There is at the end of the elephant's tusks, which are of large size, an iron rod that time your pronunciation was very good, and in binding one tusk to the other. Our hero seized your practice of teaching the French, the English lan-hold of this, and began to lean his whole weight upon it. The elephant, not altogether liking this sort of treatment, determined, for his part, to punish his audacious antagonist. Wrestling with an Elephant .- A rather curious

Russian Babies .- It is said that the Russian babies look like so many idols with their heads carved out, and the rest of the body left in a block This appearance is caused by their being rolled up in tight bandages, leaving only the head out, that they may be put away out of mischief and danger. On going into a Russian house, you may find one little fellow left on a shelf, another hung to the wall on a peg, and a third hung over one of the main beams of the roof, and rocked by the mother, who has the cord looped over her feet. "Why that is a child!" you exclaim, looking close to be sure you are not mistaken. "Of course-what should it be?" answers the mother. Yes, sure enough, it is a child, but so dirty you cannot help asking-"When was it washed?" "Washed! What? wash a child? you would kill it!"

Cotton Latitudes .- The production and growth of cotton is a monopoly of climate-it cannot be successfully cultivated except between the latitudes of thirty and thirty-five degrees, extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific-a region of earth's surface two hundred and forty miles in breadth, and two thousand in length. Much of this region is incapable, from sterility and other causes, to profitably cultivate this staple. It follows as a necessary consequence, that as the amount of cotton lands diminish, the remainder are rendered more valuable.
