Impure Water and Bad Sanitary Arrange

Prof. Vaughan, of New York, makes some interesting statements concerning typhoid fever, based upon official reports in this and other countries. In this country there are annually about 500,000 cases of the disease, of which 50,000 terminate fatally. The cost of these cases, estimated in dollars, and not including physicians' fees, is about $64,-000,000. All of these great losses of lives and money, Prof. Vaughan says, are understood and may be prevented, and he asks why it is not prevented.

rangements are the causes of typhoid, professor says, and these matters can certainly be attended to by municipalities. As an illustration of what may be done by a city towards preventdisease, he cites the successful efforts of the city of Munich, Bavaria. From 1852 to 1859 the annual death rate from typhoid fever in that city was 24.2 per 1,000. There were no sewers, no public water supply, and the sanitary arrangements of the houses "were almost too disgusting to describe." The consequence was that the place was a very hotbed of typhoid, In 1859 sanitary reforms were introduced; sewers were constructed, a pure water supply provided and the condition of the houses improved. The result of these reforms was that in 1884 the death rate from typhoid feyer had dropped to

The leaders regard this as a much more desirable and consistent policy than trading with discontented Democratic factions to help the latter on one item or another. The policy as thus determined is almost certain to result in the passage of the Wilson bill.

A good deal of damage was done to the mine equipment and some of the miners were The beaten, but nobody was killed.

This morning the mob again formed and made another raid at Federal. dents in taking a special train to reach Several buildings were damaged, windows smashed, and coal cars and other property destroyed. Every mine in the district was visited, the miners driven from work and many of them beaten. When the mob reached Bridgeville it was 700 strong. They had a systematic plan of operations. They divided into four bands of 150 to 175 in each, burned mine buildings, dumped railroad cars, tore up tracks, robbed stores, and beat everybody who came in their way for several hours. Finally a merchant of Bridgeville, whose store had been robbed, organized a party of twenty, all Americans and mostly miners, well armed, and started in chase of the rioters. The latter were all armed also, ence. They turned aside from cotton long enough to improve and care for their stock, and the result is they feel like making something more than an experiment of it this year. ----The jury in the Smith murder trial which begun in Pitt county Superior Court last week, returned a verdict Satarday of not guilt. It will be remembered that Abner Slaughter and J. H. Smith, neighbors, had a dispute about cutting wood on a certain piece of land. Slaughter killed J. H. Smith, and then turned upon his brother, G. T. Smith, the accused, and snapped his pistol at him. Smith then struck Slaughter on the head with an iron rod. Slaughter, who had already been shot by J. H. Smith, fell about that time and died. The jury did not believe that the defendant killed Slaughter, and, even admitting that he did, he only struck after Slaughter had killed his (Smith's) brother, and in self-defence, fearing that he himself would be killed.
