

Table with 4 columns: Month, Year, Rate, and other details for subscription schedules.

on the face of the globe. The difference in the climate of the elevated or mountainous lands of the Central or Northern South, and that of the Coast or Gulf region, Winter or Summer, is as great as the difference between the climate of England and Italy, and yet there are extremes of heat or cold in neither. In the Piedmont region, where cotton manufacturing has made its greatest progress, while the atmosphere contains moisture enough, it is not laden to excess, nor enough of it to rust the finest machinery or injure the finest thread.

State? All direct taxation is simply an income tax in another form, that is a tax on the things from which the income is derived instead of on the income itself. Of both the latter the fairer and should be the least objectionable because it taxes only the net profits arising from the sources of income and leaves the sources alone. Under the other system values, very often values only on paper, are taxed, whether they be productive or not, and sometimes the non-productive pay a higher tax than the productive. In point of fairness the income tax has everything in its favor, and the very discrimination that is complained of in its fairness, because it imposes the burden on the shoulders that are best able to bear it, and on the man who derives the greatest benefits from the Government for whose benefit he is called upon to contribute, not in proportion to his property, much of which may be non-productive, but in proportion to the benefit he derives from that property, in whatever shape it may be.

It is alleged by some of the Republican organs which found no fault with it when it was first passed as a Republican measure, that it would be in its effect a sectional tax and by far the larger part of it would fall upon the North where the larger incomes are. Did they ever find fault with the protective tariff on this ground which for years has imposed heavy tribute on the people of the South and the West for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers, who have become rich out of this tribute and now complain at the proposition to require them to pay a tax on the income derived from it?

Was there ever any complaint made of the pension system as sectional when nine-tenths of the money expended in pensions was distributed in the North, although the South paid her proportion of it right along? This kind of sectionalism didn't hurt them, but it took hundreds of millions of dollars out of the hard earnings of the people of the South and put them into the pockets of the section which has been favored by Federal legislation ever since the war.

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

State? All direct taxation is simply an income tax in another form, that is a tax on the things from which the income is derived instead of on the income itself. Of both the latter the fairer and should be the least objectionable because it taxes only the net profits arising from the sources of income and leaves the sources alone. Under the other system values, very often values only on paper, are taxed, whether they be productive or not, and sometimes the non-productive pay a higher tax than the productive. In point of fairness the income tax has everything in its favor, and the very discrimination that is complained of in its fairness, because it imposes the burden on the shoulders that are best able to bear it, and on the man who derives the greatest benefits from the Government for whose benefit he is called upon to contribute, not in proportion to his property, much of which may be non-productive, but in proportion to the benefit he derives from that property, in whatever shape it may be.

It is alleged by some of the Republican organs which found no fault with it when it was first passed as a Republican measure, that it would be in its effect a sectional tax and by far the larger part of it would fall upon the North where the larger incomes are. Did they ever find fault with the protective tariff on this ground which for years has imposed heavy tribute on the people of the South and the West for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers, who have become rich out of this tribute and now complain at the proposition to require them to pay a tax on the income derived from it?

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

State? All direct taxation is simply an income tax in another form, that is a tax on the things from which the income is derived instead of on the income itself. Of both the latter the fairer and should be the least objectionable because it taxes only the net profits arising from the sources of income and leaves the sources alone. Under the other system values, very often values only on paper, are taxed, whether they be productive or not, and sometimes the non-productive pay a higher tax than the productive. In point of fairness the income tax has everything in its favor, and the very discrimination that is complained of in its fairness, because it imposes the burden on the shoulders that are best able to bear it, and on the man who derives the greatest benefits from the Government for whose benefit he is called upon to contribute, not in proportion to his property, much of which may be non-productive, but in proportion to the benefit he derives from that property, in whatever shape it may be.

It is alleged by some of the Republican organs which found no fault with it when it was first passed as a Republican measure, that it would be in its effect a sectional tax and by far the larger part of it would fall upon the North where the larger incomes are. Did they ever find fault with the protective tariff on this ground which for years has imposed heavy tribute on the people of the South and the West for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers, who have become rich out of this tribute and now complain at the proposition to require them to pay a tax on the income derived from it?

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

State? All direct taxation is simply an income tax in another form, that is a tax on the things from which the income is derived instead of on the income itself. Of both the latter the fairer and should be the least objectionable because it taxes only the net profits arising from the sources of income and leaves the sources alone. Under the other system values, very often values only on paper, are taxed, whether they be productive or not, and sometimes the non-productive pay a higher tax than the productive. In point of fairness the income tax has everything in its favor, and the very discrimination that is complained of in its fairness, because it imposes the burden on the shoulders that are best able to bear it, and on the man who derives the greatest benefits from the Government for whose benefit he is called upon to contribute, not in proportion to his property, much of which may be non-productive, but in proportion to the benefit he derives from that property, in whatever shape it may be.

It is alleged by some of the Republican organs which found no fault with it when it was first passed as a Republican measure, that it would be in its effect a sectional tax and by far the larger part of it would fall upon the North where the larger incomes are. Did they ever find fault with the protective tariff on this ground which for years has imposed heavy tribute on the people of the South and the West for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers, who have become rich out of this tribute and now complain at the proposition to require them to pay a tax on the income derived from it?

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

State? All direct taxation is simply an income tax in another form, that is a tax on the things from which the income is derived instead of on the income itself. Of both the latter the fairer and should be the least objectionable because it taxes only the net profits arising from the sources of income and leaves the sources alone. Under the other system values, very often values only on paper, are taxed, whether they be productive or not, and sometimes the non-productive pay a higher tax than the productive. In point of fairness the income tax has everything in its favor, and the very discrimination that is complained of in its fairness, because it imposes the burden on the shoulders that are best able to bear it, and on the man who derives the greatest benefits from the Government for whose benefit he is called upon to contribute, not in proportion to his property, much of which may be non-productive, but in proportion to the benefit he derives from that property, in whatever shape it may be.

