SOME OF THE RESULTS.

As originally designed and constructed the government of th United States was never intended to look after the interest or welfare, to put it in that way, if any class of people or of any industry or industries, or of any section or sections Its province was to deal with th States and with the people of th United States as a whole, regardless of their avocation or surroundings or their peculiar opinions or political, moral, economic, moral or other questions. As a government it was not intended that it should know any difference between the manufacturer, the workman, the farmer, the professional men. One was as much to it as the other; all were citizens, each entitled to the same consideration. no more nor less, than the other, and all were expected to depend upon and take care of themselves without government interference or government support.

It was so until the baneful, de moralizing policy of protection, for protection's sake, became engrafted upon the system and made the government not the government of the fathers, broad and catholic in its scope, but narrowed it down to a government of classes and of callings, each claiming special prerogatives, special privileges, special care and special protection, until every interest from the maker of a wooden toothpick to the builder of an ironclad ship, thinks itself entitled to especial protection and to the paternal care of this government of 65,000,

000 of people. The protection idea has been car ried to such an extreme, and has been urged with such utter and brazen selfishness as to have become absolutely ridiculous. But on the whole there is nothing ridiculous about it. It is to the American people, at least that portion of them who foot the bill and who believe that this should be a government of the people and not of classes, a se rious matter, serious in the colossa proportions the monstrosity has at

By a license of construction un paralleled, and a perversion of language amazing, all this class legislation is defended and justified under the "general welfare" clause of the constitution, when there is nothing "general" about it but its meanness and deviltry, that puts its hand into the pocket of one man or one class of men to rob them of money to swell the profits of another man o class of men. Reduced down to it essence this is the protective system of the present day, as advocated and administered. This is what it is.

If the result stopped with the tariff, inspired by class influence and perpetuated in class interest, bad as that is, it would be less injurious, but it does not, for a multitude of absurd ideas have grown out of it which would no more have been thought of or seriously poposed before the day a :)) :c o n monstrosity, than a proposition to convert this govern ment into a gigantic eleemonary in institution would have been. Ever one of them springs directly from o is justified by the idea which under lies protection, which is that the government has not only the right to meddle in the business affairs of the people, but that it is its duty to meddle when any particular class demands it, meddle not only in business affairs but in economic, moral and social affairs, in the interest of one portion of the country, State or community, against another portion. We have had illustrations of the in the proposition to erect throughout the country government warehouses for the storing of certain products of the farm, and lending by the government to the owners of the products a certain percentage of the value of the products, in certificates to be used as money, and another to loan farmers who may need it money at a nominal rate of interest, the land of the farmer being the security for the loan, the first converting the government into a great big pawn-shop, the other into a money broker doing business on a colossal scale and running opposition to other brokers and to bankers by offering its money at about oneeighth of the usual rates of interest.

Then we have the oleomargarin business, the effort to legislate cotton seed oil out of lard, the anti-trust business, the anti-future dealing business, the national education business, the anti-lottery business, the proposed legislation growing out of the late original package decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, the fundamental idea of all of which is protection direct or indirect based on the general welfare clause of the constitution, in which provision the protection idea found paternity, and where would have taken a wise prophet to their direction.

have foreseen the varied, voracious and multitudinous progeny that would spring from it. But they have come in hordes and are still coming.

UNVEILING THE MONUMENT. To-day are gathered in Virginia's capital city thousands of the sons and daughters of Virginia and of the Southland to do honor to the memory of one of the greatest dead or living Americans, one of the greatest dead or living soldiers, one of the greatest men of this or any other country, this or any other age. Today the veil will be lifted and the equestrian statue of Robert E. Lee will be given to the world. There is something sublime and deeply touching in this fond devotion of the people of the South to the memory of their great soldier, whom brave men in arms followed with the zeal and enthusiasm of worshippers, and all, soldier and civilian, honored and loved as few men are honored and loved, not merely because he was the leader of armies, great in victory and in defeat, not because he was a brilliant commander who by his genius seconded by the confidence, devotion and valor of the men he led, won glorious victories from superior numbers, and for four years with small armies kept large armies at bay; not for this only but because "duty" was the inspiration of his life, duty that abnegated self in obedience to the call of his State, duty for which he bore every sacrifice and faced every peril, While honored and beloved of all his was one of those characters, rarely met with upon the scroll of men made famous, in which selfishness entered in no part, a grand, selfdenying, glorious man, who thought never of self, who harbored no of self aggrandizement highest ambition loftiest aspiration was the bidding of his mo ther State, to which his allegiance belonged, and to defend and maintain the Confederacy, whose commission he held as the grand captain of her armies of heroic, trusty sons, who went proudly, bravely, defiantly to battle under him.

