"It affords me great pleasure to be able to say a few words in regard to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Flora Arn, of Dallas, Jackson Co., Mo. "I was tempted to try these medicines after seeing the effect upon my mother. At an early age of married life I was greatly bothered with painful periods, also a troublesome drain which rendered me weak and unfit for work of any kind. I became so thin there was nothing left of me but skin and bone. My husband became alarmed and got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription. After he saw the wonderful effects of that one he got two more, and after I used those up there was no more, and after I used those up there was no more pain, and I began to gain in flesh very rapidly."

FOR A SHORTER WORK DAY.

The International Machinists' Association Declares Its Purpose to Continue the Fight.

By Cable to the Morning Star. TORONTO, ONT., June 8.—The International Machinists Association today adopted a resolution to the effect that "after due consideration we accent the challenge of the National Metal Trades Association, and in accepting this declaration of war we cheerfully pick up the gauntlet and hurl back defiance. We never will accept any modification of our descriptions. She had thought love not worth the mands or resume labor until the cause for which we struggle is triumphant and a shorter work day is an accomplished fact."

President O'Connell claims that the international association did all it could to get satisfactory adjustment by pacific means, offering to accept any decision reached by arbitration that would cover the question nationally, but he says the employers refuse every effort of conciliation. F. H. Sergent, grand master of the Locomotive Firemen's Association, assured the delegates that his order would assist them by all means in their power to win their fight.

The girl was looking out of the window, humming softly, with a fine air of indifference. The man was leaning his back against the mantelpiece, gloomily observing the points of his

They were good boots, but hardly worth the amount of serious observation he was giving them. To any person of moderate understanding the situation was obvious. To the two actors in it it was becoming embarrassing. The man moved first.

"You are sure your mind is made up, Georgie?" The girl stopped humming abruptly and turned round. "What is the use of beginning again?" she said, with an impatient movement. "You know one cannot serve two masters. I am going to give my life to my art." "But, Georgie, you know what could never change or forget." "Why not?" she returned quickly. "That is just what I wanted to speak to you about. You see"-and her proud head was raised a trifle higher-"you only want a wife who can see that you get a good dinner every day and sew the buttons on your shirts. You have known us all for years. Why do you expect me, the unpractical one of the family, to snatch at the offer of this post? You would have shown more sense in asking Madge or Lillian, and I dare say one of them might have had For a moment there was a dangerous gleam in his eyes, but it changed to a tender look of amusement as the girl flung herself viciously into a chair with the air of a sulky child.

"I suppose it would have been more sensible," he agreed, "only I don't love either Madge or Lilian. If you will only have me," he continued, a twinkle in his eye and abject humility in his voice, "I will do my best to overcome my disgraceful appetite and dine off a sentimental song if you deem it best will also look out for some patent shirt fasteners which will save you the trouble of sewing on buttons."

Georgie looked up quickly. "You needn't try to be funny, Rex!" she said severely. "You know quite well I should have to become a domeswon't. I am going to devote my life to music, and if I were to sacrifice that and marry you I should stop loving you in a fortnight and hate you in a month. There; that's all!" Rex looked up quickly.

"You would stop loving me in a fortnight?" he asked. "Then I may infer you have begun already? "You may infer nothing, sir." she retorted sharply, but her face was crim-

"By Jove, that's the nearest I've ever got!" thought Rex. "I believe she does half like me, but must make her cave in before she'll respect me."

There was a moment's pause, then he said gently "I beg your pardon, Georgie. I believe you may be right, after all, though it is hard to think of giving you up." And he sighed softly, but resignedly. "If you are not too angry with me, will you tell me which you think it would be best for me to try to like,

Lilian or Madge?" "I am so glad, Rex, you are sensible at last! Really, I have thought it out carefully, and, though Lilian is awfully sweet and-and everything, I think Madge is the one best suited to you. You see, she cooks splendidly and knows exactly how everything ought to be done in a house and would be perfectly satisfied if you kissed her once a month or so and occasionally said the dinner was excellent. She really would, she is so easily pleased. British Capture Prisoners, Ammunition While I- Well, you know what I

"Yes, I know what you are," he replied quietly. "You are very young." She misunderstood him, as he had intended she should, and assented

"Yes, I am young-only 19-and you are nearly 30. Madge is nearest you in age, and I believe you could make her love you if you tried." "Shall I try? Do you want me to?"

