and how during the long nights he would pace up and down his room, writing poetry, translating from the German, skinning squirrels sticks. "He would amuse himself sometimes with a curious menagerie which he had collected. At the top of the bed perched an owl, on the bureau lay a stuffed snake curled up around the toilet articles, and there big fat turtle lying around loose. But his special pets were two Maltese kitters. These he carried, one in each pocket, and to their tails were attached long strings, by following which it was always possible to find the doctor. Once, by these claes, the plaintiff had discovered her husband lying out on the lawn late at night, and again she had come across him in the bath tub, where he had fallen in a narcotic-produced stupor." This is funny, but it is not allowable in well regulated families.

BOOTH'S MAD DEED

The Assassination of President Lin coin, With Some New Facts and Re Anniston (Ala.) Hot Blast.

* * The fury of officials de prived the government of much valnable evidence that would have thrown considerable light on the dark transaction, and while serving to punish the guilty would have in a measure protected the innocent. Secretary Stanton, a man of violent passions and, therefore, when aroused of blind prejudice, was aided in his insane fury by Andrew Johnson, who had reasons of his own for keeping alive a storm which prevented too close a scrutiny into his own past associations and conduct. The men of infamous class, known as detectives, developed by the war, and cultivated by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of State, were kings and subordinate officers, were executors under their own law, and instead of encouraging an opening of testimony, they persecuted all who were supposed to know anything connected with the murder of Lincoln and the attempted murder of Seward. In this way a poor stage carpenter, who innocently held Booth's horse on the night of assassination was sent to a living death, and poor Dr. Mudd, who treated the broken ankle of Booth, never dreaming of what caused the accident, was glad to escape the gallows in sharing the carpenter's punishment. Mrs. Surratt, who was found guilty of keeping a boarding house at Washington, was hanged, to our national shame through all time to come. * * President Johnson felt that he was the only man in all the world who was benefited by the death of his predecessor, and haunting him was a fact that strangely escaped attention at the time. He had not only been the boon companion and confidential friend of Booth in times past, but the assassin's card, was found in the wrong box at Johnson's hotel, familtarly addressed to the Vice President, asking for an interview on the very day of the night on which the assassination occurred. Less evidence than this hanged others, and Stanton's blind rage and Johnson's simulated fury saved Andrew Johnson from a punishment awarded alike to the innocent and quilty.

Much time and ink have been shining brightly. wasted over that recommendation to executive clemency awarded Mrs. Sarratt by the court that condemned her, and an effort made to have us believe that it was kept from the President. The records show that this recom-nendation made a part of the proceedings upon which the President had to pass. If this were not so the President was guilty of an illegal act. * * Is it possible that Booth had the meeting with the Vice President for which he asked, and if so did he tell the Vice President of the awful work he had in hand? If so, it may be that Andrew Johnson took this to be the vaporings of a drunken actor-and it is likely that his strange conduct came rather from fear than from the workings or a guilty conscience. As Judge Advocate of the Extraordinary Court of Inquiry that sought to investigate the military conduct of General Buell, I was brought in close association with Andrew Johnson, and what I learned of him on that occasion gives me a better opportunity for forming judgment than falls to the lot of the many who ascribe all his actions to high patriotic impulse.

It may be that the future historian, weighing these facts in an impartial mind, will come to the same conclusion that I have in regard to President Johnson. But this is doubtful. A thoughtful mind has told us that history is the politics of the past, and the politics of to-day the history of the present, and politics means the prejudices and current beliefs of the

I would rather have been the associate of Booth and possessed of his dreadful secret, if the awful choice were forced upon me, and have been hanged for it, than to have lived through years to my grave haunted by the thought of that poor woman wringing her motherly hands in abject terror upon the scaffold Johnson authorized, or seeing night and day that bundle of woman's clothes swinging in the hot sun of summer, as they covered at the end of a rope the agonies of death.

While on a visit to my relatives, above referred to, I heard of a negro who had acted as Booth's guide on the night of his flight, and I hunted up the man. I found him a stupid fellow of about 18 or 20, and I got very little out of him. This little, however, was to me very significant and to my mind threw a light on Booth's designs I had never seen suggested. The hovel in which the boy lived had been aroused after midnight, and a goodly sum in gold offered for a guide. The youth, with the consent of his parents, dressed himself, if putting on a coat and a pair of shoes could be dignified with the name. Mounting a mule he joined the two and undertook the duty demanded of him. It was hard work for me to drag information from the stolid fellow. But I learned given to carsing his broken leg, and ebody for not putting out the

This light business took hold of my mind with a fascinating tenacity that it could not shake off. * * Years after, while telling the late Richard Merrick of this mystery, the eyes of that eloquent and able advocate brightened. When I ended he said, "Your negro gave you the key." The true story of that awful crime came to me in my capacity as a lawyer. Booth, the assassin, who put an end to the life not only of an able, kind-hearted man, but of all the hopes which the South had of an honorable and peaceful settlement in the way of reconstruction, had arwere also birds of various kinds and a | ranged with an accomplice to turn off the gas from the theatre when he, the accomplice, heard the report of the pistol. This would have plunged the theatre into midnight darkness, and in the terrible fright and confusion, the assassin would have escaped detection. The fellow relied on, smitten with contrition at the enormity of the crime or by fear, failed his chief and fled. Instead of quietly gaining his horse, and as quietly riding away undetected and unsuspected, he had to face the audience in the full glare of the footlights, and ride desperately, well knowning that the foot of justice was on his path.

The lights were not extinguished The desperate murderer, in his hasty flight from the box, caught his spur in the flag of our Union that draped the box, fell, broke his ankle and rode down to death. The plot was clearly planned and one can imagine the tumultuous flight of that crowd, in the darkness that was to have followed the crime. And one can realize the desperation and agony of Booth as he rode off into the midnight, well knowing that he was recognized and that there was no spot on earth in which he could find hiding and safety, even had not his broken leg deprived him of every advantage. The fatal mark of Cain had been imprinted on him in the full glare of his familiar footlights, and that retribution which dogs the steps of crime was but a question of time. The murder occurred on the night of Good Friday, and had our good and greatest of Presidents paused to remember, for a moment, the belief of a great majority of Christian humanity he would not have been exposed to the cruelty of the assassin, but "God reigns and the government still lives."

VITIATED BLOOD scrofulous, Inherited and Contagious Humors Cured

by Cuticura. THROUGH the mediam of one of jour books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, Druggist, Apollo, Pa, I became acquainted with your CUTICURA REMERIES, and take this opportunity to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the worst cases of bloopolsoning, in connection with crystpelas, that i have ever seen, and this after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our counfy. I take great pleasure in forwarding to you this testimonial, unsolicited as it is by you, in order that others suffering from similar maladies may be encouraged to give your CUTICUTAL BENERIES a tvial.

SCROPULOUS ULCERS. James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says: "In 1870 serofulous Ulcerabroke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mero wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constantial, and looked upon life as a curso. No relies or cure in ten years. In 1880 I heard of the curround Remedies, used them, and was perfectly cured."

Sworn to before U. S. Com, J. D. CBAWFORD. ONE OF THE WORST CASES. We have been selling your Curicuma Remanners for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of Curicuma Resolvent, Curicuma and Curicuma Soar. The Soap takes the "cake" here as a medicinal soap.
