SECTIONALISM DEPRECATED.

In his speech at Brockton, Mass. a few days ago, Secretary Moody referred to the demands for free raw materials by the manufacturers of New England, and while he thought some raw materials should be free it was not practicable to put them on the free list without at the the same time reducing the tariff on articles made out of these materials. and hence putting raw materials on the free list would result in a wide change in the tariff system.

In addition to this, he said the demand for free raw materials is sectional and as such he deprecated it, holding that all tariff legislation should be national in its scope. But the protective system as it has been constructed and carried out by the Republican party is essentially sectional. There is nothing national about it. Southern industries have always been practically ignored and received protection only when that protection was incidental to the protection given to Northern in-

One section in the North demndss protection in some industry in which it is interested and its representatives threaten to oppose the bill if the demands of their constituents are not granted, and then another section does likewise, and so each section puts in its claims. But it goes further than that; the manufacturer or producer of some commodity wants protection on that, although there may be very few in his section engaged in the industry. He gets it, and so do others, and thus the tariff makers pander not only to sections to placate them, but to individuals to placate them and the tariff becomes both a sectional and a class system, which entirely ignores the interests and the welfare of the masses of the people who are taxed, and heavily taxed, for the benefit of the few.

A SPLENDID CAMPAIGN.

The campaign just closed in this State has been a remarkable one for its thoroughness, the vim with which it was conducted, the number of speakers in the field and the ability shown by many of them. In this respect the advantage was, of course, on the side of the Democrats who have many able and eloquent speakers, while Republican orators of the higher order are comparatively few. There are probably not more than a half dozen men in the party, if so many, who could size up to the standard of a firstclass public speaker. Senator Pritchard, while he did the best he could, (and it is said he has improved as a speaker,) is far from being a captivating or persuasive orator, but he was fortunate, perhaps, in arrangeing that "joint canvass" with Mr. Craig, for that gave him audiences that he would never had if he had canvassed alone. As a rule the Republican candidates and their "independent" allies either declined invitations to joint discussions or imposed conditions that their opponents declined to accede to, and hence we had few joint discussions, but this did not lessen the interest taken in the campaign either by the people or the speakers, for where Democrats spoke after the campaign had fairly opened they had large and enthusiastic audiences, in striking contrast to the comparatively empty benches to which the average Republican or "independent" talked -a significant sign of how the people of North Carolina stand in this contest. Much of the credit for this splendid campaign is doubtless due to the able management of Chairman Simmons who not only put the best, the brightest and most gifted of Democracy's champions in the field, but entered it himself and from beginning to end did brilliant, power ful and effective speaking. But he was only one of many of whom the same may be said who gave their time and services freely and labored zealously and devotedly for the triumph of the party and principles on whose success the prosperity and happiness of the people of North Carolina depend.

An Old Veteran Picked Up on Nutt Street Unconscious-Leg Badly Crushed-Fights in Wharf Dance Hall-Now at the Hospital.

One had only to look over the police blotter at the station house last night to be convinced that there is Carnival in the air.

Aside from the usual dozen or more 'drunks and downs," at 10:30 o'clock the officers were called upon to investigate two disturbances that came in quick succession from a dance hall in the rear of Stern's saloon on Water street.

Oscar Headstrel, a sailor on the schooner Merom, now in port, was badly stabbed on the arm by a colored woman of whom he could give no intelligible account. No sooner had he been dispatched to the hospital to be sewed up, than there came another call from the same vicinity and James Sanders was hauled up in the patrol wagon with two ugly gashes in his head, inflicted with an iron door bar in the hands of a negro of whom he knew nothing more than that his name was "Joe," He, too, was sent to the hospital and his wounds, two or three inches in length, were stitched up.

Gallant Confederate Came to Renew His Priendship With Pormer Comrades,

Capt. Z. H. Lowdermilk, a gallant Confederate soldier, formerly of Randolph county, N. C., now of Joplin Mo., has been spending a few days in Wilmington this week on a visit to his old comrades, Capt. James I. Metts, of this city, and Dr. E. Porter, of Ro ky Point. Capt. Lowdermilk was formerly second lieutenant and afterwards captain of Co. H., Third North Carolina Infantry, and was, therefore, intimately associated with many of the brave sons of New Hanover in the Civil War. He came her especially to renew his friendship with them and shake hands with them once more. Capt. Lowdermilk was wounded first at Sharpsburg in the head and later at Chancellorsville while in command of his company. His last wound was a ball through the body from one side to the other and its a miracle that he was not killed. He is still true to the cause and wears every day the regulation gray.