"Yes, of course I want you to. It is for your own sake. She would make you a better wife than I because I don't want even to be loved. I am natisfied with my life as it is." "All right, Georgie. In a month' I shall have made up my mind, and I will tell you. Goodby." "Goodby," she murmured, vaguely afraid of what she had done. She tried to reason out the cause of her depression, but it seemed to have no cause, and with a lagging step she made her way to the sunny den which she shared with her sisters.

Madge was sitting there alone, sewing and singing gayly. She looked up. with a smile, as Georgie entered, and an unusual merriment danced in her

"Guess who's been here?" exclaimed

"Rex. And he's got a box for 'The Loves of Henrietta' tomorrow, and he's asked mother and me to go." "I'm so glad," said Georgie, but with singular want of enthusiasm. And Madge stole a furtive look at her, and the corners of her mouth

A month had passed. Once more Georgie stood at the same window, softly humming. She was waiting for Rex, and her face was very pale. It was the same face still, but there was a difference, the difference which marks every girl's face when she be-

She had thought love not worth the sacrifice of art, and if art without love had turned to dust and ashes in her hand who was to blame but herself? She was waiting for Rex-Rex, who had fallen such a helpless victim to Madge that he had had scarcely a look or a word to spare for her the whole month. It was this that had first taught her what she had lost and that had afterward nerved her to play her part-for a week's experience had taught her that it was only a part-of careless indifference and entire absorption in her art. When it seemed too hard for her, she reminded herself sternly of her own words, 'I am satisfied with my life as

"They shall never see I am not satis fled," she said and struggled on. Today there was a set, stern look on her face, for this was to be the supreme ordeal, and at present there was no one to see her. But as she leaned her head listlessly against the window there came from the hall the sound of a familiar whistle, and instantly her expression changed. A smiling, expectant face greeted Rex as he entered, and she scrutinized him with playful

You had better go." And she turned majestically away.

"I will. Only you must first allow me to make one remark. You did not ask what Madge said to me." He paused impressively. "She has refused me." It was his trump card, and he was growing desperate. He took advantage of Georgie's back being still turned toward him, and, creeping softly behind her, took one glance at her face before she knew he had moved. It was enough.

"Georgie," he cried, "hasn't the play gone far enough? I am tired of acting, and I want you, Georgie-I can't tell you how much I want you!" There was passionate entreaty in his voice. "What did you mean," she asked slowly, "by saying you were tired of acting?' I don't understand." "No; I know," he answered guiltily "I've got to tell you. Madge and I have been playing at being lovers during the last month. TERRIBLE STORM IN OKLAHOMA.

Wind, Rain and Hail Swept Over the Territory Last Friday With Destructive Force.

MANY PERSONS WERE KILLED

The Town of Eddy Blown Away-At Tonkawa Two Churches and Thirty Residences Demolished-Kingfisher City Swept by Cloud Burst.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PERRY, O. T., June 8 -The storm which passed over Eastern Oklahoma last night was the most severe since the opening of the strip. A feature of the storm was the extent of the territory covered. Sweeping down trom the Kansas State line and cove ering about fifty miles in width, the rain, wind and hail swept over the country as far south as Oklahoma. The rain fell in torrents from early in the evening until midnight. The fury of the storm centered in a cyclone at about 6.30 P. M., which formed at a point near the Kansas State line and just on the county lines of Grant, Kay and Oklahoma. The twister took a southeasterly course and was disastrous in an area of ten miles square in eastern Kay county. The little town of Eddy was struck and of the twelve or fourteen buildings in the place, all were levelled to the ground, except the railroad station and an elevator. The people of the town sought places of safety. One unknown man was killed and several persons were slightly injured by flying debris.