This he did to the end, through the varying fortunes of those eventful, memorable, glorious four years, through victory and defeat, always, whether in the blaze of victory or ne shadow of defeat, the same grand, self-possessed, matchless hero, whom no triumph could unduly elate, no defeat unduly depress, the thorough leader of other men because thorough master of himself.

Grand as he was when idolized chieftain he rode at the head of the South's serried ranks of brave men, or on the field of battle gave the command that swayed armies and threw them over fortified battle lines with an impetuosity as reckless as desperation, when the end came when he and his outnumbered braves had done all that great genius, selfsacrificing devotion and matchless valor could do in the unequal contest against superior numbers aud superior resources, he furled his banner and sheathed his sword he was still that great, grand, soulful, majestic figure that bowed without hamiliation or cringing to the inevitable and with a dignity that commanded the respect and admiration of his foes and the world accepted the decrees of fate which he had not the power to avert.

In the retired, peaceful shades of Lexington, still pursuing the line of duty as he saw it, in uncomplaining, dignified silence, he rounded up the symmetry of that beautiful, peerless life, went to sleep on the breast of his mother, quietly passing from this life to that higher life, the immortalized of history, the idolized of the land for which he gave all, dared all, and would have suffered all.

This is the imperfectly and hastily sketched man to whose memory the Southern people are paying tribute to-day in the beautiful city on the James, which hospitably throws open her gates and her doors to welcome the sons the daughters of the South who come to participate with her in the noble memorial tribute to the memory of this grand son of Virginia and the South, no less than of Virginia, for though his body belongs to her his fame is the heritage of all. for he led all, he fought for and with all. Not only to the South, but to all America his fame belongs, for he and the gallant men who fought with him shed lustre upon the flag they battled against, because it was American valor they showed inspired by the same devotion to country and to duty that inspired their fathers whose struggles built the Republic and gave that flag to the

It is said that Senators Farwell and Cullom of Illinois will swipe the House tariff bill, because if it pass in its present shape it would hurt the World's Fair, by preventing foreigners from making exhibits, and they are banking more on the Fair than they are on the tariff. They are quite level as regards the Mc-Kinley job.

Col. Shepard, of the New York Mail and Express, is dreadfully excited over the display of Confederate flags at Richmond during the ceremonies of the unveiling of the Lee monument. But he is not a bit more worked up over it than men of his all these first or second cousins kidney were during the war when also find their justification. figures of the Harrison Administration. He, like the balance of them, is a civil service reformer, and also an examplar in carryng out the laws which have been enacted for the government of his department. But it seems that when it comes to conferring privileges on favorites he does not hesitate to violate not only the spirit but the letter of the law. There is in Washington a pension, agent named Lemon. He does a rushing business and when Tanner was commissioner had full swing of the pension office. The probabilities are he has yet. He publishes in Washington a paper called the National Tribuue, to boost his business. He has been mailing these papers by the sackful to the different postoffices of the country, addressed to real and fictitious persons, and on the wrapper of each he has printed something like the following: "If this paper is not delivered to the person addressed, the postmaster will please deliver it to any ex-Union soldier, or to some one interested in claims growing out of the war of the rebellion." This is a clear violation of the postal laws, which expressly prohibit anything of the kind, and it became a bore to some of the postmasters who protested against as a violation of law, to which they did not care to become a party by distributing the papers. The attention of the editor of the United States Mail, a paper published at Chicago, was called to it and he entered formal complaint. No attention was paid to it. The packages continued to arrive, so he posted off to Washington to lay the matter in form before Mr. Wanamaker, which he did after first getting the opinion of Judge Tyner, Assistant Attorney General, who pronounced it a clear violation of the law, and expressed surprise that it had been allowed. He then called on Mr. Wanamaker who coolly informed him that he knew all about it and not only gave his consent but proposed to let Mr. Lemon continue sending out his stacks of papers as usual. A stormy scene followed in which Mr. Patterson forcibly and freely expressed his opinion of Mr. Wanamaker and his methods and informed him that he proposed to make that thing pretty hot for him and see if he could with impunity violate the law which he was entrusted to execute. Mr. Lemon is one of the men who chipped in pretty liberally to help elect Harrison and make Wanamaker Postmaster General. Hence the milk in the cocoanut. Hon. C. W. McClammy, Representative of the Third District of this State, has introduced a bill in the House to authorize the issue of $180,000,000 of legal tender notes. egal tender for all purposes save paying interest on the public debt, the money to be divided out among the States on the basis of population, and to be loaned on mortgages, the amount of loan in each case to be limited to $2,500 and preference to be given to those whose lands are already mortgaged, the loans bearing nterest at one per cent. This is intended to accomplish the purpose aimed at in the bill introduced by Senator Stanford, and to be a substitute for the Sub-treasury bill for the establishment of government warehouses, &c. While this is preferable to the sub-treasury plan, if there is any preference in such matters, it is open to the same objection that all these schemes are, and that is that they are entirely outside of the province of this government, that they are throwing down the constitutional barriers, and opening the way to all manner of unwarranted, ill-judged and reckless legislation. The indications are that the Balti more and Ohio railroad will before long become part of the Richmone and Danville West Point Terminal system, as negotiations have for some time been pending with that view. One of the points to be overcome is the satisfactory disposition of or arrangement for the preferred stock of the State. The scheme seems to be favored in Baltimore. The growth and prominence achieved by this organization, growing originally out of a road less than two hundred miles long, and within twenty years, is a marvellous piece of railroad history. It is to-day one of the greatest organizations in this country, bold and successful. In some countries it is not considcial regulations for a tony man to carry packages in the street, but in Iowa it is not a violation of any social rule for a man to carry an "original package" under his vest.

