that printed paper shall be money and that coined metal shall not be, in short, to exercise absolute control of the currency question, there always will be trouble in a great country like ours, geographically divided into sections, each having interests of its own, which sometimes conflict with the interests of one or more of the others. The money question never will be at rest as long as it is in the power of any set of men, in any one section, - to control the volume of the currency, or to say of what that volume shall be composed, what they will recognize as money or not recognize, or how much interest the man who has to borrow money shall pay for the use of it, and in what kind of money it shall be paid.

This is practically what is done now, and has been done for years, and this is the reason of the agitation of the money question to day; thirty-one years after the abolition of the State banks, and the reason why the Congress of the United the people.

There are three schools, if we may so term them, of disputants. First, those who practically assert that gold only should be recognized as a genuine money metal. They do not admit this but logically this is what their contention means.

Second, those who assert that gold and silver should both be used as money and no distinction be made between them. If compelled to make a distinction between the two they would probably decide in favor of inducing their friends and neighbors silver.

Third, those who believe in the abolition of all banks and contend that the Government should issue the money in volume enough to meet all demands of the people, and distribute it among the people directly through sub-treasuries established for that purpose. They don't care what the money is made out of so there be plenty ot it, and would as soon have printed paper as stamped metal.

The first of these contenders hold that there is money enough in the country and for that reason no more should be coined, which neither of the others admit. So the contention goes and so it will go on if the money question is to be controlled by Congress alone, for Congress will never get it into a shape to satisfy the sev- whom they settle. MINOR MENTION.

For the past few years there has been a growing disposition among farmers of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, to move Southward, States is divided into factions over Twenty or thirty years ago, when it, each with its following among they wanted a change they pulled up stakes and moved to the Territories, and it was by these migrators that the Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and other Territories were opened

There are already many settlements of these people located in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, where they seem to be doing well, so well that they are to follow. Iowa papers report a large movement from that State into Texas, and a representative of the Santa Fe Railroad is quoted as saying that his road has carried this Spring not less than 500 people from Iowa to settle in Texas. The Texas roads are doubtless encouraging this movement, as the Illinois Central, which traverses several Southern States, has been doing for some time. This is the kind of immigration the South needs, Ameri-

THE GREAT WHEAT DEAL.

Plunger Pardridge Thought 10 Be Even-A July Squeeze Thought to Be Now i Sight.

There was not so many of the boys 'interested" in wheat as there used to be, but there are some, and these together with those who have been "retired on half pay" will read this, from Chicago, with interest. The great wheat deal engineered by he Cudahys and the unknown millionaires who have stood in with them for ouped himself for his recent heavy los es. He dropped $500,000 or $800,000 in the May squeeze, but the Cudahy clique found themselves in such a fix that they were compelled to let go, and the little plunger got out from under just as everybody supposed he had put his financial head in chancery.

The collapse in the price of May was so sudden after it had touched 90 cents, and it has ever since shown such a wobbly kind of weakness, that it is now generally conceded that whatever intentio may have previously existed of running a corner in wheat for May delivery has een abandoned.

However, the control of the market has not left the hands of the bull clique They are making their play now in July delivery. They bought over 2,000,000 bushels of July wheat on Friday last;
