

THE LION LEAPED FOR THE END OF THE

When he awoke, he could not tell where he was. He felt that he was in a vault of inky blackness, the sides of which were of cold stone, and thought he might have been buried alive. He could not tell how to get out. He felt along the walls, but could find nothing to guide him, but he did find a piece of candle some one had left. He had some matches and was about to strike one when he became conscious of the presence of something uncanny near him. He looked and saw a pair of blazing green eyes fixed intently upon him, and soon the outlines of a human body forming itself beneath them. He reeled and fell backward as the realization that it must be the ghost swept across his mind. Still the eyes glared, and as nothing else happened Allen slowly recovered his equilibrium and man-aged to strike a match and light the can-dle. The ghost vanished, and in its place stood an enormous mountain lion block-stood an enormous mountain lion blocking up the mouth of the shaft.

Allen had no weapon but a small pocket knife, which he took out and opened, determined to fight if he must. The lion was swidently afraid of the light and would not make an attack till the candle was burned out. This would not be long, however, and Allen thought it would be wise to retreat up the tunnel and see if there was a ladder left in apy of the vertical shafts. He found plenty of shafts, but no ladders. The shafts all sunk straight down for 100 feet, and there was no means of crossing them. so Allen had to turn back again and again, close up again.

At last he came to a shaft with a plank across it. There was some straw on the ground, and he picked up a handful of it before he started across the plank. When he reached the other side he quickly pulled the plank after him. The lion lashed his tail furiously, hesitating about making the long jump. Finally Allen decided the matter for the beast. He pushed the board out until it reached half way across the chasm and stood on the end of it to keep it from failing. He then wound his straw about a stone and lighted it from the candle. This blazing missile he threw across into the pile of straw behind the lion.

The straw was dry and blazed brightly, and the lion's fury changed to fear. It paced along the edge of the shaft for a few moments and then made a leap for the end of the board about six feet away. It reached the board safely and for a moment clung on to the end. Just then Allen stepped off, and board and lion both wen-to the bottom just as the candle went out. Allen heard the dull thud of the heavy body and knew that his enemy was dead. He was in a bad fix still because he could not get out. The tunnel he had got into ended a few feet farther on, and it was impossible for him to jump across the 10 feet. There was nothing to do but wait, which he did for nearly three days, when his friends came and found him. They thought of looking into the mine because they saw his horse, nearly starved, standing tied to the cactus.

GENEROUS KENTUCKY.

She Shows the World How Moonship Whisky Is Made.

Behind the Agricultural building at the World's fair is a rough log cabin with a rustic porch and a clay chimney. Kentuckians recognize it at once as a genuine mountaineer's cabin and point it out with pride to people from elsewhere as an evidence of the greatness of the Bluegrass State's generosity, which in that rustic cabin sacrifices to a thirsting world the se-cret of her famous "mountain dew."

Everything about the exterior is of the primitive picturesqueness and squalid simplicity of a moonshiner's hut in some mountain dingle which strangers seldom seen, and to some extent the delusion is en-couraged after the doorstep is passed. Monday night Dr. Hood left home, ostensibly on a visit to a patient, but instead hid in an outbuilding near the house. In less than an hour Piper entered the house. Dr. Hood forced his way to his wife's bed-Hood forced his way to his wife a bedroom and found his wife and Piper in a compromising situation. The Doctor attempted to shoot Piper, but the pistol snapped. Snatching a coal oil lamp burning on a table near by, the wronged husband dashed the missile at Piper's head, the glass horribly cutting his face; the lamp exploded, the oil running in streams of fire over Piper's body, burning his right ear off, destroy-ing the sight of both eyes, literally cook-ing his breast and shoulders and burning his hair and beard. He died in less than an hour. The unfaithful wife threw herself upon the body, a mass of charred flesh, and cried for death to take her with her lover.

