peating the canopy wound around with flags. On the arch over the President were the words, Atlanta, Lookout Mountain, Savannah, Charleston, Shiloh, Nashville, Chattanooga and other names of battle-fields won by the Armies of the Tennessee and Georgia.

THE ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE.
Following Sherman came Major General Jno. A. Logan, of the Army of the Tennessee, the successor of General Howard who has been appointed Chief of the Freedmen's Bureau.

The right was held by the Fifteenth Corps, whose badge was a diamond with a cartridge box, with the motto "Forty Rounds" inscribed above.

The corps was preceded by its Engineer Brigade, composed of white and colored troops, armed with axes, picks and spades, and the whole body of the command marched splendidly, keeping a perfect line, and a step like that of one man, to the music of its bands.

Major General F. P. Blair, a brother of Hon. Montgomery Blair, and late a member of Congress from Missouri, followed with the famed Seventeenth Corps, who were designated by an arrow. As with the Fifteenth Corps, it was also preceded by an Engineer Corps of white and colored troops, and a regiment of mounted infantry. There is only one Eastern regiment in this corps, the 35th New York. The bullet-torn flags of the command bore evidence of the labor it had performed.

ARMY OF GEORGIA.
Major General Henry W. Slocum, who had made himself famous during his connection with the old Army of the Potomac by his gallantry on many fields, followed the "Army of the Tennessee" with the "Army of Georgia." He was borne down by the numerous bouquets and wreaths of flowers which had been awarded him by his admirers throughout the route. General Geary, commanding the Second Division, who is well known here and in the western portion of the State, was recognized by several of our citizens and frequently cheered. First in order came the Twentieth Army Corps, Major General J. A. Mover commanding.

Here Pennsylvania, Connecticut and New York greeted brethren from Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa, all marching shoulder to shoulder to the music of that Union they have shed their blood to cement in closer bonds than ever. The appearance was magnificent. Following came the fourteenth army corps, commanded by Brevet Major General Jeff. C. Davis. The remarkable time made by a portion of this corps on their homeward march to Richmond received the commendation of the Lieutenant General. Well do they deserve praise, for no finer body of men ever trod the earth, and their splendid condition yesterday showed the high state of discipline to which their officers have brought them.

A long line of wagons followed, and the review was ended.

After repeated cheers for the President and our military commanders, the multitude dispersed, and the President and other distinguished gentlemen retired to their homes.

"MULE TRAIN."
Between the Second and Third Divisions of the Twentieth Corps was a large number of pack horses and mules, led by colored soldiers, servants, etc. At other points of the line a similar feature presented itself, but in this particular instance two diminutive white donkeys, mounted by small darkeys, attracted the attention of all the multitude on the route of the procession. The grotesqueness of their costume and the small size of the animals excited the laughter of thousands. The boys were barefooted, and wore extraordinarily high slouched hats, with jackets and pantaloons, which like their hats, were dilapidated, and rather the worse for wear. They headed the procession of mules, several of which were mounted by novel riders, such as goats, coons, squirrels and chickens. Several cows were also in the line. The whole was probably captured by Sherman's "Bummers" on some of their raids on the property of the citizen-guerillas of the Carolinas and Georgia.

EFFECT OF THE REVIEW.
The proceedings of the past two days will, no doubt, have a beneficial effect upon the minds of the representatives of the foreign Governments who witnessed it. They have been enabled to gather an idea of the strength of what has been styled the "Washington Government," the "Northern Government," etc., and no doubt their despatches to their respective Governments will inform them that after four years of civil war, the Republic still lives. It will do more good, than almost any amount of correspondence from our State Department. The glittering bayonets that have dazzled their eyes will have the effect of showing them that "neutrality" of the one-sided character that harbors pirates and prevents their hunting down, that allows the concealing of plots to burn peaceful towns and rob unoffending citizens, that winks at the harboring of assassins and legalize blockade running, and other "neutral" doings of that character, are a game that others can play at, and that may need redress when opportunity offers.

