be cheap enough not to leave a reasonable margin of profit for the manufacturer, who could thrive on a much smaller profit than he makes now, even at the present low price of goods. As an illustration of the steady and large increase in the demand for goods, we clip the following from the Charleston News and Courier:

In an address delivered before the Cotton Spinners' Association at its meeting in Charlotte last Saturday, Mr. A. B. Sanford, president of the American Cotton Yarn Exchange, of Boston, gave some statistics of growth and present status of the cotton spinning industry in this country county: which are of general interest

After noting that the total number of spindles in Great Britaiu on January 1, 1900, as estimated, was 46,000,-000, it is stated that the total for the United States on the same date was 21,000,000, the total for the New England States was 18,955,000 and the total for the Southern States, "including the year 1900," is 5.250,000.

The increase in the number of spindles in New England is shown by decades as follows

Of the opinions handed down by the court, the one of greatest general interest and importance is that in the case of Theophilus White vs. the State Auditor and Treasurer. In this case the Supreme Court, for the first time in its history, reverses the action of the General Assembly in a matter clearly in the province of the Legislature. In other words, the court orders the State Treasurer to pay a claim which the Legislature has said he shall not pay. The plaintiff, White, was appointed by the Governor chief inspector of the oyster industry. The Legislature attempted to abolish the plaintiff's office of chief inspector by creating the office of shell-fish commissioner, and provided that the salary of such commissioner should be $400 per annum and travelling expenses. etc., which amount was less than that allowed as salary for the chief inspector; and it was provided that the State Treasurer should not pay com pensation to any persons claiming same for services rendered concerning the shell-fish industry unless such persons are authorized to render such services under the provisions of Chapter 19. Laws of 1899. The Supreme Court decided in White vs. Hill, at the last term, that Chapter 19, Laws of 1899, could not have the effect of ousting plaintiff from his office, and that he was entitled to hold the same against the shell-fish commissioner created under the act of 1899. The Auditor refused to issue plaintiff a warrant for his services rendered as chief inspector since the passage of Chapter 21, Laws of 1899, claiming that said act prohibited him from issuing such warrant, and plaintiff brought action for mandamus to compel the auditor to issue the war rant and the treasurer to pay the same. Speaking of the new steamboat which will be built shortly for the Cape Fear river trade by the Merchants' and Farmers' Transportation Company, the Fayetteville Observer Savs:

"Mr. Oliver Evans, president of the Merchants' and Farmers' Transportation Company, informs us that Monday week the stockholders will meet and decide what to do with the Driver: whether to keep her on the upper Cape Fear or put her on the Black River. River business has greatly increased in the last few years, and it may be found profitable to run both boats."
