THE TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, February 28.-Not. withstanding the agreement made by the Senate to vote on the Hawaiian government bill at to-day's session, the final vote on the measure was postponed until 4 o'clock to-morrow. Practically no progress was made on the bill to-day, although it was under consideration nearly four hours.

Mr. McLaurin, South Carolins, was then recognized to speak on the Philip pine question. He said: "In the discussion of this question there has been manifested a disposition to ignore the conditions by which we are confronted and to project the debate upon a line

Mr. Aldrich explained the conference on the Financial bill. One of the amendments authorizing the gold reserve to be held in bullion as well as in gold coin was added, because the facilities for the coinage of gold would not at present admit of coining the gold in sufficient quantity to maintain at all times the reserve in gold coin. The provision prohibiting the use of bond proceeds to pay current government expenses was due to the apprereasion of the House conferees that a so-called endless chain might be established. He said the authority to suspend' the issue of certificates when United States notes and silver certificates in the general fund exceed sixty millions dollars, was simply another way of protecting the reserve. The issue first of silver certificates of small denominations was to avoid any possible contraction of the currency. The additional coinage of $20,000,000 of subsidiary silver was to meet expected later needs of our island possessions. The authority for banks to issue one third of their e reulating not s in denominations of five dollars was agreed to because binks in remote parts of the country needed agood deal of currency in small bills to accommodate customers. Concerning the bimetallic amend-of political sentimentalism. This mode of discussion is not only unpatriotic but is an evasion of the true issue. This is not a political question.

Senator McLaurin strongly deprecated the position which the Democr tic party had taken in making the Philip pine question and expansion a political issue. He pointed to the past to show that some of the greatest Democrats who ever lived were expansionists and to prove by their acts and measures that if it had not been for them the United States would not have been the nation it is to day.

He took the ground that the Philippines are rightfully and legally ours by the treaty of Paris and that the United States should hold them, affording the Filipinos every opportunity to acquire the art of government and giving them all the powers and rights possible in the circumstances. He dwelt particularly on the great opportunities afforded by the islands for trade between Americans and the nations of the Orient. He did not agree with some of his collea ues on the Democratic side that our trade in the East was a mere figment of the im agination. He quoted statistics to prove that the experience of the last decade contradicted those who asserted that our eastern trade was not of immense consequence. "It is in the Orient," said he, "that we must look for markets. There must be a change in our policy. We must enter into competition for this trade. We must as a nation recognize changed conditions, and I believe that by holding the Philippines, our trade in the Orient will continue to increase until all surplus products for years to come will find remunerative markets in the East."

Mr. McLaurin then discussed the special interest of the South in the expansion of our trade. "I am glad," said he. "to believe that the Southern people have determined to investigate and study this question rather than to be led blindly by political anti expan sionists. The Southern farmer by the increased price received for raw cotton last year has become aroused. Fealty to party and misleading information, I fear, has produced among them opposition to territorial expansion.

"The effort has been made in my own State to suppress all information and arouse public sentiment against expansion. The frightful ghost of 'imperialism' has been held up before the people of the South to frighten them, but I believe it is impossible much longer to thus mislead them." Senator McLaurin said, in sketch ing the progress of the South during the past twenty years, that the blight of negro suffrage and negro domination had almost extinguished hope and energy and manly effort, but like a giant bound with fetters she aroused herself at last and again started upon an era of industrial life.

"Capital has flowed into that section," said he. "There is confidence in all Southern enterprises. The bit ter memories of the past are being forgotten in the rush for the develop ment of our resources. Our peop feel that they are again a part of this great country and are left free and untrammelled to work out their own destiny. Our Southern manufacturers have already reached out to the markets of the Orient and discovered their advantages. The Southern farmer needs such markets for his raw cotton to make its production remunerative.

"By the acquisition of the Philippines we hold the key to the Eastern situation. We need not rely solely dering of the Queen's Eoglish," and upon treaty rights to secure the "open the "violation of the canons of the door," but can demand equal commer- language" could not make it constitu-

Far From Ending the War.

PARIS, February 27, 6.30 P. M.-The newspapers of this city pay the highest tribute to General Cronje's valor and express the opinion that his surrender is far from ending the war. They add that it will only make the resistance of the Boer nation all the more desperate. Several pewspapers, however, urge that Great Britain accept mediation now that she has secured an important victory and stop further bloodshed. The Temps, in an article headed "Honor to Both Combatants," appeals to Great Britain to end the war, saying: "If England, once unfortunately en gaged in this struggle, could not emerge by accepting the humiliation of defeat, it appears to us that she will do well and reconquer the sympathies of all nations, if, after having given proof of her superior strength, she knew how to stop herself and in doing so stop the scenes of the destruction aud carnage now unfolding themselves