SCENES ALONG THE ROUTE.
All along the route of march flowers were bountifully lavished upon the officers and men. At General Augur's headquarters Secretary Seward and a number of ladies presented bouquets to General Sherman and other officers, and at Willard's Hotel some friends of General Blair presented him with a splendid banner. Mrs. Sherman, who stood beside her husband throughout the review, had a bouquet or wreath for the color-bearer of every regiment. Friends and relatives who had journeyed many miles to greet a long absent son, husband, brother or friend seized them by the hand, and expressed their joy at their safe return.

THE ENTHUSIASM OF THE PEOPLE.
Frequently when a temporary break in the procession would occur, between the passage of the different brigades and divisions, crowds of citizens, including numbers of ladies, would rapidly fill the spaces in front of the reviewing dent Johnson," "Grant," "Sherman," "Stanton," "Howard," and other favorites. The enthusiasm of the citizens and the soldiers was unbounded, and many will go away with sore throats, caused by their vociferous cheering for their favorites.

LEAVING WASHINGTON.
The immense throng at the Capitol, or the greater portion of it, as soon as the review was over, started for the railroad depot. All seemed to think they should be accommodated on one train, and crowded the cars inside and out. The General and energetic Chief of transportation Department of the road, Wm. Prescott Smith, Esq., however, brought order out of chaos, and with his corps of assistants personally superintended the despatching of the trains. Notwithstanding the immense number of passengers carried over the Washington Branch during the past week, I have not heard of any accident, except one that occurred last night, caused by a returning soldier unfortunately jumping from a train while in motion near the Annapolis Junction. I did not ascertain the extent of his injuries or his name, but understood he was removed to the hospital at that point. MAC.

The Yellow Fever Plot.
We referred several days ago to the atrocious plot to introduce the yellow fever into the cities of the North. We learn from the New York Tribune that

The evidence shows clearly enough the main features of the plot, though the main actor in it, Dr. Blackburn, has escaped into "neutral" territory. During the recent yellow fever epidemic in Bermuda, this Dr. Blackburn took passage for that island. He was a Southerner, formerly resident in Natchez, Mississippi. After his arrival he attended several yellow fever patients at the Hamilton Hotel and at a Mrs. Slater's. Some of them died under his care. He collected their bed-clothing—including a large quantity of woollen clothing which, in one case, at least, he had ordered to be piled upon the patients, in order to receive the infection—packed it in trunks, and sent it to the house of Edward C. Swan, to be kept by him till an opportunity offered to send it North. Blackburn himself then left for Halifax.

It became known to the authorities of Hamilton that this infected clothing was in possession of Swan, and they caused his arrest. On the preliminary examination, the above facts appeared. It was shown also that the Health Officer found these trunks in Swan's possession, crammed full of clothes that had manifestly been used by yellow fever patients. Swan himself testified that Blackburn had delivered these trunks to him. Another witness swore that Swan had told him he received the trunks to be sent North, in order to communicate the yellow fever. Still another witness swore that Blackburn had told him he had delivered the trunks to Swan for that purpose, and the wages for the service were variously stated at $500 in the whole, and at $150 a month while Swan was engaged in the business. And Blackburn told Swan to call on the officers of the Confederate Government for money. One of the trunks was marked "St. Louis Hotel, Upper town, Quebec," and again "Clifton House, Niagara Falls, Canada side." The magistrates of Bermuda held Swan for trial.

TORONTO, C. W., May 25, 1865.
In the case of Blackburn, of yellow fever notoriety, the magistrate to-day said that, owing to the uncertainty of the English law in such cases of conspiracy, he should not assume the responsibility of deciding the case, but would send the prisoner before the Judges at the next Assizes. Bail was accepted in the meantime to the amount of eight thousand dollars.

Reconstruction of North Carolina.
W. W. Holden, editor of the Raleigh, N. C., Standard, with a delegation of Unionists of that State, have arrived here upon the invitation of the President, to consult in reference to the reconstruction of the State Government. They had an interview with the President to-day. Another delegation, headed by E. F. Moore, ex-Senator Bedford Brown and ex-Governor Swain, representing the anti-radical element, are also expected. As yet no definite policy in regard to the reconstruction of the Old North State has been determined upon, but it is probable the plan of reconstruction applied to North Carolina will indicate the policy to be adopted by the government in regard to all the insurrectionary States.—Washington correspondence, New York Herald, May 25th.
