a good system of railways, the delivery of Western farm products at considerably less cost, and at the same time protecting the Western shipper from the dictates of monopolies which the absence of competition made arbitrary and mighty.

This it is which has turned the eve of the Western farmer and shipper southward, and given strength to the movement to connect the West with Southern ports, and to secure the aid of the Government in making these ports adequate to the demands upon them. The movement has strength and it will gain strength every year, for the more populous and productive the West becomes the more restive it will become under Eastern dictation, and the more it will realize the necessity of commercial independence. The farm products, and other products as well, seeking foreign ports must come, as her rivers run, southward.

Cincinnati, Louisville, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and other great central Western cities, are looking for new short air-lines or as near airlines as possible, pointing towards some Southern port, and the men are now living who will see grand systems of railroads constructed with terminal points at such of these ports as answer the purposes or can with a reasonable expenditure of money be made to answer.

The index finger points to Wilmington as one of these ports which presents many advantages, and whose geographical position, midway on the coast, makes it a desirable port for a large area of the central Western States, and even now the movement is progressing which within two years or so will through the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad and its connections link Wilmington to the Western system of roads and the cities which they tap by considerably shorter lines than any other seaboard city North or South can claim. The connection of Wilmington with the commercial centres of the West by short and direct lines of railroad, some of which largely controlled by North Carolina capital of her admission into the Union proand by North Carolina men, the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley being wholly so, will give her vast-importance and exert an influence on her future that it would be impossible now to estimate. Taking this into consideration with the productive possibilities of the section of North Carolina through which this road runs, the mineral, timber and other resources and the industries which they will create, the man need not be classed as a visionary who would predict for The steam tug Sophie, owned by used to put up from 25,000 to 30,000

CORONER'S INQUEST.

The Jury Find that W. T. Brown Cam to His Death at the Hands of Walter Yates and J. M. Woolard. Coroner Jaeobs concluded the inquest esterday-begun last week-in the case of the death of W. T. Brown. The witnesses examined were Dr. Burbank, N. D. Casteen, Walter Way, James Canaday, R. H. Moore and Forney LeGwin. The testimony was substantially the same as that before the Mayor Monday. The jury found that W. T. Brown came to his death at the hands of Walter Yates and J. M. Woolard, on the 17th day of Janu ary, 1890, in the house of Emma Jackthe deceased. son. Woolard was at once arrested and placed in the custody of the sheriff, Yates being already in jail on the charge of manslaughter.

In the afternoon Woolard was brought before Judge O. P. Meares, on a writ of habeas corpus. He was attended by his counsel, Messrs. D. L. Russell, Marsden and Jno. D. Bellamy, Jr., and was admitted to bail in the sum of $500 for his appearance before Judge Meares, this afternoon, at proceeded with. half-hast three o'clock for an investigation of the case, in the Court room at the City Hall.

This is a bad sign, this desertion 'of the farms for homes in the towns. --Capt. G. W. Alley is putting up telegraph wires on the Wilmington extension of the C. F. & Y. V. road. -The Egypt Coal Company on last Saturday had a fine young mule put down in the shaft and it took the efforts of eight men to perform this task. This mule will likely stay in this dark shaft as long as it lives and that may be a long time There was one which staid in the same shaft during the war, it was taken out when operations ceased and it died about three years ago. It went blind soon after it came out, and it is related that it amused itself until it died by kicking. The Sanford sash and blind factory has declared a dividend of 6 per cent. for the year 1889. Mr. Makepeace, the Secreatry, states that the year has been a prosperous one. There is a great deal of work on hand, which is goog evidence of a building boom in the country. -Carthage is on a quiet boom. The town is slowly but surely building up.