The track of the cyclone between this point and Tonkawa, a distance of about eight miles, was laid waste. Five farm houses with barns and outbuildings were blown away, but all the oc cupants escaped without injury. Fine fields of wheat in the midst of harvest were laid waste. The tail end of the cyclone fell with terrible force upon Tonkawa. Thirty dwellings and bus iness houses were scattered like loose timber. The citizens of the town had been watching the advance of the storm and had sought shelter in caves and cellars. No fatalities are reported at this point, and only a few persons received scratches, which is almost miraculous, considering the devasta-

ENID, O. K., June .8-The worst storm in years swept over the territory last night. It was particularly severe in Noble and Kay counties. The gale commenced at 10 p. m., and by 1 a. m. was blowing at tornado speed, carrying everything before it. At Billings, Noble county, much damage was done. Seven people were killed and many severely injured. A cloud burst occurred near Hennessey. Kingfisher county, and Kingfisher city suffered severely.

TONKAWA, O. T., June 8. - A terri ble wind and rain storm struck this place at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon and lasted two hours, causing much damage. Two big church buildings and about thirty residences were damaged. Twelve houses were torn down and blown away. The Salt Fork river is full of wreckage of houses and furnishings. Barns were torn away, but | buggies and horses that were in them left standing unmoved. The people sought shelter in caves, and in this way many were saved from personal ry Telegraph to the Morning Star. WASHINGTON, June 8 .- The United States government has again appealed to the Powers to submit the present issues at Pekin over the indemnity propositions to the arbitration of The Hague tribunal. Mr. Rockhill, who has been watching for an opportunity, cabled Secretary Hay last night for permission to make a proposition and the Secretary this morning cabled him authority to do so. It is believed that the ministers at Pekin have become involved beyond extrication in the present issues, and this proposition may be the only way out.

HUNTING THE CHINCHILLA.

South American Indians Use Dynamite to Secure Perfect Skins, Killing chinchilla with the aid of dynamite is one of the lucrative pastimes of the South American Indians which enrich the commerce of the world very con-

High in the mountains the nimble footed chinchilla are caught and killed by half savage Indians. Tact and skill are needed to lure the cautious little animal from its hole in the earth. Originally the Indians used to use cactus prongs, which are long and sharp, to capture them in their holes by impaling them on the end of this natural spear. This punctured the skin and impaired its value. The trappers tried to smoke the chinchilla out by making great fires near the entrance of the burrows, but the smoke, it was found, caused the skin to turn yellow, which seriously depreciated its value. Now the more progressive Indians

After locating the chinchilla they form which is placed around the hill on the side of which the animal digs its holes. A dynamite cartridge with a time fuse attached is then discharged in the center of the net, which frightens the chinchilla so that they leave their holes and scamper wildly to and fro about the space inside the net. The Indians then dash into the brena with clubs and kill them by striking them over the head. This is considered the easiest and best method of killing them, as it does not in any way damage the skins, which vary in value from $3 to $15 each. When it is considered that as many as 100 animals are killed in one sortie of this character, the value of the skins to the Indians, who are shrewd commercial traders, may be imagined. Some of the tribe own ferrets, which they use to good advantage. They pay as much as $5 for one. The ferrets are taken to the mountain tops and sent through the furrows, chasing the chinchilla out into the open, where they are clubbed to death with celerity by the waiting Indians. The skins are removed immediately and placed on shrubs to dry. The evening meal of the trappers often consists of the bodies of the slain rodents, the meat of which is white and tender. The hearts of the latter are given to the ferrets. A great part of the trapping is done at night, the chinchilla seldom being visible in the daytime. The nights are cool and clear, and, there being but little vege tation at the height where the chinchilla are caught, the mountains are for a long period each month illuminated by the rays of the moon, enabling the Indians to move about with great agility for their prey. The chinchilla lives principally on herbs and often when it comes out to feed is trapped by the Indians. Four times a year the tribes descend into the semicivilized villages at the base of the mountains with their skins. There they are met by the various agents of the European fur houses. One American house has its representative there too. The occasion of the Indians' arrival is usually made a religious festival.-Chi cago Times-Herald.
