THE NEW YORK HERALD. The New York Herald is mischievous in proportion to its immense circulation. From Boston to New Orleans, from Charleston to San Francisco, it is scattered broadcast all over the land, poisoning the very air. There is nothing about the paper to justify its apparent popularity When we read its leaders, we are at a loss to de cide whether to be most astounded at its pretension and effrontery, or to be most disgusted with ment, no attempt at dignity, no evidence of thought or research,—but a general "sloshing around" after the fashion of Saltonstall. It publishes the foolish and wicked tirades of such men as Garrison and Wendell Phillips, even when their deliverances are too disgusting for the Tribune-thus flinging firebrands all over the South, and carrying the impression that these miserable mountebanks are representative men of the North. In turn it reproduces the hot-headed nonsense of some pitiful country editor in Louisiana or Arkansas, whose sectional wrath explodes only once a week, to the admiration of a hundred and fifty subscribers; thus giving notofine crops. There is a very pretty building spot on this riety and importance to traitorous exhalations that would otherwise be confined to their native swamps. If a mad assemblage of black men and

Instead of doing all that is possible to rebuke the sectional feeling that disgraces the country, it is fostered and exasperated by the conductors of this bad paper. No doubt the Herald finds it profitable to do this dirty work, because men seek with avidity after a peppery sheet that does not hesitate to say anything to keep up its unenviable notoriety. In all its career, it is not able to point to one good deed-to one earnest effort in the cause of its

He now dresses not only handsomely but richly, and follows every whim of fashion; he now wears a splendid gold watch, by which he ostentatiously declares the hour: he boards at a first-class hotel, and can show a well-filled pocket-book when occasion requires. He now makes costly presents to the lady with whom we sometimes see him taking a drive behind a fast team, and thinks nothing of inviting a score of friends up to the fashionable bar to "take something." The expenditure necessarily involved in such a manner of living cannot be less than $1000. Is this the average salary of salesmen? If so, employers are much more liberal than we We once heard a story of a fellow who applied for a situation in a store.