A Kansas farmer sold a meteor which fell on his farm for $1,000, and raised the mortgage on his farm. With a good stock of meteors, a bounty on cocoons and diamonds on the free list the farmers of Kansas may yet be happy.

CENSUS QUESTION.

is Enquiries Which Citizens Are Mr. Wanamaker, Postmaster General, is one of the conspicuous

Required to Answer. Some of the questions which the census enumerators are required to ask under instructions from the Gensus Bureau have given rise to a great deal of discussion in the newspapers. The most obnoxious of the inquiries are the two which relate to the health and physical condition of the individual, questions No. 22 and 23, which are as follows:

No. 22. Whether suffering from acute or chronic disease, with name of disease and length of time afflicted. No. 23. Whether detective in mind, sight, hearing or speech, or whether

Some of the newspapers have advised that when these questions are propounded the answer should be, "I don't know," on the suggestion of a prominent New York lawyer who says: Ordinary persons are not experts in medical evidence, and are not capable of testifying, of their own knowledge, whether they are suffering from "acute or chronic diseases," or as to how long they have been afflicted, or whether they are "defective" in mind. sight, hearing, or speech, or are crippled, maimed or deformed, or what is the name of their disease or defect, if any. These are matters of opinion, in the vast majority of cases, and matters of expert opinion at that, and the questions in regard to them can only be answered, if at all, by physicians and surgeons who have made them an especial study.

A Press dispatch from Washington, n relation to these questions, received last night, says that the Superintendent of the Census has issued the following mportant order to all census super-

Department of Interior, Census Office, Washington, May 26: To Supervisors of the Census -- You will please instruct enumerators in cases where persons refuse to answer questions on the population schedule relating to physical and mental disabilities (22 and 23) or questions relating to farm houses and mortgages (26 to 30, inclusive) to enter in a proper column the words "refused to answer. No further steps will be necessary on the part of the supervisor or enumera tor and all logal proceedings will be in-stituted by the Washington office through the Department of Justice.

The Charleston New and Courier in relation to this matter says: "It has become known within the past few days, however, that the character of the questions to be asked by the enumerators was left to the discretion of the officers of the Census Bureau, and that the law which gave them this discretion was passed by the House in the absence of a quorum, and by the votes of perhaps a dozen members out of the 225 then constituting that body. In this view of the circumstances under which the obnoxious questions were placed on the enumerators' schedule, nearly the whole press of the country has united in condemning the inquisitorial character of some of the questions; in advising every citizen not to answer questions 22 and 23 particularly, unless he is perfectly willing to do so; and in calling on Congress to order the objectionable questions to be expunged from the schedule or materially modified. "These protests and demands have at last impelled members in both houses of ngress to look into the subject of complaint, resolutions have been introduced looking to a revision of the schedule of questions, and it is probable that the resolutions will be passed this week and the whole matter will be set tled in a right and proper way by the uppresion of the obnoxious inquiries."