Capt Lowdermilk spent one day with Dr. Porter, at Rocky Point; then, accompanied to Wilmington by Dr. Porter, he was the guest for a day of Capt. Metts, who entertained his comrades with a trip to the sound and to the beach. Capt. Lowdermilk is now near Washington, N. O, visiting others of his old comrades at Pantego.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star. NEW YORK, Nov. 1 .- The cross-examination of Roland B. Mr. Osborne's first question to-day was, "Did not Mr. Barnett pay your wife attention?" "Not at all," was the re-

"Did you not so testify at the inquest?" Molineux's reply to this was that Barnett had paid attention to Miss Cheseborough in the spring and au-tumn of 1898 before she became Mrs. Molineux.

The defendant was in the best of humor. When Mr. Osborne asked him if he gave his wife an engagement ring at the time of his engage ment and his answer was not to th prosecutor's satisfaction, he smilingly: "I can tell you better than you can drag it out of me.

"I don't wish to drag it out of you, said Mr. Osborne. Molineux then said he bought an engagement ring on November 18th. Yesterday he testified that he and Miss Cheseborough became engaged in September, 1898. At Christmas, 1897, he gave her "Mizpah" ring, and when he became engaged in September 1898, he wished to buy her an engagement ring but did not do so until November. A letter to Miss Saddie Sheffler, in which Molineux spoke of his engagement and forthcoming marriage as a "romance," and said also that it was sudden, was then identified and ad-Mr. Osborne ceased his examination

He said he had studied handwriting more than thirty years and had testified in many important cases, among others the Riegand-Becker forgery the Sharon will case, the Sarah Alhea Hill controversy in California and the Thrice will case in New York. He declared that the conceder and disputed writings were not written by the same hand. Mr. Gumpel said it was his belief that the address on the poison package was in the natural hand of the writer and that its cramped appearance was due to its having been written after the package was made up. On cross-examination Mr. Gumps said he would expect the sender of poison package to disguise his handwriting. He knew of no case in which a person had sent poison to any one with trying to conceal his identity. Mr. Osborne got the witness t say that the "U" and "C" in "Olub, written by Molineux, had many char acteristics in common with the ad dress on the poison package wrapper. He found also shading in the top of the letter "C" in Cornish on the wrapper and like shadings in the "O" of the word "Club" in various of the conceded wrifings.

Dr. David Ewell, a handwriting expert, was the next witness. He said he had made careful studies of the disputed and conceded writings and was convinced they had not been done by the same hand Dr. Ewell was still on the stand hairman Griggs of the Democratic Congressional Committee Predicts Majority of Not Less than Twenty.

The next House of Representatives will have a Democratic majority of not less than twenty. How many more than this we shall have can only be determined after the counting of the votes polled on Tuesday next. It depends largely, as every election does, on the weather and other conditions which cannot be forecasted. The Republican leaders have been until recently complaining of apathy. For the last day or two for political purposes they are claiming that they have overcome this to a large extent, and are faint-neartedly predicting success. Reports to us do not indicate that this is true. Republicans everywhere appear listless and even careless of results. We find that our Democratic friends are wide-awake and alert in every district in the United States where there is a fight. "It is well to understand that the last apportionment bill was so drawn as to add nineteen Republicans and ten Democrats to the house-a Republican advantage of nine in addition to their present majority. The Legisla-tures of the Republican States, where possible to do so, have outrageously gerrymandered congressional districts and many Republican districts by what they consider safe majorities. This is notably the case in Illinois and New York; but these States have had a habit of playing havoc with political gerrymanders in the past, and we believe that this is a year in which there will be a repetition of this. We are not depending on this, however, for our majority named above. Even if these States go as Company, $50,000; Louisiana National Bank, $15,000; Commercial National Bank, $4,500.

The Ondendahl Commission Company has done an enormous grain ex-geen in the habit of borrowing large sums from ten days to a month on un-indorsed notes secured bybills of laden warehouse receipts and blanket insur-ance policies. It is alleged that advantage has been taken of the high credit of the firm to borrow immense sums from banks on forged bills of lading and warehouse receipts, and

INNES AND HIS BAND COMING.

Concert in the Academy of Music Next Saturday Evening—His Talents.

Innes and his band will appear for one concert at the Academy next Saturday night. Apart from his musical talents, Innes is an interesting man. He is a good writer and something of an original philosopher. In a recent article he said he thought very few people understood the mission of music in the world. He said he had talked with few people who had learned that music described the whole field of human action, energy and ambition just as truly as current literature. That the one whose imagination is most stirred by music is the one who understands music best. He asserts that to an ear attuned there is a story of love, peace or war, wind or wave, in every piece of good music. The one who can read it he holds to be the best critic, even though he may not know one note from another. All the great music writers, he believed, would have been great authors if their thoughts had turned to literature in-

Accompanying the band are Frances Boyden, soprano; Bohumir Kyrl, the Bohemian cornetist, and Filippi Seyasts, the Italian harp virtuoso.
