Fire Insurance.

E refer our readers to the annual statement o the Eins Insurance Company, of Hartford, which will be found in another column. This successful institution was incorporated by the Legislature of Connecticut in 1819, with a perpetual charter. Its capital is $500,000, and its accumulations exceed $800,000 more, making its entire assets over $1,800. 000, invested as detailed in the statement referred to. These results indicate that during the period of near ly forty years since its organization, (without a single change of its chief officer,) its business has been conigation, not with standing the immense number of transactions made. In order to attain as much certainty as possible in such a business as insurance, it has been the amount insured on each class, the amount of premiums received thereon, and the amount of losses upon each. This classification, extending over a long period, and covering property to a very large amount, furnishes reliable data, and pre-sents a sound, substantial basis of actual experience, upon which to conduct its business. Insurance is not a matter of luck or chance, as many suppose; its hazards are ascertainable, and its principles are capable of being reduced to a system, the practical working and results of which are as certain as that of any other On motion of James F. Marsh,
Resolved. That from and after the 1st day of January, 1856, Cash will be required upon the delivery ary, 1856, Cash will be required upon the delivery to an extent surpassed by no other Company in the U. States, and has increased its business and its income from year to year with a steady growth. One great source of its security is the wide distribution of its risks—a policy which it pursues with great strictness—limiting the amount to be covered in each locality.
By this course it has passed, with comparative impunity, through some of the most sweeping and destructess cautious in their business. It is a system like this, based upon experience, which gives stability and Churchill soundness to a company, and to the assured confidence and security .- Baltimore Patriot.
