Senator Hanna said the few men de termined to have a government armor factory built were willing to sacrifice everything else, and he wanted the armor question taken out of the legislative branch of the government in order to get it out of politics.

Senator Hanna advocated the Penrose proposition as a fair compromise. Senator Elkins, West Virginia, and Senator Quarles, Wisconsin, pooh poohed the idea of a scandal in leaving the armor purchase question to the Secretary of the Navy. Senator Money, Mississippi, said the Senate could not afford to abrogate its duties to any one, and Senator Daniel, Virginia, urged the Senate to stand up to the fight which had been on for five years.

Mr. Daniel said that under the present circumstances we must buy our armor plate from a notorious and universally recognized combine or build our own plant. He had never heard that business principles demanded that the buyer should place himself entirely in the hands of the seller, or that a man should employ an agent to do for him that which he could do himself

"Why," asked Senator Daniel, "did the armor plate manufacturers decline to tell the cost of the production of armor plate when asked by the Senate committee?"

Senator Penrose asked permission to reply to this inquiry, and began by referring to Senator Daniel's speech as a 'reckless statement and dema-terization and refused to yield farther. Continuing, he urged that there was no emergency that should render it so necessary to hurry the construction of the navy as not to take time to do that which should be done in the interest
