These results indicate that during the period of nearly forty years since its organization, (without a single change of its chief officer,) its business has been conducted with judgment and prudence. It has been thus far successful in an eminent degree, discharging, as we are informed, all its obligations by the payment ay's delay in any instance. It has had but little litention, notwithstanding the immense number of transossible in such a business as insurance, it has been risks into about fifty distinct classes, so as to ascertain the amount insured on each class, the amount of premiums received thereon, and the amount of losses up ishes reliable data, and presents a sound, substantial basis of actual experience, upon which to conduct its usiness. Insurance is not a matter of luck or chance, as many suppose; its hazards are ascertainable, and its principles capable of being reduced to a system, the practical working and results of which are as certain as that of any other business. The Etna Company, y adhering rigidly to its system, and placing its busi ness upon a healthy basis, has obtained the confidence the community to an extent surpassed by no other Company in the U. States, and has increased its busitess and its income from year to year with a steady growth. One great source of its security is the wide distribution of its risks—a policy which it pursues with great strictness—limiting the amount to be cov-red in each locality. By this course it has passed with comparative impunity, through some of the most sweeping and destructive fires, which have swallowed up ther companies less cautious in their business. It is