It is alleged by some of the Republican organs which found no fault with it when it was first passed as a Republican measure, that it would be in its effect a sectional tax and by far the larger part of it would fall upon the North where the larger incomes are. Did they ever find fault with the protective tariff on this ground which for years has imposed heavy tribute on the people of the South and the West for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers, who have become rich out of this tribute and now complain at the proposition to require them to pay a tax on the income derived from it?

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

Read the STAR's great offer of books in this paper. Readers of the WEEKLY STAR can secure these standard novels by sending two of the coupons and ten cents in silver or stamps. Read the advertisement for full particulars.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE. - Smithfield Herald. The many friends of Mrs. J. Walter Myatt were shocked to learn of her sudden death on last Sunday morning. - Charlotte News: Mrs. Mary A. Brem, one of the most estimable ladies of Charlotte, died at the residence of Mr. D. P. Hatchinson, at 11:30 o'clock this morning. She was 85 years of age. - Winston Sentinel: The little daughter of Dr. L. G. Hunt, of Yadkin county, found a portion of a carrier pigeon near her home in a box. The doctor's place a few days ago. On the left foot was a ring showing that it was sent by a man named Wallace, and the pigeon was a resident of Washington city when it was captured and killed by a hawk. - Chatham Record: On the 13th of May a mad dog bit some cattle and the dog belonging to Messrs. J. White, D. V. White and M. F. White, of Bear Creek township, and last week three of the cattle went mad and had to be killed. The dog belonging to Mrs. Robinson, of Silver City, and was shot by Mr. D. V. White. - Mt. Airy News: A carrier-pigeon was caught by Oscar Sides the other day in his mother's yard. It had on its wings "C. Buckley, 427 M street, Washington, D. C." Dr. Buckley was written to and he replied that the bird had been crested at Asheville and was on a direct route to Washington, but it was cloudy for it to make the trip. The pigeon was turned loose here Tuesday. - Concord Standard: Nearly four years ago Mr. Joseph Misener, now deceased, while ploughing in a bottom, lost a fine silver watch. He made diligent search for it, but without success. The same ground has been ploughed four times or more, but the watch could not be seen. The other day Mr. Pink Misener, a son of the deceased, thought up the treasure, and at a place least expected. - Charlotte News: A genuine curiosity in this part of the country was brought to light yesterday afternoon, when the late General John M. Braxton, a patch of burllushes, at Murray's old brickyard near the Air Line junction. The nest contained eleven eggs. They were not quite a large size, although the nest was in a hole in a tree. The nest was in a hole in a tree. The nest was in a hole in a tree. - Southport Observer: The death of Mr. J. Arthur Pinner, one of the oldest residents of Pinner, took place on Thursday last week. Mr. Pinner had been ailing for some time, and was 79 years old. - Greensboro Record: Here is another loud call for a county convict system. Eli Richardson, who was convicted of a misdemeanor last week in North, was hired out to a farmer, Mr. Gas Voss, to work out his fine. He went home with him but the work did not suit him and he left, coming back to the jail last night where he said he had rather remain in jail than to be taken back to work on Voss' farm. There is nothing to do but feed him, and the county foots the bill. - Warrenton Record: With 265-640 acres of land in the county, all of which is capable of being cultivated and which, if properly cultivated, would be very productive, we have a white population of only 18,000. There is no lack of scarcity of money in the county, the condition of our people is better than it has been for many years. Our market is now and here are many cases which are supplied with good home cured bacon, which have not known to be the case before in years. We are gradually learning to make our own goods. - Charlotte Observer: Burglars were at work on Alderman George Hall's place, near the city, Tuesday night. The goods of Messrs. P. T. Freeled, J. C. Boyte, L. A. Adams and J. L. Penninger, who live on that place, were entered, and from the last named $15 in money was stolen. The money was in Mr. Penninger's pants, and his pants were under the bed. The burglar was aroused by a noise, and wrote Mr. husband, who fired three times at the fleeing robber. At the other houses entered, no money was taken. While on the way, the clothing of the inmates was taken out and searched. - Charlotte Observer: Miss Sallie Nash died at home in Hillsboro Sunday last. She was 82 years of age. She was a relative of Capt. Fred Nash and Capt. C. Waters, of this city. She was principal of the famous Nash & Collier school for half a century, and the leading schools of the country. - Green Henderson, a well-known colored political high flyer, who went from here to Washington, securing a place under the last Administration, and after several Department, has felt the edge of Mr. Carlisle's axe. His official head is off. A letter was found on him in the Department, and he was discharged some time back. When the Secretary of the Treasury came across it, he was not long in making the writer's place vacant. - Statesville Landmark: Emanuel Stikelcar with an accident 90 years met near Amity, in Chambersburg township, last Friday afternoon, that caused the death of his son, a cabin on Mr. J. R. Miller's place, by Constable L. M. Greer and two of Mr. Smith's brothers. He was under sleep with the pistol he took from Mr. Smith and two knives under his head. He made no resistance and was brought here and lodged in the Tombs. - Statesville Landmark: Emanuel Stikelcar with an accident 90 years met near Amity, in Chambersburg township, last Friday afternoon, that caused the death of his son, a cabin on Mr. J. R. Miller's place, by Constable L. M. Greer and two of Mr. Smith's brothers. He was under sleep with the pistol he took from Mr. Smith and two knives under his head. He made no resistance and was brought here and lodged in the Tombs.