THE NEXT CONGRESS.

The Republican managers are laying their plans to get control of the next Senate and to reduce the Democratic majority in the next House of Representatives, and as part of the programme, to accomplish this, we find them pooling their issues with th Populists in the South, and playing double on the silver question to fool the Populists of the West.

They do not expect to elect a majority in the next House of Representatives, but they are going to try to elect all the Populists they can in districts where there is no reasonable prospect of electing a Republican. They are not particularly anxious for a clear Republican majority in the next House, for if they just now. had it they could carry through no party measure with a Democratic President to pass upon the measure, and hence while putting themselves in a position to be held responsible for legislation on the eve of another Presidential election, they would be utterly powerless to do anything. If they should have a majority, the silver Republicans of the West might call on them to deem some of their free coinage promises and they would thus be forced to do what they didn't want to do, or by refusing confess that they had been playing to humbug the silver people of the West to get them into the Republican party for the Presidential election of 1896. The Stanly News of last week calls attention to the fact that the Populist Convention for that county had nominated for the most important office in the county a man who had candidly told them before the nomination that he was not competent to discharge the duties of the office.