BORDEN MURDER TRIAL.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S ARGU-MENT FOR THE STATE Sefore a Crowded Court Room at New Bedford, Mass .- Motive for the Murder Shown-The Testimony Analysed-The Judge's Charge to the Jury-Verdict of Not Guilty.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star. NEW BEDFORD, June 20 .- There was not so great a jam outside the court house this morning, although at the opening of the Court there were as many people in the room as at any time during the Borden trial. Miss Borden entered the room at 8.55, the Court came in at 9 promptly, and the district attorney continued his argument. The District Attorney again recurred to his theory of motive for the murder as shown in the relations between Lizzie Borden and her stepmother, from which he said "We can suspect even the malice existing. I have called your attention to the way in which they lived under the same roof. It impresses me deeply, as I am sure it did you; the malice was all before the fact; the wickedness, the ingratitude had gone on under that roo for many, many months. Because the lips of those who do know are sealed in death, we don't know but that some new phase had come up in the family life adding to the feeling of malice and jeal-ousy existing in this woman. No sug-gestion could be made by that poor man as in favor of his wife, but would fan the flames into unquenchable fire. There may be that in this case which shows that Lizzie Andrew Borden did not plan to kill her father, and I hope so, but it was not Lizzie Andrew Borden who came down those stairs to meet her father, but a murderess transformed from the ties of affection to the most consumate cruelty ever know. She came down to meet that stern old man who loved his daughter, but who also loved his wife, and the one man above all who would know who killed his wife. and when she came down stairs she came to meet Nemesis. He knew people hung around Esquire D. G. Max-well's court this morning to hear the evidence in a suit for slander, brought by him live. When she came down Louise Archie against Fred Watts, a stairs it was her father she met, but it was also the husband of the step mother she had hated. There was no escape from the crime, but to complete the bloody work. The second murder was not planned, but was done as with that of a white man of Wadesboro wicked and fearful necessity. And I in a very compromising way, and she had him arrested. She made out a clear say this to relieve my mind of the dreadful feeling that there is a deliberate par-

case against him and Watts was sent to ricide in the world. Knowlton then analized the testimony as to what went on in the Borden house during the short time betwaen Andrew Borden's arrival at home and Lizzie's announcement of the murder. The story of Lizzie ironing clothes he discredited, and the visit to the barn alibi he said wouldn't stand. Officer Medley's The planing mill plant of A. Cameron & story, which went to show that nobody Co., at Winder, this county, was burned | had been in the barn, Knowlton held to

> The prisoner watched Knowlton fix edly during his argument. He de clared the silk dress produced by the defendantwas not the dress worn at the time of the murder, as shown by Mrs. Churchill, Doherty and Dr. Brown. The search the day of the murder was insufficient, but it put defendant on her guard and Saturday's thorough search failed to disclose the dress; therefore, he claimed it was concealed. Paper would have protected defendant's person, and burnt paper was found in the stove. The two versions of the burning of the defendant's dress were irreconcilable. Defen dant's conduct since that time was dis cussed, and Mrs. Reagon's story was declared to be true. Production of the hatchet was no part of rhe Government's case, but it was part of its duty to produce all it knew bearing on the case.

Knowlton reviewed at length the evidence as to the handleless hatchet and discussed its bearing on the case, dwelling on the significance of its fitting the wounds and being broken short as if by design. Mr. Knowlton briefly but powerfully summarized his entire argument, claiming that the deence amounted to nothing, and closed at 12.05 with an eloquent appeal to the ury to decide as their consciences should direct. The Court then took a recess.

At 1.40 the Court resumed its session and the defendant was given an opprtutiny to speak. She said, "I am innocent, but I will leave my case in your hands and with my counsel."

Judge Dewey then charged the jury He told them to disregard the previous nearings, and defined the different de grees of murder. He stated the pre sumption of innocence, which was in creased with defendant's character There must be a real and operative mo tive. Judge Dewey charged the jury to weigh the evidence so as to see whether defendant's permanent state of mind showed a motive for the crimes. Every material allegation in the indictment must be proved beyond reasonable doubt: that is, to a moral certainty. He compared the direct and circumstantial evidence, and said that failure to prove an essential fact would be fatal, bu failure to prove a helpful fact might not be. Lizzie's statements about the note were discussed at length, and he said they must be satisfied they were talse Every fact proved must be reasonably consistent with guilt. The government did not show that anybody else had an opportunity to commit the crime, but just prove the defendant committed it The jury must reason as to the effect of defendant's conduct and statements They were not to conclude by expert testimony, but were to apply to it reasonable judgment. They may convict if satisfied the act was done by another party, but that the defendant was present, aiding and abetting. The fact that defendant did not testify ough not to influence them against her. The ustice concluded his charge to the ury at 3,15.

The jury filed into their seats at 4.80 and were polled. Miss Borden was asked to stand up and the foreman asked to return the verdit, upon which ne announced "not guilty." After the verdict had been receive the district attorney moved that the nolle prossed and the order of the Court was to that effect. Chief Justice Mason then gracefull thanked the jurors in appreciation of their work and faithful service, and reminded them that the precautions taken with them which may have seemed irksome at the time, were solely in the interest of justice, a fact which they undoubtedly realize now. The jury was then dismissed, and the court was ad-

Increased Appetite is one of the first good effects felt by users of scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with Hypophos phites. Good appetite begets good health.

Scott's Emulsion is a fat-food that provides its own tonic. Instead of a tax upon appetite and digestion it is a wonderful help to both.

Scott's Emusion arrests the progress of Consumption Bronchitis, Scrofula, and other wasting diseases by raising a currier of healthy flesh, strength and nerve. Prepared by Scott & Bowne Y. All druggist