On the Wilmington, Columbia Augusta railroad, fourteen miles east o Columbia, the storm washed away thirty-five feet of the roadway, at a point two hundred feet from an arch culvert. Train No. 51 which left Columbia for Wilmington at 11 o'clock Monday night ran into the washout. The engine went over safely, but the rest of the train left the track. Two cars and the sleeper were wrecked and several persons were injured. Conductor G. W. Gruber received the worst injuries, one of his legs being broken and his face cut by glass; Mr. Sam Bunting, Pullman car conductor, was cut slightly about the head; Albert Gary, a drummer from Dalton, Ga., had a knee crushed, and Express Messenger Taylor and several passengers were bruised and

The Superintendent said Richard Thomas refused to into the stockade when orso, and when an attempt was made to force him to sidered in strict accordance with so- obey he resisted, and the two other prisoners mentioned came to Thomas' assistance and one of them struck Mr. King on the head. The latter drew his pistol and fired at Holden, but failed to hit him. Finally, with the assistance of two workmen employed at the place and Wesley Watson, a colored convict, the superintendent succeeded in getting the refractory prisoners into the stockade, and then came to the city for assistance. He made application to Mayor Fowler, who referred him to the sheriff; but at the request of the county authorities police officers Brinkley. Howland, Howell and Collins were sent out to the scene of the trouble, in company with two or three of the sheriff's deputies. The officers found the prisoners quiet and had no difficulty in put-

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS. End of the Scholastic Year-Interesting

All of the public schools in this city closed yesterday. During the past week all the schools have had very interesting exercises. On yesterday the Union School had its closing exercises. The programme was a very interesting one. and the children performed their parts in a most creditable manner. There was a very large audience presentcertainly not less than 400. Mr. Noble announced that the enrollment for the year was 502. This enrollment, with that of the Hemenway School, makes the total white enrollment in the city over 1,000. This is a very gratifyng item in regard to our schools, and it certainly is a cause of congratulation of all who are concerned in the management of our schools. The past year has, in every respect, been a successful one. Pupils and teachers have worked hard and have well earned the long vacation which begins to-day and continues during the summer months.

WASHINGTON, May 27 .- Hon. Joh G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, ex-Speaker o the House of Representatives, appeared on the floor of the Senate this morning and was sworn in immediately after the reading of the Journal. On his arm was his colleague, Senator Blackburn. He made his way to the left of the Vice President's desk, where the was administered by ton, who read in a clear distinct tone its terms. The ceremony was witnessed by the galleries well filled, the press gallery having an unusual number of representatives in it After subscribing to the oath in the Secretary record, Senator Carlisle was introduced to the venerable Capt. Bassett, and by him conducted to his seat. His desk is in the second row on the extreme right of the President of the Senate, and was decorated with a large basket of handsome roses. He was then congratulated by a number of Democratic Senators, the Kentucky delegation in the House, and other Demogratic representatives who were present to see nim sworn in. Senator Carlisle takes the seat fornerly occupied by Senator Turpie; who succeeds Senator Reagan, who has taken Senator Beck's chair.

The Democratic Caucus Committee will meet to-morrow to assign Senator Carlisle to his place on the committees It is probable that he will be given Mr. Beck's place on the Committee on Finance, and a membership on several minor committees.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Representa-

North Carolina District, to-day introduced in the House a bill which combines the prominent features of the

Stanford Land Loan and the Blair Education Aid bills. It authorizes the issue of legal tender notes to the amount of $1.800,000,000. These notes are to be legal tenders for all purposes except the payment of interest on the public debt.

They are to be distributed among the various States, according to population, upon mortgages. The loans will bear interest at the nominal rate of one per cent. per annum. Not more than $2,500 are to be loaned to any one person, and preference is given to those whose lands are already mortgaged, to the end that they may take up high interest bearing liens upon their property.

Mr. McClammy hopes to have his bill substituted for the Farmers' Alliance

Grain Sub-treasury bill, now before the

When the boat load of pleasure seekers was within twenty feet of the shore, one of the children rocked the boat. The men cautioned the child to remain quiet, but the child was unmindful of this advice. Suddenly, without a moment's warning, the boat capsized. Heart-rending cries rent the air, which were heard by fireman Bullock, of Pamerping station, and James Lafferty, but

- Charlotte Chronicle: Charlotte was visited yesterday by one of the heaviest rainfalls ever known here There were light showers during the sight. Four of the party had struck out morning, but about 12 o'clock the clouds became thicker, and it grew so dark that lights had to be used in busicondition. The following were drownness houses, and people dining at that time, dined by lamp-light. The rain fell in torrents for nearly an hour, flooding the streets, washing boxes, planks, 10; Samuel Wittles, Jr., aged 12; Levin and wheelbarrows from sidewalks, tear-Buckley, aged 35; Fred.
