THEY WANT CHEAP COTTON. There is one feature in the agitation for the expansion of the volume of the currency which has not attracted as much attention as it should, and yet it is a very important feature. Practically speaking, the had been accustomed to poor soil agitation might be called sectional. although it is not strictly so, the South and the West, the great agricultural sections, contending for an enlargement of the volume and for the free coinage of silver as one of the means to that end, the Middle and Eastern States opposing it and contending that we have money enough. The former demand the increase in the currency because they believe that this will result in raising the prices of farm products, the latter oppose it because they are greater consumers than producers and are therefore interested in keeping the prices down. Five cent cotton and fifty cent wheat suit them much better than ten cent cotton and dollar wheat, for the former means not only cheap raiment and cheap bread, but it means also that the South and the West must continue to be borrowers. and to be dependent upon the money-they need. In an interview a few days ago tory business that some of them John Sherman, one of the most coldblooded and far-seeing schemers that their money to better account by ever figured in the financial affairs of this or any other country, said in speaking of the silver agitation and the South, "what right has the South to demand to have anything to say in shaping the financial policy of this country? She long ago by her herestes forfeited right to that. Cotton may be cheap down there, but cheap cotton for the South means cheap cotton goods for the North." This is not his precise language, but it is the substance and the spirit of it, and there is truth in it cold-blooded as it is. Cheap cotton does mean cheap cotton garments for the North, and while this is the case, aside from other selfish considerations, John Sherman and | deal in giving impetus to the immiothers of his way of thinking will take mighty good care to do nothing | Southward. In view of these and nor to permit anything to be done which they can prevent to raise the price of cotton. While the volume of the currency other products at the Atlanta Expois contracted, and it can be controlled by the money combinations of the North the Southern cotton-grower and the Western wheat-grower cannot hold back their crops, but must put them on the market what- that the Treasury officials were surever the price may be to get the money they need, and it is unfortunately the case with most of them that they need money to buy things they must have and to pay debts they owe. A very large percentage of Western farmers are in the hands of mortgage holders, and the money they owe must be forthcoming on demand, while a very considerable Percentage of Southern farmers are in debt, if not under mortgage to the same extent that the Western farmers are. But they are both at the mercy of creditors, and are forced to market their crops regardless of price to pay these debts, which would not be the case if money were more plentiful and could be more easily obtained. If when cot- the fellows with an appetite for gold ton goes to five or six cents and and again perform the service of wheat to fifty, the growers of these staples could hold them back, how long would they remain at these fig- knocked out of the gold pot and ure? The movement of the cotton crop and the grain crop will shortly begio, but will be restricted until buyers have arranged with the Eastern banks to advance money to enable hem to pay for deliveries; and while bey are waiting for that a very conderable portion of the crops will e sacrificed by men who cannot aford to wait.

Some newspapers are never satisfied except when they are making assaults on some well established usages and traditions. Now we find the Boston Herald talking about hailstones as big as peas being reported in various sections of the country, when it is a well-known fact that there never has been a parity established between hailstones and peas in this country, not even in the ratio of 16 to 1. True, there is no constitutional provision on the subject; but there is an unwritten law which is held sacred by all Southern newspapers, and not to speak of a bailstone as being "as big as a hen's egg" is considered rank treason. Occasionally when an enterprising citizen scoops up a quart or two of hailstones from a neighboring street and rushes to the sanctum of the village editor to exhibit their mammoth proportions, he makes a close calculation on meltage and remarks that when gathered they were as large as goose eggsand the village editor is goose enough to believe him-but the standard of size is the "hen egg;" and the Southern hailstone and the egg of the Shanghai chicken of the gentler sex circulate on a parity, with or without co-operation on the part of foreign governments. "Hailstones as big as peas?" Let the Herald, if it like, talk about Massachusetts hailstones "as big as Boston baked beans;" but when it comes to the North Carolina hailstone we protest against such odious comparison. As "big as hen-eggs," or nothing. Them's our sentiments.

CITY MARKETS.

Abundant Supplies of Vegetables-Fish

Scarce-Fruits in Fair Supply. The city markets yesterday were supolied with almost everything in the line of vegetables. In the way of fruits there was little besides watermelons to attract purchasers. Cantelopes are disappearng, though there are yet a few fine ones to be had. Apples are on sale in fair quantity at 20 to 25 cents per peck, and a few peaches are to be had at 10 cents per quart or 50 cents per peck. Watermelons this season, though late, are in greater abundance and finer and cheaper than for years.

There is a good supply of poultry in dealers hands and prices are reasonable. Grown fowls sold vesterday at 30 to 8 each, and chickens from 121/4 to 25c.; ducks 60c, per pair. Eggs are more abundant than usual at this season and prices are low; at retail, 10c. per dozen.

The fish market yesterday was poorly supplied with fresh fish, and the few bunches of desirable varieties were soon

Few Killed by Lightning.

Statistics show that the average annual loss of life by lightning in the United States is 224 persons, and this out of a population of nearly 70,000,000. This means that about one person out of every 819,000 is killed every year in the United States by lightning. And yet some people act during a little thunder storm as if one person out of every baker's dozen were killed every year. By the way, how many people have been killed by lightning in Wilmington during the last fifty years?

The charter requires nine directors, and only four directors were present. The point was also made that the neeting could not be made a formal meeting, and that only an informal dis-cussion of the affairs of the Association could be had, upon the ground that only sixty-seven shares of stock had been represented at the annual meeting in July, and hence no adjourned meeting could be held legally.

The chairman overruled these points.
The report of the committee on proxies was adopted and the meeting declared organized for business, a quorum being secured by the appointment of proxies for absent stockholders by three of the The annual report and statements were read and adopted. The chair announced that since the call for the adjourned meeting had been issued a temporary receiver of the Association had been appointed, and therefore resolutions were introduced to allow the directors to wind up the Association's affairs upon a plan outlined in the resolutions. Now, there it is again. "So they say !"

Why this qualification? It is nothing more nor less than a reflection on the five fishermen who found the snakes, and all because they were fishermen. It wouldn't be safe down here, where the veracity of the picturesque piscatorical prevaricator is never questioned, to print such a reflection on that "noble order." Suppose such representatives of the Anglers' Ananias Association of Wilmington as Charlie Yates, Reub Pickett, Henry Nash and Sam Hall were to go fishing and come back with a hair-lifting "anecdote" to the etfect that they had killed not only fifty copperhead snakes, but while their "hands were in." had also slaughtered and scalped fifty copperhead Indians. Would anybody doubt it? Would anybody have the hardihood to call for the scalps? Perish the thought!

CHICAGO, August 2.-A local paper says: The crop of corn this year will be the largest that has ever been known. It is estimated at the present time that the yield will exceed by 200,000,000 bushels the record of any previous year. This condition did not exist a month ago. At that time continued drought in nearly all the corn States made the outlook dubious for an average yield, but the rains came copious, heavy, continuous showday prosperity hovers closer over mill-ions of homes than for many a year.

crop will bring more money if marketed than all other grain products combined.

is from 2,250,000,000 to 2,500,000,000 the crop will be worth $800,000,000. A termed the corn belt. This section fur-crop that the managers of the various vallroads that traverse the valleys of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers are largely making arrangements and perfecting their equipment for handling the crop. The force of workmen has been increased in a number of shops, and all rolling stock is being repaired and made available for use, in addition to new reight cars that are being hurried rapidly

The Government report of July 1st ndicated that there would be an unusually large yield of corn, but since that report was issued the conditions

The previous greatest yield of any year was in 1889, when the acreage was
