ROYAL BACCARAT.

Baccarat is not any worse than any other game played with cards where money is lost and won by the players, nor are the men who play it for money any worse than the average men who play any other kind of game for money. But that game of baccarat which for the past several days has been drawing crowds of English aristocrats into that London court room was no ordinary game nor the players ordinary players. That's why it is attracting so much attention, and why it may, perhaps, become historic.

Here we have the heir apparent to the British crown and prospective Emperor of India acting banker in a gambling game, played by persons of sufficient importance and respectability to be the associates of royalty. This is not necessarily an evidence of their respectability but it is evidence that they were regarded as respectable. This royal scion not only acted as banker for the gambling party, but carried the "counters," ("chips" gentlemen of the profession call them in this country,) and the cards, necessary for the game. Professionals sometimes do that in this country, but the man who carries his own cards is always liable to suspicion. It does not appear, however, that there was anything crooked about the cards of his Royal Highness,

As every intelligent person who knew anything about the merits of the case brought against the New Hanover Canvassing Board in the Federal Court at Raleigh last week supposed would be the result, it was thrown out of Court without coming to a trial, and a miserable piece of malice and political jugglery signal-

row died a

and as, in this case, he was the fellow that got scooped it is not likely that there was,

It was his misfortune that among the players was one Sir Wm. Gordon Cumming, who had inherited a peculiar case of St. Vitus' dance, a ner vous twitching which affected his hands in a peculiar way when playing baccarat. This peculiarity as discribed by a brother who is a resident of Maryland, consists in an involuntary muscular energy of the hands and the fingers thereof which causes him to fumble the money or counters he has in hand, pass it from one hand to the other, to flip pieces of coin or the counters which represent it, over on the coin or counters already staked when his venture wins.

The Prince who had been Sir Wm's, intimate associate for years does not seem to have been aware of this peculiarity, or he would have watched the hands of Sir Wm. a little closer and might not have been scooped by his friend, who on this occasion seems to have come to the front quite effectively with his hereditary affliction.

Another thing noticeable about it is that there were several lady soand-so's in it, some of whom bucked up against the bank of his Royal Highness, and raked down the cash when they won, and when they lost shelled out like little men without a whimper. Like the Prince, none of them seem to have been aware that Sir Wm. had brought along with him that St. Vitus accompaniment, and consequently when St. Vitus got to doubling the counters at opportune times they called it just what any one else judging by mere appearances would have called it, plain, deliberate, matter-of-fact cheating We say this because it is not quite fair to hold Sir Wm. responsible for beating his Royal Highness out of cash when St. Vitus' dance was at is the greatest maple sugar producer the bottom of it all.

If it had not been for this game of royal baccarat we might never have known that his Royal Highness carried along a stock of counters and cards in his luggage, that Sir Wm. Gordon Cumming had among his effects that latent St. Vitus family inheritance which when thrown in proximity with baccarat counters developed such peculiar energy, and that aristocratic ladies breasted the card table and planked down their sovereigns like pirates.

These are some of the things developed by this royal game of baccarat which we didn't all know on this side and which a good many timidation, foiled, the result the discomfiture of the chief actors, and the vindication of the accused. Another result-the Government has a bill to pay for witnesses, the gentlemen of the canvassing board have lost sevseveral days time and have been put to fifteen or twenty dollars expense each, for which there is no redress, in consequence of this outrageous, shameful farce, inspired by malice and political jugglery.

Mr. Lockey has been appointed to a clerkship in the postoffice since the election. Is Mr. D. L. Russell expecting anything ?

As was evident to those who read the testimony in the baccarat suit the jury on Tuesday rendered a verdict against Sir Wm. Gordon Cumming, who had instituted the suit to vindicate himself against a charge of cheating at cards. That the jury was fully convinced of his guilt is shown by the fact that there was no difference of opinion among them and that they brought in their verdict inside of fifteen minutes.- This is not a matter of much concern to the public now that it is over, but it is a matter of much concern to Sir Wm. Cumming whom the verdict practically brands as a thief. It will not improve English morals as far as gambling goes, for that will go on all the same. The effect the trial and its exposures had on Prince Albert is shown by failure to attend court on the last day because he wanted to go to the Ascot races where he probably had a good deal of money staked. That's the way he is training himself to rule over the British Empire when his mother steps off the stage.

The general impression was that Vermont was the great maple sugar State, but it seems that New York in the country. But notwithstand-

Unless the license is taken out before the 1st of July the sugar makers will not be entitled to the two cent bounty. One of the reasons why no applications have been received is that no bounty is paid unless over 500 pounds is produced by the applicant, and as there is a good deal of red tape to go through about getting the license, and as very few produce over 500 pounds they don't pay for the trouble of taking out converse. The day was pleasant, al-

BEFORE MAYOR RICAUD. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock Trask was brought from the county jail to the City Hall, for a preliminary investigation of the case by Mayor Ricaud. The prisoner was placed within the railing and took his seat on the bench with two policemen near. He did not appear to much concerned at his situation. Mr. Herbert McClammy stated to the Court that himself and Mr. Du B. Cutlar, Jr., appeared as counsel for the prisoner and would waive examination. The Court took a recess for an hour to consider the matter and upon reassembling the prisoner was duly committed to jail to await the action of

The Bean Business at Faisons-Large Shipments.

[Special Star Correspondence.] FAISONS, June 9 .- This is a busy little place now, in shipping beans, but not so busy as it has been. The crop is short. Those who know little or nothing of the trucking industry at this place would be surprised at its magnitude. Every train north-bound, takes off some. Last night the fast freight received over 800 boxes: this was considered an ordinary

The largest shipment of this season n one day was 2,700 boxes. The truckers labor under the misfortune of some of their beans becoming spotted, which they cannot avoid, and which makes them unsalable. The unspotted beans bring good prices.

Camp of Confederate Veterans will meet in Fredericksburg to-morrow. Col. H. P. Smith, Grand Commander, will present his annual report. This will show that there are fifteen Camps in the State, of which six have been organized within the past year. The report will recommend that action be taken to secure the remains of General the Criminal Court and the witnesses in Joseph E. Johnston for interment in the case were recognized for their apthis city, and that an effort be made to have prepared and published a Southern school history of the late war. The Grand Commander favors the adoption of a name by the Confederate Veterans for the late war, and approves the suggestion made in the Charleston, S.C. newspapers that it be called "The War for Southern Independence." The Grand Commander will also urge the necessity for contributing funds for the completion of the private soldiers' and sailors' monument in this city. Delegations of Confederate veterans from Norfolk. Portsmouth, Hampton and Petersburg are here to-night en route for Fredericksburg.
