TWO TRAVELERS.

If one were to seek the site of the Red Lion that stood on the Harlem road over century ago, he could no more discover it than he could the snow that fell at the date of which we write.

The Red Lion was an inn kept by a jolly old Hollauder named Peter Steen, and directly opposite was the only grocery store on that part of the island, and this was presided over by Peter's brother, Helst. The brothers were very dissimilar in temperament and appearance. Peter weighed over 200 pounds, was a hard drinker, inveterate smoken and a great talker. Helst was of small stature, weighing only 100 and some odd pounds, and he never drank spirituous liquors nor used tobacco in any form. Neither was he of a loquacious turn. Silent and meditative, he weighed out his sugar and tea to his customers, took their hard money, put it safely away, and grew richer each year than his laughing, rollicking brother Peter. Every evening, after the store was way, and the brothers, taking chairs, would, when the season permitted, sit in front of the tavern under the trees and converse, while Peter's son, Dyke, attended the bar.

It was the latter part of the summer when the brothers were seated in their accustomed places, that a couple of strangers were driven to the inn, and, alighting, requested accommodations. Peter slowly took his pipe from his

"Go yourself," said Helst, in an undertone. "You'll never become rich it you turn these matters over to others. You must mend your ways, brother, and not put the care of the house on Dyke. Come, be stirring." And he gave Peter gentle shake. The latter laughed, and, arising, went forward to attend to the wants of his guests. A small trunk and two shotguns were the only baggage the travelers possessed, and these were carried to the

ELECTRIC RAT KILLING. The Mysteries of the Current Too Much

For the Rodents. Electricity is really becoming a very useful thing in its way. The electrical supply house in Kansas City is using it to kill its rats. The basement of the house is infested with rodents, which have little respect for property and eat the insulating materi-al off wires and the fatty substances about the electrical machines for dessert. At this electrical establishment it takes 35,000 ohms of electricity and at least three men to dispatch a rat. This is the manner of their death. When a cellar rat is caught by the paws in a steel trap, the trap is brought up stairs, carefully carried by the chain at arm's length, for a cellar rat will fight, and its bite is unwholesome. The electrician then comes forward with a magnetic bell machine, a sort of young dyname, with a resistance of 35,000 chms, To the machine are attached two long insulated wires.

The rat is laid on an iron plate. A man takes one wire and applies the uncovered end to the iron plate. The man who is looking after the rat takes the other wire and pokes the rat with the bare end of it. The rat resents this, of course, and bites at the wire. The man with the machine grinds industriously until the bell rings, which it does when a resistance of 35,000 the returns of the ticker at a salary of $5 per week. The broker to whom I told the whole story saw that I was young and had been deceived and made up the $800 which had been lost through me." "Do you find it necessary to be on your guard against such women?"

"Indeed we do. Women are known t be tricky in their speculations. They are not as honest as men, and they are not as good all around speculators. They jump at conclusions, draw rash inferences, and as a rule, lack caution. Yet there is absolutely nothing that will discourage a woman who has once felt the fascination of handling stocks. She may lose every cent she has and she will borrow money and return. She may grow weak and old, yet she will come here day after day, year after year. The most pathetic example I have ever seen of this persistency was a young woman who began her career in a very prosperous condition. She was of good family and wealthy. Her sister, however, had charge of her money, and, knowing this young speculator's weakness, limited her to a monthly allowance rather than allowing her to squander as much of her property as she pleased. Every month, however, the young woman who was the subject of this wise arrangement came and staked her entire allowance and promptly lost it. Time after time the performance was repeated. Finally the sister died, the young girl gained control of her property, and within a few weeks lost it all. One day when she was reduced to $2 she asked a friend what she should do with it. She was coolly advised to buy some lunch and go home. Instead of doing this she went to a bucket shop, staked the $2, won $10 and returned to the broker's office. She felt that her luck had changed, and she invested the $10 in a promising venture. Before night it was lost, and she was penniless. The next time I saw that girl she was emlpoyed in a broker's office to call out
